MIXED UP ALIASES

Attorneys Have a Hard Time Deciding Who Their Client Is.

Each Claimed the Right to Defend Her in Police Court.

"Glen Arnold," called out Deputy Clerk Nelson, of the police court, this morning. "May it please the court," said Attorney James L. Curtis, approaching the bar. "I appear for Mrs. Arnold in this case and would say that the matter was continued from last Saturday upon the motion of the state. I would also state that the woman has two witnesses in St. Paul and I would like to have a chance to get them here. I move to continue."

"May it please the court," said W. R. Morris, representing the woman and it was upon his motion that the case was continued last Saturday. "I will say that I am ready for trial and that I do not know anything about any witnesses in St. Paul."

"Which of you men represents this woman?" asked the court while a smile played upon his mouth. "She employed me," replied Curtis. "But I was not here when she was arraigned Saturday."

"She employed me," declared Morris, "and I entered the plea of not guilty and secured the continuance."

"I am her attorney and am going to defend her," said Curtis getting a trifle excited. "I have been retained in the case and I won't give up now."

"I think the court will uphold me," said Mr. Curtis, remembering that he represented her last Saturday. "I was just at this juncture, when things were getting interesting, that a misfortunate man into the court room. As Attorney Curtis was the prisoner, he exclaimed: 'Why that's not the woman I was hired to defend.'"

"It's the woman I am to defend," said Morris. Investigation showed that Curtis was employed to defend a woman named Williams, but who, according to the state, had supposed that Glen Arnold was one of her names.

SHIPPED FROM CHICAGO. Man Arrested for Vagrancy Says Chicago Authorities Sent Him Here.

Chicago seems to be shipping indigents to cities where they have previously lived, there to leave them to the tender mercies of police courts and poor departments. It is of this kind that came up this morning when Hans Smith, colored, was arraigned in the Minneapolis police court upon a charge of vagrancy. He told the court that he had lived in Chicago from 1889 until last October, when he was sent to this city, having no money and no friends.

Smith's case was a sad one. He hobbled up to the bar upon a pair of crutches and was scarcely strong enough to speak. Officer Thompson requested numerous questions of the man, but he could not answer them. He was unable to work and refused to go to the hospital, so the officer sent him to the station.

"How can I get out of here when I have been here since last October?" asked Smith when he was arraigned. "I used to live in this city, but I moved to Chicago in 1889 and I have been here ever since. I don't know what I am going to do."

Judge Dickenson ordered an investigation. If Smith is a resident of Minneapolis he will be placed on the poor department's pension list, otherwise he will be sent to Chicago.
