

LATEST NEWS FROM THE WORLD OF SPORTS

LIPTON TO BE READY

Says Shamrock III. Will Be on This Side for the Races

This Fall.

Has Already Ordered New Sails—Sorrow Over the Loss of Collier.

The accident to Shamrock III. near Weymouth, England, will not interfere with the boat's presence in time for the races on this side this fall.

New Sails Ordered. Sir Thomas said he had already wired orders for new sails to be made now under way.

Flaw in the Steel. The catastrophe was so sudden that it was over before those aboard realized that there was the slightest danger.

Fishing for Trout. Sportsmen from Other States Fishing Wisconsin Streams.

Aberdeen, S. D., Racing. Aberdeen, S. D., April 18.—The summer meeting of the Aberdeen racing association will be held July 18-20, and there is promise of a big meeting.

Jockey Makes Charges. Memphis, Tenn., April 18.—Shortly after the second race was decided here to-day, jockey John J. Lippert, charged several other jockeys and preferred sensational charges against them.

Miscellaneous Sports. Hiram Scoggins, of Louisville, Ky., has purchased from Fred Foster the celebrated stallion, Dr. Rice.

Billiards. H. G. Schoonmaker, winner of last winter's billiard tournament at the Commercial Club, last night defeated Samuel Johnson, 200 to 101.

Cycling. The motor cyclists of Minneapolis will meet at Fourth street and First avenue S. Sunday, at 9:30 a. m.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

The Shamrock III. is being rapidly overhauled. The destruction of her standing rigging was almost complete.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

The Shamrock III. is being rapidly overhauled. The destruction of her standing rigging was almost complete.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

The Shamrock III. is being rapidly overhauled. The destruction of her standing rigging was almost complete.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

The Shamrock III. is being rapidly overhauled. The destruction of her standing rigging was almost complete.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

The Shamrock III. is being rapidly overhauled. The destruction of her standing rigging was almost complete.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

The Shamrock III. is being rapidly overhauled. The destruction of her standing rigging was almost complete.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

The Shamrock III. is being rapidly overhauled. The destruction of her standing rigging was almost complete.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

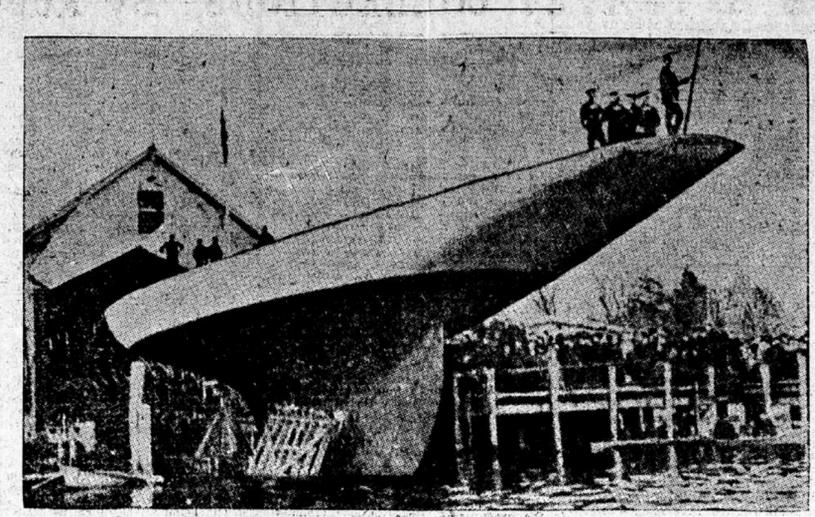

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

The Shamrock III. is being rapidly overhauled. The destruction of her standing rigging was almost complete.

Work on Reliance. Topmast Set Up—From Deck to Top is 159 Feet.

Regret on This Side. John B. Herreshoff Discusses Accident to Shamrock III.

CUP DEFENDER, RELIANCE, AS SHE IS LEAVING THE WAYS

Photograph Taken at the Moment She Entered the Water, Showing the Beautiful and Trim Design of the New Yacht Which is to Defend the America's Trophy Against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock III.

PUSHED THE MILLERS

Leavenworth Team Forced a Ten-Inning Game on the Flour City Baseballists.

The Score Was Four to Two—New Kansas City Man Tried at Third.

The Leavenworth, Kan., baseball players made the Minneapolis players work for honors yesterday, and gave the crowd an extra inning for their money.

Wilmot tried out Lee George of the Kansas City Athletic club. He played third and accepted six chances thereon.

The game scheduled with Kansas City is off, and there was a possibility yesterday that to-day would be a day of rest for the millers.

Score at Columbus. Boston Americans 2, 5, 0; Columbus American Association 1, 2, 1. Columbus yesterday.

Prizes for Bowlers. Committee Announces Lists for the State Tournament of Next Week.

National League. Standing of the Clubs.

Table showing standing of National League clubs with columns for team, wins, losses, and percentage.

