A DOUBLE WEDDING

Miss Caroline Huntington Gale Married Last Evening to George Henry Johnston.

Miss Frances May Gale to Cecil B. Chapman at Home of Bride's Father.

A double wedding took place last evening at the home of Amy Fayette Gale on Third avenue S. when his daughters, Caroline Huntington and Frances May, were married to George Henry Johnston and Cecil Bayless Chapman. About 100 guests witnessed the service, and the appointments were charming. The reception hall was hung with southern smilax and peeping thru the glossy tendrils were gay pink dahlias. Pink carnations were with the feathery ferns on the piano and table. The stairway was wreathed with vines and palms and ferns formed an altar in the drawing-room. A curtain of smilax hung over the doorway and on either side were great clusters of bride roses. The doorways and arches were festooned with smilax and white dahlias everywhere. A deeper color note was in the dining-room, where oak boughs furnished splashes of vivid color. A basket of bridesmaid roses and ferns was in the center of the polished table, which was lighted with pink tapers in silver holders. The bride cake with its ornaments which had decorated the wedding cake of the bride's parents, thirty-five years ago, occupied a conspicuous place.

Russell Patterson was at the piano and accompanied by a violin and cello played a program as the guests were seated by Judge Chapman and Cyrus Barnum. The "Lohengrin" bridal chorus announced the coming of the brides and their attendants. Mrs. A. E. Turbin was the matron of honor for her sisters and wore white grenadine, over pink silk, embroidered with American Beauty roses, and her flowers were cream Canton faille with floussed skirt inset with panels of Maltese lace. The brides had little veils edged with lace. Her sister's bridal gown was of crepe de meteor over silk. The skirt was hung from a yoke of duchesse lace and the flounce was shirred. A berth of lace edged the tulle yoke. They both wore veils and carried lilies of the valley. Charles E. Johnston of Langdon, N. D., was his best man and George Chapman of Milwaukee rendered the same service for his brother.

Rev. W. W. Dawley officiated and Schubert's "Frelling's Glaube" was played as the vows were spoken and the Mendelssohn march sounded when the bridal couples turned to receive the congratulations of their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston and Mr. and Mrs. Chapman left last evening for short wedding trips. Mrs. Johnston is traveling home by way of gray zibeline and she wore a hat to match. Mrs. Chapman was in brown shibbole with a brown hat. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will be at home at 1620 Third avenue S. after Dec. 1 and Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will receive after Dec. 1 at the Cordova apartments.

One of the prettiest of autumn weddings took place last evening in the Park Avenue M. E. church when Miss Eleanor Lloyd and Benjamin Edwin Darby were married. A touch of sentiment entered into the bride's choice of a wedding day as Oct. 6 marked the twenty-ninth anniversary of the marriage of her parents. The decorations in the church were unique. Five arches of brightly colored autumn leaves were arranged over the center aisle and at the one nearest the altar swung a gate of red leaves which was opened for the bridal party by Misses Florence Sanderson and Hattie Rank. The altar was banked with ferns and leaves and the lights were all shaded in red. The decorations were arranged by the young people of the Epworth League. John Lyon was at the organ and Miss Christine McCallum, vocalist, gave a program before the service. The "Lohengrin" bridal chorus was played for the processional and the Mendelssohn march at the close. Miss McCallum sang "Since Thou Art Mine" during the service which was read by Rev. G. G. Vallentyne. The little flower girl, Gertrude Dunham, wore white swiss and carried a basket of rose petals. The maid of honor, Miss Mae Lloyd, was in pale blue silk mull and her flowers were pink roses. The bride's gown was of white Princess silk. The yoked bodice had a berth of lace and the skirt was hung from a lace yoke. She wore a veil and carried bride roses. George E. Darby was best man and Dr. Harry Darby and Ralph McKenzie were ushers. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents on First avenue S. and about 100 guests were present. Festoons of white roses decorated the rooms and a canopy was arranged before a bank of palms where the bride and groom were seated. Pink roses were in the dining room and pink and white flowers in the hall. The stairway was wreathed with bright leaves and ferns and asparagus ferns were thru the rooms in profusion. Misses Alice Perkins, Florence Sanderson, Minnie Rank and Nettie Rank served in the dining room. The out of town guests were Mrs. B. E. Darby, Owatonna; Mr. Notran and daughters, St. Paul; George Orton, Princeton; R. E. Lloyd, Havre, Mont. Mr. and Mrs. Darby left for the south and they will remain at Hot Springs, Ark., for about two months. On their return they will be at home at 3253 Seventeenth avenue S.
