

BIG CROWD WATCHING JOURNAL BULLETIN

Getting First Information of Progress of Minnesota-Michigan Game from The Journal's Moving Ball Board Saturday Afternoon.

With the development of the game of football and with the increasing interest with which even the partially informed take in the game, has come a development in the methods of the immediate dissemination of information as to results.

and Fifteenth avenue; the Nicollet Junction drug store, Nicollet avenue and Thirty-first street; the Robertson drug store, Washington and Twentieth avenue N.; and C. H. Dale's furnishing store, 333 Central avenue.

From The Journal's moving ball bulletin board in front of the building, 13,000 people were given the first information of every move made on the football field, and it was from The Journal's bulletin board that the eager crowd first learned of Michigan's touchdown, and then of Minnesota's. If the crowd on Northrop field went wild when Minnesota tied the score, then the crowd on Fourth street left their senses entirely as the Journal's bulletin board displayed the "touchdown" sign and the ball shot over the Michigan goal line. At the other Journal bulletin boards the scene was enacted in miniature, and altogether some 2,000 fans who couldn't get into the football enclosure received their information from the bulletin board at first hand from the Journal's bulletin service.

MIGHTY GOPHERS TIE WOLVERINES

(Continued from Eighth Page.) amount will be divided equally between the two schools for donations. This will give each about $15,000.

Of the four Minnesota players who were forced to retire, Jimmy Irsfeld was the only one whose injuries lasted over night. Irsfeld twisted his ankle, but will be in shape long before the next big game. Thorpe, Current and Davies are all right to-day. The members of the squad are loud in their praise of Big Smith, the freshman guard, who so well filled Thorpe's place in the last part of the game.

Some discussion was aroused among the less well informed rooters over the play in the early part of the game Saturday, when Sig Harris was carried over the Minnesota goal line for what looked like a safety. Sig called down as soon as the Michigan players began to push him back, and the referee brought the ball back to the point at which Harris had called down.

Dr. Williams and seventeen members of the second and third teams left yesterday for Fargo, where a game is scheduled for to-day with the North Dakota Agricultural college team. The probable lineup follows: Hunter, left end; Benson, left tackle; Hand, left guard; Klenz, center; Russell, right guard; Oech, right tackle; Luce or Tuck, right end; Smith, quarterback; Deering or Welsel, left half; Neustler or Nelson, right half; Geiselon, fullback.

Also more than $75,000 was wagered on the result of Saturday's game, less than $5,000 changed hands. Most of the wagers were on the general result, and the money was returned, except for the commission charged by the stakeholders. Many Minnesota men won small sums betting that the gophers would score.

YOST SAYS IT WAS ROUGH But He Says It "Not in a Complaining Spirit."

Special to The Journal.

Ann Arbor, Nov. 2.—Coach Yost arrived home to-day. After reviewing his men he said: "Our team is in splendid condition, taking into account the terrific bumpings the players received in the game. Heston is the only one who really shows the effects of the contest. It was certainly a rough game, but I do not say this in a complaining spirit. Our men got the worst of it on general principles for the simple reason that the Minnesota men played that style of game."

"As to the game itself, it was certainly a corker. I do not think that Minnesota outplayed us on any straight football. We were there. Contrary to accounts, we made a straight gain of 100 yards, and that mostly thru the line. We walked from one end to the other without a stop. We began on our own ten-yard line and did not stop until Maddock was pushed over. I notice by the reports that Hammond gets credit for the touchdown. Maddock was the man who went over, and Maddock also did the punting.

"Our men were in better condition apparently than were Minnesota's, as we did not take over more than ten minutes' time during the entire game. Minnesota must have taken an hour, as the game began at 2:15 o'clock and it was about 5:30 o'clock when the game was over. It was then too dark to distinguish the players."

MICHIGAN IS SORE

Wolverines Denounce Minnesota Men for Slugging and Other Un-necessarily Rough Play.

Effort Will Be Made to Strengthen the Michigan Line Before Next Game.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 2.—Battered and in bandages, Michigan's gridiron warriors returned yesterday afternoon from the memorable struggle with Minnesota.

