KEEPS 'EM MOVING

Sam Ellis and His Voice Handle Fair Crowds at Union Station.

He's Too Busy to Allow Leave Taking on Board Trains This Week.

"All aboard for Cambridge, Duluth and other points on the Eastern Minnesota, Great Northern line! All aboard!"

"What time does the 4:45 train go? At fifty minutes of five, madam, there's the clock right up there; better keep your eyes on it."

"What time does the train from Cass county get in? I give it up. Where's your friend coming from? Oh, from Walker. That train'll be in about twenty minutes."

"Now don't all you folks try to get out at once, 'cause the gateman won't stand for it. Easy here; easy there. Come again."

Thus does the genial Colonel Sam Ellis, of more than local fame, stand on the lower floor or in the train shed of the union station and greet the parting guests or welcome the visiting stranger, from morn 'til night.

"Colonel" Ellis is the official announcer, engaged annually by the union station company to lend his voice and his energy to the promotion of the company's business.

"This morning fourteen trains came in, and end, and every one of them was crowded with state fair visitors, each one a passenger because there wasn't room to crowd another one on—the jam was something fearful to behold, and worse than that, it was a jam."

"Crowds are just like a flock of sheep," said Colonel Sam, in expatiating upon the beauties of "keeping 'em moving." "You make a lot of the most intelligent people you ever saw and put 'em together in a strange place, and they just go wild. You can't handle 'em by ordinary means."

"Now, there's a man who'll ask me when the train comes in from 'up state,' and on the square with 'em, too. Most always you have to tell them twice."

"And the kissing and hugging and all the other fool-der-rol going on here when the train pulls out again, that's another thing. Last night, one fellow held the line ten minutes while she fondled a whole family. But we've put a stop to that kind of thing."

"See me stop that woman? She wanted to go out to the train to see that girl who's been out here for a week. Last night it was awful. Honestly, one female held the line ten minutes while she fondled a whole family. But we've put a stop to that kind of thing."

"It's been a case of shout, push and hustle with the union station employes the past four days, from 6:30 in the morning until late at night. Monday and Tuesday were probably the most complete."

The station has ever seen. But the state fair visitors are still coming, with baggage and baggage, and the employes are not the strongest sort, and with a penchant for forgetting things which is really marvelous.

WHITE HOUSE OPENED

All Repairs and Changes Will Be Completed Before the President's Return.

New York Sun Special Service. Washington, Sept. 5.—Hundreds of tourists visited the White House yesterday, this being the first time it has been open to the public for several months.

The house looks bare and uninviting and is in an unkempt condition, not having had its first cleaning for the advent of the president and his family.

The white coverings over the tapestried walls in the blue, red and green rooms have been removed, and the portraits which were hurriedly hung on the walls last season, without being well cleaned, have been cleaned and retouched, and the frames touched up and are being rehung.

The gold panels presented to the White House for use in the east room were removed to-day and will be sent to the factory to have the decorations done over. The red roocco border, with medallions of the thirteen original states, which formed the decoration of the sides, will be changed at Mrs. Roosevelt's suggestion, as not being in keeping with the other decorations of the east room.

It will be returned to the white house before the arrival of the president's family, and, in fact, an effort is being made to have the entire house in readiness, as for over a year it has been in a continual state of upheaval.

The stairway at the east side of the north front portico, which was closed when he found the public greatly inconvenienced by having to go out of the grounds and around to the new east entrance, will be reopened to-day and will be opened to the public before the arrival of the president's family, so that the north front door may again be kept strictly for the use of the family and friends.

Stanley Hall, the well-known boarding and day school for girls, opens its fourteenth year Sept. 15th.

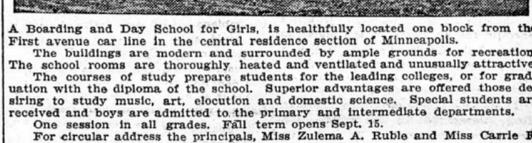

A school providing thorough intellectual training, a strong moral atmosphere, and the refinements of a cultured, well-appointed home, is not easy to find.

In these respects Stanley Hall is not excelled by any other institution of its kind in the west or northwest. The faculty is composed of cultured, refined colleges or university trained men and women whose experience as teachers is from five to ten years—a length of time sufficient for them to have acquired a first-class reputation, if they possess the divine gift of imparting instruction.

Not only are the essential subjects of a college preparatory course taught, but the best opportunities are given in physical culture, music, art and elocution.

The last two named subjects are to be especially developed the coming year. The elocution department is under the direction of Mr. Marshall Darrach of New York. Special attention will be given to training of the speaking voice, and to other features of the work not often to be secured even in the best schools of oratory.

For catalog apply to 2115 Pleasant avenue, Minneapolis, Minn. Oliver Adele Evers, Principal.

A Boarding and Day School for Girls, is healthfully located one block from the First avenue car line in the central residence section of Minneapolis.

The school rooms are thoroughly heated and ventilated and unusually attractive. The courses of study prepare students for the leading colleges, or for graduation with the diploma of the school. Superior advantages are offered those desiring to study music, art, elocution and domestic science. Special students are received and boys are admitted to the primary and intermediate departments.

One session in all grades. Fall term opens Sept. 15. For circular address the principals, Miss Zulema A. Ruble and Miss Carrie P. Bartlett, 1800-1804 First avenue S.
