TOWN TALK

The Northwestern Conservatory of Music will be open all summer.
F. W. Tidball of Indianapolis has bought a third interest in the United States installment Realty company of Minneapolis, and has been elected treasurer to succeed C. C. Evans, who becomes secretary.
Never during the summer months has the county jail been so well filled with steady boarders as at present. There are now thirty-four inmates, ten of whom are United States prisoners, and under the prices for board now in force, Sheriff Dreger estimates that at least $150 is cleared by the jail every month.

The second union meeting of the I. O. G. T. lodges of Minneapolis will be held to-morrow evening at Seven Corners. Various questions will be taken up in the executive and financial reports which will be a public meeting with the public invited. A question box, music and several prominent speakers will be among the attractions. Other meetings of a similar character will be held through the summer.

THREATENS JUDGE'S LIFE

Unknown Woman Causes Sensation at Police Headquarters.
A well-dressed woman, who failed to give her name to the police, caused a sensation at headquarters yesterday afternoon by quietly walking into the chief's office and informing him that she intended to kill William A. Kerr, a former judge of the municipal court. Before she could be detained she rushed from the building and made her way to Judge Kerr's office, only to find that the man she sought was absent from the city and would not return for two weeks. She then disappeared and every effort to find her has come to naught.

A GREAT WINDOW DISPLAY

Paracamp Gives a Beautiful Exhibit at Voegell's.
At Voegell's can be seen a striking and original show window. It was made by Mr. Turner, who represents the Paracamp remedy. The first thing that strikes the observer looking at this window is the posters. On each side is a poster. These posters are life size pictures of hospital nurses represented as hearing first aid to the injured. The interior of the window contains packages of Paracamp daintily arranged and card stands showing a little boy who has evidently been through a hard campaign of injury resulting from too much turkey of July fireworks, and is now rejoicing in his bandaged state to think he can get relief from a package of the great remedy held in his hand. The package certainly looks inviting and as if it would heal. The exhibit shows it off to a better advantage. Paracamp, states, Mr. Voegell is a good seller and a good article.

A BRIDE AND A JOLT

John O. Davis of Minneapolis Received Both at St. Joseph, Mich., To-day.

Jocular Friends Had Extration Papers Served on Him After the Ceremony.

No man could show just cause why John O. Davis, treasurer of the Miller-Davies Printing company of this city, and a certain young lady should not be joined together this afternoon at St. Joseph, Mich. The marriage ceremony was performed at that place, but in the name of the state of Michigan Mr. Davis and his bride were given an uneasy half hour immediately following the wedding.
The minister had hardly concluded the reading of the impressive service which made them man and wife and the proud young couple were about to receive the congratulations of their friends when Mr. Davis found himself in the clutches of the law. A stern-faced sheriff waited upon him and without much ado placed him under arrest. He was handed a formidable document bearing the great seal of the state of Michigan all bound round with the usual amount of red tape, which he discovered, on closer examination, to contain extration papers granted at the instigation of the state authorities. On closer perusal of the document, Mr. Davis was horrified to learn that he was wanted for a long series of high crimes and misdemeanors alleged to have been committed during his career in the trooper's outfit. Stripped of its legal verbiage, the instrument empowered the sheriff to "have the body of the aforesaid John O. Davis," turn it over to the Minnesota authorities, and prevent the prisoner from having further communication with anyone.
All the while the sheriff, a forbidding looking fellow, was eyeing Davis as though he were a pickpocket, and the latter, to prevent the man from Minneapolis commencing to write a glibly long.

ROYAL ARCANUM OUTING

Two Thousand Members of Society Spends Day at Tonka Bay.

About 2,000 Arcanumites assembled at the new Tonka Bay yesterday and proceeded to enjoy the day. The members of the society gave the picnic, and the St. Paul members were there as guests. The plan is to have a picnic at the Minneapolis council as a mark of fraternal good feeling.
The steamer Puritan and Plymouth had been chartered and thru the day and evening parties of Arcanumites made pleasant tours of the lake. Dinner was served to the visitors in the hotel this evening, and at 8 o'clock dancing was commenced. A fine program was provided, and the picnickers returned to the city at 11 o'clock.
This was the twenty-sixth anniversary celebration of the society and the event was intended also to swell the hospital bed of the city. The results of the games and contests were:

ALD. POWERS ACQUITTED

Jury Believed His Defense in Dog Torture Case.
Alderman Fred M. Powers, who was tried yesterday on a charge of cruelty to animals, was found not guilty by the jury. He said that he had tried the dog and that he had struck the animal through deep blows with a hammer, causing a deep indentation in the skull. He then left the dog, believing it to be dead, and that if there was torture inflicted upon the animal, it was not intentional.