Coming with the team is a report that Michigan will probably never again meet Minnesota on the football field. Every wolverine charges the Minnesota men with unsportsmanlike play, and blackened optics, bruised faces and sore heads are the evidence against the gophers. Heston, the Michigan half who even won plaudits from the hostile Minnesota bleachers because of his wonderful play, bitterly denounces Minnesota men for their roughness.

Not only so, but they used their spikes, said Heston. Heston's face is a mass of contusions, and his eyes are nearly closed by the swollen flesh. Yost did not accompany the team, but he remained for a day with friends in Chicago. The players discredit all rumors that a post-season game with Minnesota will be played to definitely settle the western championship with the statement that Yost is also indignant because of the treatment received by his proteges in the hands of Michigan. Members of the team say that all the dash and intuitive generalship was taken from McCross, the diminutive quarter, by the simple reason that the Minnesota men won small sums betting that the gophers would score.

That unconquerable spirit which old Ann Arbor reached a higher pitch when the wolverines played at the Michigan Central station and their crippled condition became known. Because it was the Sabbath a quiet reception had been planned, but the appearance of the team caused the occasion, the day and all else to be forgotten. Four thousand students and as many more thronged into the stadium, every one of which knew no bounds. Had Yost's band been bringing home a clean-cut victory the ovation could have been no more enthusiastically received. The wolverines were met by a throng which followed the team upon its seemingly triumphant march to the campus. Saturday's keen disappointment was laid aside, and the cheers, marked by a deafening roar, were the semblance of a sacrilege, even though they did break the peace of a quiet Sunday.

In the mind of the student body, the wolverine triumph is still held by Michigan. Altho the squad is suffering much from the effects of the game and the tiresome journey, but one day of rest will be followed. The future program will be one of untiring work for the struggle with Chicago on Thanksgiving Day. Practice at Ferry field will begin on Tuesday. Every future effort will be to strengthen the defensiveness of the line and center. An entire reconstruction of the line is not deemed improbable. Captain Redden is noncommittal about the remedies he has in mind, but he asserts that the center will be less vulnerable in future. "We behaved well considering that it was the first big game for six members of the team," said Redden.

Assistant Coach McGuin, who saw the wolverines play yesterday at Madison, is sanguine in his belief that Michigan will down Wisconsin when the teams meet here Nov. 14. The Wisconsin team is good, but the punting department, and its backs are not classed as high in the ground-gaining capacity as the wolverines.

Saturday's Scores.

TIE FOR THE TITLE

Michigan and Michigan Both Promise to Finish the Season Without Defeat.

Chicago Still in the Running—Chances of the Badgers Look Slim.

Instead of being simplified, the western football situation is complicated by Saturday's results. It is probable that the season will end with Michigan and Wisconsin tied for the championship, and Michigan still on even terms in their contest for the championship.

There are other possible outcomes, but they are remote. The four undefeated western teams now are Chicago, Minnesota, Michigan and Northwestern. Chicago has yet to play Michigan, while Wisconsin has games with Minnesota, Michigan and Northwestern. Northwestern plays only Wisconsin of the big western sextet, and Minnesota meets only Illinois and Wisconsin.

Should Wisconsin beat Michigan and Michigan beat Chicago, Minnesota would have a fairly clear title to the championship. From the showing of the badgers and wolverines, Saturday, however, Wisconsin's chances of downing Yost's machine look slim. Another possible outcome is for Michigan to beat both Wisconsin and Chicago, and Wisconsin to defeat Minnesota. This is highly improbable as the other. Northwestern may muddle things still further by defeating Wisconsin. The purple is likely to get into the game, as it comes the week after the Michigan-Wisconsin battle, McCormack's men may catch the badgers in a crippled condition.

As a result, quite possible if not probable, is for Chicago to defeat Michigan. Then aside from the result of any other games, Chicago will be conceded the championship. If Chicago should win, the Michigan-Wisconsin defeat Northwestern, Stagg's team will have a clear title because it will be the only undefeated team east of Minnesota, and will have beaten the team which tied the gophers.

Dark Outlook for Wisconsin.

