MONTANA

PLOT OF ST. CLAIR

Had It Carried Murderers Under Sentence of Death Would Have Executed.

He Was a Chemist and Furnished Means for Dissolving and Cutting the Bars.

Special to The Journal. Butte, Mont., Feb. 11.—At the trial of William St. Clair, who is charged with assisting in the attempted escape of Charles Lennox and James Martin, both under sentence of death for the murder of Fireman Williams at Silver Bow Junction last year, and W. C. Cusick, another murderer, awaiting trial, M. N. Hadel, a prisoner on the witness stand, told a sensational tale of an alleged plot.

St. Clair was formerly an inmate of the county jail on a charge of burglary and at that time formed the acquaintance of the prisoners. He was later acquitted for lack of evidence.

St. Clair was an assayer and chemist and to this fact is attributed the success of Lennox in dissolving and sawing his way through the bars of his cell.