CRUEL TO HIS CHILDREN

Charge Against Rev. S. W. Sample Formerly of This City.
Rev. S. W. Sample, formerly pastor of All Souls' Universalist church of this city, is being prosecuted by the Denver Humane society upon a charge of cruelty to children. It is alleged that a agent of the society examined the minister's 6-year-old son and found forty-four distinct bruises upon the child's body. Mr. Sample removed from Minneapolis to Denver about three years ago. Financial losses and other trouble are thought to have unsettled his mind.

FARM SCHOOL SITUATION

University Regents May Be Asked to Reconsider Cases of Two Professors.
No action as to the retention of Professors Taylor and Maudslayi at the state agricultural school was taken yesterday at the meeting of the faculty committee of the university board of regents. Many letters have been received by President Cyrus Northrop asking that the professors be retained that he will probably submit a report of the regents for the express purpose of reconsidering the resolution passed that the resignation of the professors would be accepted. The regents will meet on the 27th and will be regular session of the board until the next college year.

HISTORY IN FRESCO

Gen. James H. Baker Suggests Subject for Mural Painting in New Capitol.

Signing of the Treaty at the Traverse des Sioux July 23, 1851.

General James H. Baker of the state historical society has presented to the state capitol commission a suggestion for the inner walls of the new capitol. The society has agreed that the most notable event in the history of Minnesota should be perpetuated in this way, and there is no division of opinion as to the event. The signing of the treaty of the Traverse des Sioux, July 23, 1851. It was this treaty that secured from the Indians all of Minnesota west of the Mississippi river, as well as parts of Iowa and South Dakota, in all 19,000,000 acres. This was the largest tract acquired from the Indians up to that time, and it made possible the settlement of Minnesota. The treaty was negotiated for the government by Alexander Ramsey, with Luke Lee, commissioner of Indian affairs.

Great Chiefs Were There.

Among the great Sioux chiefs present were Sleepy Eye, Red Iron, Curly Head, Big Sun, Orphan and others. Nearly all these were great Indian orators.

There, also, were such pioneers as Henry Hastings Sibley, Joseph R. Brown, Henry M. Rice, Nathaniel McLean, Tyler, Martin McLeod, John M. Myrick, H. L. Dousman, William G. Le Duc, William H. Forbes, Henry Jackson, Richard Chute, Louis Robert Alexander Faribault, and others, who, as traders interested in the scene, gave importance to the scene. The pioneer editor of Minnesota, James M. Goodhue, and the missionaries, Rev. S. R. Riggs and Rev. T. S. Williams, were present. French and Scotch voyagers were also there. Rarely, if ever, had such an assemblage been present at the signing of an Indian treaty.

AN ARTIST SKETCHED SCENE.

The scene was preserved in sketches by Frank Blackwell, an artist of ability, who had studied in Paris, and being in the west, accompanied the expedition. His sketches are in the possession of the Historical society, and from them the scene could be reproduced in a great painting. General Baker says:

"Much has been said of William Penn's treaty with the Indians in Pennsylvania, June 23, 1683. That treaty has been overrated. It derives its great notoriety from the purely imaginary scene painted by Benjamin West, an artist of rare distinction. Historically, the picture is all wrong. Careful investigation by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania has shown that nothing represented in the picture ever took place under the 'spreading elm.' The treaty, so-called, was never engrossed on parchment, and was a purely verbal transaction, with few or no imposing accessories. The land that he purchased, at three different times, was scarcely equal, in each purchase, to the size of Ramsey county."

"Governor Ramsey's treaty involved nearly an entire empire state. It was formally made, and was most solemnly conducted, with orations and general addresses by the congress on parchment, and was signed by all the signatory parties. Penn's treaty was an informal affair, accompanied by some good quaker talk. So, likewise, Alexander Ramsey is represented as present, as having given the Sioux chiefs several good talks; and there were Indian orators, too, of the Clearwater style. West merely guessed the scene, and his picture is a perpetuation of the scene of a greater treaty, on the walls of the most noble structure yet reared in the west."

