50 PERCENT DIVIDEND

Co-operation as Practiced by the Farmers Around Milbank Is Found to Pay.

How They Have Added to Their Surplus Besides Keeping Up Wheat Prices.

Special to The Journal. Milbank, S. D., July 4.—Five years ago farmers residing in the vicinity of Milbank organized a co-operative company with shares at $10, and a provision that no person could own more than two shares. They bought out an old-line elevator and improved it. They determined to pay every cent that the market would afford after providing for a safe expense account. There was no idea of buying at a profit that would pay big dividends. The dividends were to be paid to every farmer in advance as soon as he loaded a load of wheat to the elevator.

REVERSE THEMSELVES

Dilemma of Elevator Companies Doing Business at Superior.

SUPERIOR, WIS.—The elevator companies either recognize the recent warehouse law and pay taxes on their grain in store in this city. The companies seem to have got themselves into a boat by refusing to recognize the warehouse bill, asserting that their elevators did not hold any wheat in transit, but only in storage and owned by them at the time it was stored. They contend that the grain was shipped to Superior as its destination and that being true the warehouse law compelling them to open offices in the city where their warehouses are located and to keep a set of books open for inspection. By advancing this argument the companies have placed themselves in a peculiar position concerning the taxation of grain.

FIGHT FOR ESTATE

Widow of a Wealthy Butte Man, Deserted Years Ago, Will Claim Rights.

Page Went West From Massachusetts and Was Not Heard Of for Twenty-five Years.

Butte, Mont., July 4.—Advice received from North Adams, Mass., say a fight is to be made for the estate of Mrs. Selma Page, of that city, widow of a wealthy Butte man who died recently. Mrs. Page will be assisted by her son, C. H. Durocher, who was Page's stepson. Page, it is said, abandoned his wife about twenty-five years ago and went west, where he accumulated wealth. Nothing was heard of him until recently. Then it was learned that he was located in Butte.

Durocher was taking steps to force Page to provide for his mother when he was notified that divorce papers had been filed against her by her husband, although she had not been served with notice, as is alleged.

For several seasons past the velvet collar, which used to be not at all uncommon, the never more correct than that of cloth, has been entirely out of vogue, but the full-faced lapel has been steadily gaining in fashion until now it may fairly be called the sweller finish. It is not to be implied, however, that lapels faced only to the button holes (in such case there are button holes) are entirely out of style. They are merely an older fashion, and while not positively incorrect, still not according to latest ideas the most approved thing.

THE FERRIS COMPANY IN "A BACHELOR'S HONEYMOON"

After a week of romance at the Lyceum, the Ferris stock company will be seen in a young comedy entitled "A Bachelor's Honeymoon," by John Stapleton. The play was written simply to produce laughter—nothing more. There is a simple plot running through it, but not enough to cause one to think very hard. "A Bachelor's Honeymoon" is a very apt title, it will be presented in a very clever and humorous way of bright talk, and for laughter certainly puts any of the recent productions in the shade. The story, in brief, tells of a young man who is a widower, the part of a grown-up with daughters. He secretly marries Miss Arbuckle, an actress, who is known on the stage as Jane Joyce, and instead of going to the wedding, she brings his bride home and installs her as the new governess, to hoodwink his sister Minerva, the more governess of the household. The actress, who has broken her contract with the manager of the Olympia theater, and he in turn sends out a private detective to find out where she is. The confidential agent, who is an adept at distorting facts, assisted by a servant, complicates matters in a most original manner until the mystery is finally cleared up and all ends happily.

Carl Smith Seeler will play the leading role, Benjamin Bachelor, married in haste; Laurita Allen will portray Minerva, his sister; Maude Gilbert and Eva Sargent will be seen as Amariyllis and Charlyllis, the maid servant; Grace Hayward will be seen as Miss Arbuckle, the actress; Herbert Benson will be seen as Stephen Howson, very busy man; the part of Anthony Gumbus, a confidential agent and detective, will be played by Albert Dorris; Marie Cecil will be seen as Marianne, the maid servant; Grace Hayward will be seen as Miss Arbuckle, the actress; Bert McCann will interpret the part of Joe, the man servant.

Following "A Bachelor's Honeymoon," the Ferris stock company will be seen in a grand double bill, "a curtain raiser" by J. S. Lawrence of the J. S. and another, Nat Goodwin's great comedy success, "Turned Up."

Haslam Land and Investment Company, MERCHANTS BANK BLDG., WINNIPEG, MAN. 312 JACKSON ST., ST. PAUL, MINN. We Still have left in the HALBRITE DISTRICT about 100,000 Acres of Choice Farm Lands. The conditions prevailing in that district for a crop this year are better even than at this time last year. The crop went in in excellent condition, and they have had abundance of rain. This practically insures another record breaking crop for that district, which for the last two years has averaged over 30 bushels of wheat and 60 bushels of oats to the acre. Our Present Prices are $10 an Acre But we expect that there will be a general advance the middle of June. If you want to secure a farm in this, the most favored of any of the wheat growing regions of Western Canada, it will be necessary for you to do so at an early date. Write us for full particulars.
