JOY WAS TOO GREAT

Excitement Over the Football Game Probably Hastened Death of Louis Hart.

Charles Simpson, a Student Celebrant, Is Reported Beaten by Strikers.

Wild enthusiasm over the outcome of the football game with Michigan last Saturday is said to have caused the death of Louis Hart, a sheet metal worker, and serious injuries to Charles Simpson, a university student.

Hart, it is said, became over excited because of the result of the game and dropped dead in front of Allen's drug store, Nicollet avenue and Seventeenth street. He had been standing in front of the store for some time and about 8 o'clock was seen to stagger across the street. When he reached the curb he fell on his face, and before the bystanders could get to his assistance he was dead. A police officer was summoned and the body taken to the morgue, where it was found that death was due to heart failure.

Charles Simpson is said to have been severely beaten by a crowd of strikers at the corner of Nicollet avenue and Eighth street. He was taken away immediately by his friends and nothing definite could be learned concerning the extent of his injuries.

A gang of about 200 hoodlums, under the guise of students, did considerable damage about town Saturday night, but on the whole they caused less trouble to the police than was expected. Their operations were chiefly confined to the "red light" district, and they were kept on the run by the police. Several arrests were made late Saturday night for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, but there were few if any students among those taken in. The majority of the damage was done by Halloween marauders who had no connection with the university. Several windows were broken in the vicinity of the union branch on Hennepin street, and in all parts of the city were upset.

Most of the students attended the various theaters, where they kept good order.

WAS TIRED OF LIFE

Frank Kindie, a Telegraph Operator of St. Paul, Drinks Carbolic Acid.

Frank Kindie, a telegraph operator at the Great Northern yard office in St. Paul, was found dead in his room at 623 Pine street, St. Paul, Saturday morning. He was found with his mouth open and three empty carbolic acid bottles were found by his side.

The following letter addressed to John Hoehsen, Melrose, Minn., was found:

Please do all you can for my aged mother. I have only a few cents in my pockets, and God in heaven will know how I feel. I am not right, but despondency is the cause. My health is failing and I will not live long. I did not have many more days to spare. The joys and sorrows of my mother. All I have is for my mother. I will try to improve my mind too much with the thing. Do all you can for my mother. Thank you for what you have done previously. Good-by forever. —F. K.

ST. PAUL'S NEW ARMORY

Cornerstone of the Structure is Laid With Due Ceremony.

St. Paul laid the cornerstone for its new armory yesterday, and the whole population turned out to the celebration. The new armory will stand at Sixth and Exchange streets and will cost $150,000. The soldiers were, of course, out in full force, and the official and social elements were also strongly represented. Governor Samuel R. Van Dusen, who is in the city, made the principal address. Remarks were also made by Corporation Attorney J. C. Michael, who represented the city; Mayor R. H. Van Dusen, who is in the city; and Colonel C. A. Van Dusen, president of the armory building committee.

He was taken to the hospital by Patrolman Kiser on Washington avenue. Ritchie is in a serious condition, but it is thought that he will recover.

GENERAL MILES HERE

Made a Brief Stop En Route from the West.

General Nelson A. Miles, former commander-in-chief of the United States army, was in Minneapolis a little while yesterday afternoon calling on his friend, Colonel Clague, at the West hotel. Colonel Clague's temporary absence caused General Miles to return to his private car at St. Paul, and he continued his journey to the east last night. General Miles was on his way home after a visit to the coast.

NOTHING TO PAY $87,067

George Jabour Files Petition in Bankruptcy—Liabilities Large, Assets Nothing.

George Jabour, owner of the "oriental shows" that made the "midway" of local street fairs, filed Saturday afternoon a petition of bankruptcy in the United States district court. His liabilities are $87,067.65; his assets, nothing.

There are ninety-six creditors of Mr. Jabour, and among them are Jabour Oriental Carnival and Circus company of 1902 or of the Jabour Carnival and Circus company of 1903. The creditors are: J. J. O'Dea, Miasogob, New York, $16,000; Antoine Kourbe, New York, $12,000; William Sabagh, Baton Rouge, La., $5,000; Cassin, Edinburgh, Scotland, $4,500; K. Frajl, New York, $12,000. Part of this indebtedness covers notes given for money advanced and for guaranteed profits. The remaining creditors are performers and employees to whom Mr. Jabour has given his notes during the last three seasons. Seven of these creditors live in Minneapolis and ten in St. Paul.

Mr. Jabour, who has gone to New York, expects to return to Minneapolis. He believes that the street carnival, "like the dime museum and the roller skating rink, has seen its day." He expects to take up another circuit next season, but it will be a one-ring circus, not a carnival.

BETAS AT THE BOARD

Fratgas Close Their District Convention with a Banquet.