"That there are other noble subjects, besides the one presented, is fully admitted. There is the gallant defense of New Ulm in the Sioux massacre of 1862; there is Camp Release, of Sibley's Indian expedition in the same war; the view of Fort Snelling, before the river was torn away by vandals hands; the original Falls of St. Anthony, before trade and commerce had impaired their primitive beauty; and the courtesies of the boatsmen, those pioneers of the commerce of Lake Superior, gliding along the blue bosom of the great lakes in the twilight of our history. Some grand scenes could be gathered during the reign of the remarkable Fur companies. One of the most remarkable was at Grand Portage in 1776, which was the first settlement on the soil of Minnesota, where 1,200 people, and 300 canoes were gathered for the interchange of furs and supplies. Schoolcraft, the noted savant and explorer, discovering the source of the Mississippi, presents an excited subject for the painter. A herd of buffaloes, now almost extinct, but once the lords of our prairies, would recall primitive scenes."

LOW WATER AHEAD

Reservoirs on Upper Mississippi Are Low—Navigation Likely to Be Affected.
So small is the amount of water in the reservoirs about the head of the Mississippi that the river, already low, is likely to become too shallow for steamboat navigation between St. Paul and the mouth of the St. Croix. The government gate at St. Paul now reads 4.3 feet. The Lake Winnebago reservoir is less than half full. The Lake Pokegama, another reservoir, is empty. The government is replacing the former wooden dam at that point with a dam of steel and concrete. The Pine river reservoir has less than half its possible supply of water. The Leech lake reservoir has less than a third of its possible supply. The average water level of the reservoirs is the only one that's full.

GUNNERS' EXAMS

Thirty-eight Candidates Take Tests Under Examining Board at Fort Snelling.
The examining board met yesterday at Fort Snelling to examine candidates for gunners for the tenth battery of field artillery. Thirty-eight candidates took the test, and the average mark was much better than usual. The test covered aiming, setting, cleaning and firing the big field piece. Candidates receiving marks of 85 per cent or better were designated as gunners. Those above 65 per cent will be in the grade of second gunners.

LAND BUYERS GO NORTH

CITY TALK CHARTER

Many Men of Many Minds Appear Before the New Commission.

Wide Divergence of Opinion Apparent in Connection With Separate Elections.

So many and such contradictory views were advanced by various citizens before the charter commission last evening that it is doubtful if the commissioners are any more able to determine what the people want than they were before.
Professor Sven Oftedal, formerly a school director and a library director, argued in favor of getting on a home-rule basis as soon as possible, and thought no other matters should be considered at this time. When asked for his opinion on other questions, he expressed himself in favor of civil service, separate elections and aldermen-at-large.
Jonas Guilford, an old-time lawyer, reviewed the municipal history of Minneapolis with reference to the different charters, and advocated a charter which would recognize individual rights and not give corporate interests an undue advantage.
E. G. Erickson, the single tax advocate, spoke in favor of the initiative and referendum feature of the Duluth charter, which had proved successful in that town. It was an effective check on corrupt councils, he said.
W. L. Harris, spoke thru the medium of a letter, in which he advocated that there be no change in the present charter, as the recent act of the legislature in providing for unlimited indebtedness, was not a desirable plan to adopt.
Most interesting in the evening's proceedings was the subject of separate elections. They were opposed by Charles W. Johnson, Ralph Wheelock and others. Their position was that the people could be trusted to look after their own interests at election time, and separate elections entailed needless expense and too much attention to political questions. On the other hand, Professor W. A. Schaper and E. L. Truax, believed that the students of municipal government believed separate elections brought the best results. N. F. Hawley, a member of the school board and a former charter commission member, said that the larger cities had separate elections, and the tendency of the day was to divorce municipal affairs from politics.
E. Truax and P. G. Sjoblom placed themselves on record as favoring home rule, and Mr. Sjoblom further argued in favor of the benefits of separate elections.

Hoyt, St. Anthony Park; R. H. L. Jewett, Faribault. All the prize strawberries are to be preserved in glass jars and sent to the St. Louis exposition as part of the Minnesota exhibit.
