The Bookkeeper Put Them to Rout After Stopping a Sand-bag.

'Twas brave and noble of Robinson W. Nesbitt to thwart the robbers that intended to despoil, last Wednesday night, the wholesale depot of the Crescent Creamery company, 620 Hennepin avenue.

About 9 o'clock Wednesday night Mr. Nesbitt, adding 4 to 7 with a red-ink pen upon the company's books, heard noises within the backroom where bottled milk is stored. Being alone, he sheathed his pen and drew his revolver.

But the robbers in Mr. Nesbitt's rear window, he opened the back door of the office, rushed out through the pitch-dark store room, received a blow in the face from a muddy sandbag, fired one shot at the blackness, heard the crash of falling bottles, and chased a fleeing figure into the alley.
