FALL TERM OPENS SEPT. 15. A. D. HALL, Principal.
MINNEAPOLIS ACADEMY
INTERURBAN CAR LINE. 401 HARVARD STREET S. E.

No city in the northwest has so many schools nor such good, trustworthy schools as Minneapolis. For a university training, a musical education, or a commercial course, Minneapolis offers as many advantages as any city in the country. Admirably located, Minneapolis is the very center of the intellectual strength of the great northwest, and every year this city's educational population grows.

In the bygone days the hoary signs of age, the venerable appearance of years, gave that impression of solidity and substantiality that attracted the attention of parents and coincided with their idea of what a school should be. This day and generation has relegated all this to a dim background, and the man of affairs is the young man, the expert who has made up in energy, in progressiveness and in specializing what the man of the past acquired thru struggling years of experience. The young mind, well trained, is the master mind to-day; the energy that has all the vital force for use, the alert mentality, quick to grasp, swift and sure to accomplish, outstrip all and leads.

Minneapolis offers every inducement to the young man of to-day who is anxious to make something of himself and climb up the ladder of progressiveness. On this page will be found leaders among the schools devoted to the training of the mind for business and general learning.

Archibald College.

The Archibald College is one of the oldest in the northwest and has by its careful, conscientious work and thorough preparation of its students for commercial positions, built up for itself a clientele among the most influential and important families and business houses in the states of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Wisconsin. These things do not come by chance, and the reasons for the success which has been attained by this justly popular school are, first of all, its location in a clean and healthful part of the city, where the moral and sanitary conditions are such as to lead to the best possible work on the part of the student, and to enable and build him up, rather than to lead him into the company of those who would influence him for evil. The location of the college enables the students to obtain board at a lower rate than is possible in the downtown districts; thus cheapening the cost of a commercial course. The long experience of the management, together with their progressiveness, has led them to discard from the courses all those things that have been found to be useless or not conducive to the best results, and in this way a more efficient and important faculty evolved that trains the students in all the essentials of a thorough commercial education.

The Eclectic Business College.

The Eclectic Business College of this city has the confidence of the public and every year sends out scores of young men and women competent in all respects to fill the requirements of business life. Its graduates hold many of the most important positions with the largest firms not only in this city but throughout the northwest, and it is a matter of common knowledge that all of its graduates secure good positions.

The location of the college is central, occupying the second and third floors of the commodious buildings adjoining each other on the corner of Hennepin and Washington. The arrangement of the rooms is excellent, well ventilated, and everything designed for the comfort of the student. The curriculum of the college embraces everything which goes to complete a thorough business education.

The Minneapolis Business College.

This institution is certainly a splendid exponent of the business, educational phase of the metropolis of the northwest, and a most fitting representative of the great city whose name it bears. This school is now a leading school of the twin cities, and has a complete college equipment this side of Chicago. The record of this school is a strong factor in the demand there has been for a school that teaches business as it is conducted in business houses to-day.

Being in the university section of the city, the general atmosphere of a refined and educational nature. The student comes in contact with the very best class of people, and is admitted into good homes at a very nominal charge, a good board being secured for $3.10 per week. Write for free catalogue to Rugg & Boyce, 305 Central Avenue.

Metropolitan Commercial College.

This school has made phenomenal advancement during the short five years of its history, and is to-day recognized as a leading commercial institution of the northwest. G. M. Langum, the president, has spent a lifetime in perfecting the teaching of commercial knowledge and that he is a success is not to be denied. His splendid school is built on strictly practical lines and his students have always been a strong factor in commercial affairs. The school has a central location in the very heart of the city at Hennepin and Fourth street and inspires a student to obtain the end for which the school was founded.

A School for Girls.

Villa Maria, the famous convent in Minnesota for girls, is located near the historic village of Frontenac, Minn., a short ride from the twin cities, and has a reputation far and wide for its thoroughness. No school in the world is better adapted for the needs of girl students. The location is healthful in the extreme and ideal for school purposes. It is conducted by the Ursuline nuns and has been in a flourishing condition for many years.

Syllable Shorthand College.

This college occupies a unique place in the ranks of business colleges in Minneapolis. Starting with one pupil the middle of last November and a new, untried system, as far as the northwest was concerned, the management has carried on a brave fight in a dignified manner, until at the present writing they are proud of the fact that the college stands high among business men, who have had occasion to use their graduates.

These graduates have been tested in real estate, banking, brokerage, lumber law, newspaper reporting, mercantile and all branches of business, and have proved a success.

Positions for Young People.

Young people starting out in life who have made no choice of a profession would do well to look thoroughly into the possibilities open to shorthand writers for advancement to positions of trust, where opportunities for earning large salaries are continually presenting themselves. The quickest and most satisfactory way is to study at some reliable school. The advertisement of the Munson Shorthand Institute, Guaranty Building, Minneapolis, appears in this issue of The Journal. Read it and write for particulars, mentioning The Journal.

The Graham College.

The Graham Shorthand and Business College, 711 Nicollet Avenue, is one of the best known institutions of the kind in the northwest and is known for its honest, conscientious work. Its graduates hold splendid commercial positions and have been uniformly successful. Their catalogue is sent upon application.
