Heard McAlpin's Story—Maud Brooks, who was arrested last night charged with grand larceny, was arraigned to-day. Her case was continued to Sept. 14. The state's evidence was, however, listed to be by the court because the complaining witness was obliged to leave the city. This witness, John McAlpin, furnished considerable amusement by telling in a dramatic way how the prisoner had met him on the street last night and after some "smooth talking" had managed to get away with his purse, containing $350. Ball was fixed at $2,500.

Fraud Was Too Clever—"The case is so palpably a fraud that I feel loth to dismiss it, but the evidence will not permit me to do otherwise." This statement, made by Judge Dickinson in a police court this morning, gave Henry Peterson and John Mobrey their freedom. They were arrested night before last on the charge of working C. O. Sherbeck, an aged stranger, for a ten dollar bill. The graft they worked is commonly known as the "freight game," but the court could not see how they had done brought them within the statute.

UP SHAFT AND OUT

Daring Plan of Escape Formed by Roy E. Page in Central Lock-Up.

Discovered by Jailer Robert Wilson Just in the Nick of Time.

The timely appearance of Jailer Robert Wilson in the cell room at the central police station yesterday afternoon prevented the escape of Roy E. Page, the 18-year-old hack driver, who is under two-and-a-half years' sentence to the state training school. Young Page had removed about fifty bricks from the ventilating shaft of the chimney and when the jailer found him was about to leave the place in a hasty fashion.

About a year ago Emil Anderson, who was arrested for burglary, made his escape from the central station by crawling thru the chimney to the roof of the station and descending a fire escape. Page was a friend of Anderson's and had heard of his escape. When he was locked up he discovered that the hole thru which Anderson entered the chimney had been closed by masons. He found, however, that near the floor of the cell-room was a small ventilating shaft, but this was too small to allow him to crawl thru. He tried one of the bricks and found it loose. He thereupon began to open a way for himself.

His undertaking was dangerous for the jailer's office is in the room adjoining. He was working at the hole in the floor of the cell room and as each brick was removed he concealed it under the bunk in cell No. 1.

Just as he was about to start on his long crawl to the roof, forty feet above, the key in the cell room door turned and the jailer entered. Wilson saw that something was wrong and went to the hole in the chimney. Page was locked up and later in the day was turned over to the officers who took him to the training school at Red Wing.

Registration at the university has gone on rapidly the last two days, and as a result of the large number of applications for admission. Of this number, less than 200 are in the professional schools, and it is estimated that over one-half of the number are freshmen.

Registrar Johnson expects to register 1,000 students to-morrow and Monday, and he has enlarged his office force in preparation for the coming day. Although it is impossible to make any exact statement, Mr. Johnson thinks that the attendance this year will be only slightly over last year's figures, and expects the greatest increase will be in the academic department.

Weather Bureau Predicts a Touch of Frost in This Locality To-night.

Likely to Do Considerable Damage to Corn in Northern Minnesota.

Some one is coming to town to-night. Jack Frost and his retinue of foliage painters is due, and tomorrow the frost will be on the pumpkin, even if the corn isn't in the shock. To Section Director Outram of the weather bureau service Sir Jack sends the word that the evening he will arrive in the twin cities.

It is predicted from Chicago that the frost will be considerable in the northwest portion of Minnesota. The Minneapolis office predicts that there will be a touch here. At noon the temperature, according to weather bureau standards, was 39 degrees and the mercury mounting. This would require a fall of at least 19 degrees to give the frost sprites an opportunity to work.

The Street Railway Company Has a Human Block System This Week.

Fifty Men Along the Como-Harriet Line Control Car Movements.

Fifty men form the human block system which the street railway company has organized for the protection of the public and patrons during the rush of fair week. All along the Como-Harriet line, the hardest pushed section of the company's system at this time, are placed fifty men, each with a night looking like semaphore light signals which signify whether an approaching car can enter the "block" or not.

By this system the dangers of this line are so minimized that practically no possibility of rear end collisions exists. Employees are placed at all railway crossings where the state law provides that conductors shall go ahead and signal "danger" or "track clear," and at all street crossings where the law provides that the public is protected, as shown by the fact that during the past two street car accidents have happened, either of which might have occurred at any other time, and neither being preventable by the company.

LOTS OF GOAL IN EAST Lake Stocks are Short, However, and Prices Will Not Drop There.

Notwithstanding the reported overproduction of anthracite coal, or rather the production of more coal than transportation facilities could take care of from the mines, it is not likely that hard coal in the east will have any effect on the price of soft coal. The reason is that in Minneapolis the price of coal is based on the all-water supply at the head-of-the-lake docks. This supply is now nil. Some companies are still filling June orders. The condition results from the inability of the transportation companies to get coal to the boats. The consumers nearer the mines get the first pick of the coal usually, and have no need of the coal from the northwestern distributing companies.

The necessarily low stocks at the lake docks is shown from the report of the Michigan coal commission for the week ending July 29, 1903, which shows that the normal July shipment is about 400,000 tons.

The supply of soft coal is good, but in the case of hard coal, experts figure that the lake-carried supply will be exhausted by Jan. 1.

GRAND OPERA, MAYBE

Minneapolis Men Planning to Bring Big Attractions to Flour City.

Improvements at the International Auditorium Make the Plan Feasible.

Grand opera for Minneapolis this winter is probable. It is known that three or four negotiations are being made with the idea of giving Minneapolis the best in opera this coming season. Lack of auditorium facilities has been in the past the main drawback to the coming of the big New York company to the city. Undoubtedly at this time one of the main requisites is the securing of the former exposition building auditorium, or the international auditorium, as it is now known. This is understood now to be in a perfectly safe condition and could be so arranged as to be well adapted to the purpose.

By this system the dangers of this line are so minimized that practically no possibility of rear end collisions exists. Employees are placed at all railway crossings where the state law provides that conductors shall go ahead and signal "danger" or "track clear," and at all street crossings where the law provides that the public is protected, as shown by the fact that during the past two street car accidents have happened, either of which might have occurred at any other time, and neither being preventable by the company.