The close of the district convention of the fraternity of Beta Theta Pi was happily observed Saturday night by a banquet at the Nicolet hotel. About sixty members at the tables were delegates from nearly every college chapter in the district, including Wisconsin, Beloit, Northwestern, Iowa, Illinois, Chicago and Knox.

Judge E. A. Jaggard, Dickinson, '73, acted as toastmaster. The following toasts were responded to: "The Good Old Days, or When I Was at Michigan," "Tratford N. Jayne, Michigan, '89," "Last but Not Least, or the Infants of District Eight, or Every One a Winner," "Howard W. Hayes, Michigan, '01," "How I Became a Grifter, or Politics is Hell," "Cyrus P. Barnum, Minnesota, '04," "Schultz, Pabst and Blatz, or Why We Don't Play at Milwaukee," J. C. Gipe, Wisconsin, '04. The last speaker of the evening was Rev. S. D. Hutsinpller.

A RELIGIOUS FREAK

Dowle Sized Up by Dr. Cool at Fowler Church.

John Alexander Dowle, self-styled "Elijah II," would have made a great general and is a great executive and financier, but as a religious he belongs in a class with Mohammed and Brigham Young, according to Dr. P. A. Cool, pastor of the Fowler Methodist church.

Dr. Cool, in a sermon two weeks ago, said that Dowle was a man who had opportunity to see Dowle and his assistants in the flesh and to hear them preach with his own ears. Dowle gives it all in his repeated use of abusive epithets. In his love for personal, dictatorial power, and in his vilification of those who differ with him, Dowle does not in the least resemble the prophet he names himself after, said Dr. Cool, and Dowleism will die with Dowle unless another as strong as he should arise to take his place.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR MEN

Employees of Down-Town Stores Invited to Y. M. C. A. Next Friday Evening.

The men employees of Dayton's, the New Store, William Donaldson & Co., the New Enterprise, the Commercial and the Minneapolis Dry Goods company have been invited to attend a reception Friday evening at the Y. M. C. A. A tug-of-war by teams representing the department stores will be a feature of the program. This event is one of the first arranged by the new social secretary, G. N. Fonker, who has planned to give one evening a week to employees of business firms.

SHERWIN CODY'S CRITICISM

He Discusses the Use of Capitals and "Hot Air" in Business Letters.

There is a commodity in the business world known as "hot air," which is more plentiful than anything else manufactured out of words. There was a time not many years ago when the man who promised more and more was considered indispensable to the advertising man and business letter writer, and especially to salesmen. But his high price has come down steadily, and now the principal manufacturers of it have a hard time to give it away.

Mr. Cody and "hot air" go together; and if you see a letter writer using too many, you want to look out for him. The chances are there is more face than fact behind those capitals.

Here is a letter sent out from this city several years ago. We hope the town has outgrown such extravagance. It is a sign of callow youth, and as we become older and wiser we are very likely to leave it behind us.

Letter from an Advertising Solicitor.

Dear Sir:

It affords us great pleasure to invite your special attention to the Present (1) world's Commercial Depository, which is daily becoming more and more useful to the (2) commercial and other communities, and is the most reliable trading house (3) for a variety of business.

The Terms, Proposals of business, and Systems (4), which our concern can offer are the outcome of enormous Labour, Long Experience and Combined Contrivances (5). It is established for the Promotion and Protection of Trade.

(There is more of this letter, but the lines quoted will be sufficient.)

The figures refer to criticisms below.

Mr. Cody's Criticisms.

1. Capitalizing "Present" seems to connect it with "world" as part of the name of the concern, whereas, the meaning undoubtedly would be expressed by saying "the world's Commercial Depository" under its present name.

2. "The" as a simple adjective modifies the noun next following, which is "world's Commercial Depository," here doesn't make sense. The writer probably meant "the commercial community and other communities," but he did not say so. Omit "the" and the sentence reads smoothly and logically. A little word often upsets a great idea.

3. When a noun is preceded by a present participle which in sense unites with it to form one idea, the two should be joined with a hyphen, as "trading-house," etc. Also when the present participle is used as a verbal noun and is preceded by a regular noun so that the two form one idea, as "trading-house," omit "the" and the sentence reads smoothly and logically. When we have three words coming together, the first two being nouns used as adjectives, and the third a verb, as "trading-house," we omit the hyphen.

FIGHT SUNDAY CLOSING

St. Paul Suburban Grocers Will Carry Fight to the Supreme Court.

A determined stand against the Sunday closing law has been taken by the suburban grocers of St. Paul, who will carry the fight to the highest courts before they will submit to having their places closed on the Sabbath. At a meeting held yesterday the owners of small stores decided to stand together against the law and against the downtown dealers who, it is said, are back of the effort to close up the suburban stores on Sunday.