Games to-day. Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, Boston at Philadelphia, Chicago at St. Louis, Brooklyn at New York.

The Games. Pittsburgh administered another defeat to Cincinnati in Cincinnati yesterday.

The individual averages of the members of the Greater Minneapolis Bowling League up to Thursday evening follow:

Table listing bowling averages for various players, including names like Anderson, W. C., Daulton, and others, with columns for name, average, and other statistics.

GAVE BIG HANDICAP

But the Canoe Won the Race From the Row Boat and Bicycle.

Paretic No. 11 Relates an Incident of His Days at College.

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

GRAND AMERICAN SHOOT

Missouri Man Gets the Consolation Handicap—He Scored 95 Out of 100.

D. A. Quick of Eldorado Springs, Mo., yesterday, at Kansas City, won the consolation handicap at 100 targets, the last event on the program of the fourth grand American handicap tournament at targets, by breaking 95, the highest score made in the tournament in the 100-target contest.

The winner of the grand American had one yard added to their handicaps in the consolation handicap and the losers had one yard taken off. A. Connor of Pekin, Ill., 18 yards, and H. Pearce, Chicago, Kan., 17 yards, each scored 93 and divided second and third money.

The remodeling of Northrop field will be begun at once. The passage of the omnibus bill contain the appropriation on which the improvements depended, permits the rushing of the work.

NORTHROP FIELD CHANGES

Appropriation in Omnibus Bill Will Admit of Their Being Made at Once.

The remodeling of Northrop field will be begun at once. The passage of the omnibus bill contain the appropriation on which the improvements depended, permits the rushing of the work.

The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

SPANISH GAME OF PELOTA

Lovers of Athletic Sports May Discover Interesting Possibilities in the Pastime.

"Pelota is to Spain and Latin-American countries what cricket is to the English or baseball to the Yankee."

"The space devoted to the game is a rectangle about 240 feet in length by 33 feet wide, with a floor covered with the or good hard cement, which is called the 'cancha.'"

"At one end of this rectangle is a wall of brick or stone covered with iron cement bands, one placed one metre (39 inches) above the floor, and the other twelve metres (39 feet). The ball used in playing must be made of these two bands of the 'serve' is lost."

"From the left-hand corner of the front, and along the longer side of the rectangle, is another wall containing the same manner. This wall is called the 'pared,' and it has only a single metal band, the same height as the upper band and above this band lies the 'serva.'"

"On this wall are marked, starting from the front, vertical line three or four metres apart. The spaces between these lines are called 'cuadrados' (squares), and their number varies from fifteen to eighteen. These lines are about as high as a man, and at their upper extremity is placed a number corresponding to the square, with the exception of the seventh, which bears the letters 'VIA,' which mean return. The ball which passes this line, or does not reach the fourth, is lost."

"The bat with which this wonderful game is played is called the cesta. This is fastened to the hand by means of a glove attached thereto, and is of wicker-work. Its shape is approximately that of an arc of a circle, with a rather large radius. It is fastened to the wrist with thongs, in order to prevent wobbling, and is held by the thumb and fingers, and not by the back. The shot with which the pelota players handle the apparently clumsy cesta is almost inconceivable."

Try Blood Wine, Free. A sample bottle given away. Call at Voegel's.

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forbids one member boasting about his birth or bringing up."

"During my second year on the campus," resumed Paretic No. 11, after the fine had been duly inflicted and paid, "for I spent more time on the campus than I did in the classroom, a girl by the name of Kittle Clark was attaching to her girlish the seals of about all the eligible males in the place."

"Rivers played guard on the football team, and Patterson was captain and quarterback. Lincoln accordingly had a clear field every Saturday afternoon, and used to escort the girl to all the games."

"If I was sitting facing the door, and I saw Barry Lincoln get up softly and tip his hat to a pretty girl standing against the porch, and a minute later Barry swung out into the roadumping himself as if there was a $10,000 purse at the end of the track."

"The rest of us tumbled at once that Lincoln had figured on getting over to the bathhouse, and Pat had the craft out not more than fifteen seconds after Rivers started. It looked like suicide to take such a crank craft out in that weather, but Pat had nerve to burn. The wind was nearly square on his beam, and he could sail faster than Jack could row, but the breeze was so stiff that he had to luff half a dozen times on the mile over, and every time he luffed Rivers got back what he had lost."

"The last quarter mile the wind slackened, and Pat gained fast but he was still a good forty yards behind when Rivers was nearly to the dock. The shore made a sharp bend here, and there was a spit of sand reaching out into the lake a couple of hundred yards from the dock, with a little cove behind it. The cottage was

"The greatest race I ever saw," said Paretic No. 11, at the weekly session of the Paretic club, "was one in which a rowboat gave half a mile handicap to a bicycle, and a canoe won 200 yards to the rowboat."

"I rise to a point of correct," said Paretic No. 10, "and call upon the Head Paretic to fine No. 11 three rounds for violating the bylaw which forb