Of all these contingencies, however, the first, that Michigan and Minnesota will win all their games, is most probable. Wisconsin's most likely opponent, Chicago, showed that she had been overrated in consequence of her big scores against weak teams. The badgers show many elements of strength, but they display also serious weaknesses. They will unquestionably improve, as their team is composed largely of green men. That they will amount to much is another question. It is not probable that they can defeat Minnesota. Thanksgiving day is still likely, on account of their hard schedule, to give Minnesota the western a week after the Michigan game, and Northwestern will give them a stiff argument. The badgers should win, but Minnesota tackles them on five days after Northwestern, and Wisconsin undoubtedly will be more or less battered and bruised. If they meet Wisconsin under circumstances most favorable to the badgers, the gophers would be a strong favorite. As it is, the result of the game seems almost a foregone conclusion.

Illinois has been overrated as well as Wisconsin. The big scores made by the men from Champaign in early games caused many to predict that the team would give the leaders a hard rub. Now it is apparent that the Illinois will occupy their usual position in the front of the second division. Minnesota should win at Champaign Nov. 14 and win quite easily. This will give the gophers a clean record, and only the defeat of Michigan by Chicago can cancel their claim to at least an equal division of championship honors.

Chicago Not Yet Counted Out.

That Chicago will defeat Michigan is not probable, but it is more likely than a victory for Wisconsin over either the wolverines or the gophers. It is admitted that Stagg has a splendid bunch of material. He has been slow in developing his team, but this is a characteristic of the veteran coach. Steady improvement has been shown by the maroons during the past fortnight, and as their schedule from now on is easy, save for the game with West Point, Stagg may be able to whip his men into shape to beat the wolverines. In Eckersall's case a strong punter and drop kicker, and his defense is strong, especially at critical times. To date he has not developed a good offense, his men having failed to make a single touchdown by straight line plunging in any of their big games. Of all the possible combinations which may settle the championship decisively without a post-season game, a victory for Chicago over Michigan seems most likely, but this is not as probable as a tie between Michigan and Minnesota. Minnesota Not Given Due Credit. It is difficult to understand why the Chicago papers, with one or two exceptions, fail to give Minnesota the credit which is her due. The Chicago Tribune and the Inter-Ocean both say that, judging from the detailed story of the game, Michigan should have won, because she advanced farther on straight plunges than Minnesota.

touchdown, two Michigan men tackled him viciously, altho he had already heeled the ball. Both these illegal tackles occurred in the open, where they were seen by practically everyone in the stands, yet the first apparently escaped the attention of the umpire altogether. In the face of this, it seems probable that if there was any unnecessary roughness in the scrimmage, Minnesota was not the worst offender. At this distance Michigan's roar sounds like an admission of defeat. Yale and Princeton Stand Alone. The eastern situation was not much clarified by Saturday's games, as it was admitted that the championship lay between Yale and Princeton. Both will have plenty of supporters in their game Nov. 14. Princeton, perhaps, has played the most consistent football, and from this distance the tigers appear to have the better of the Elis in everything except the weight of the line. Yale's mighty tackles and ends will outplay the Princeton men, but the tigers are much stronger in the center line, and have a better balanced line. Moreover, Princeton is much better developed. The quakers have a heavier backfield, and promise to be more successful in line plunges than the Harvard backs. Just now it seems that Penn should be the favorite for Saturday's game, if either team is given preference.

man. Oberlin's strong feature was punting, as she gained from ten to thirty yards on each exchange. Case scored two touchdowns in the first half and one in the second. Miller's, Stimpson's and Metcalf's work for Oberlin and Orr's and Green's work for Case were the features.

As a matter of fact, in the whole game, Minnesota carried the ball 237 yards from scrimmage, to 152 for Michigan. Minnesota ran back punts 27 yards to 9 for Michigan. Minnesota gained 55 yards in running back two kickoffs, Michigan made 10 yards running back one. Minnesota had a total of 845 yards on punts to 336 for Michigan.

The average of Harris' punts was 43 yards, the average of Maddock's 37. Minnesota was penalized 39 yards, Michigan 35. Where it can be figured that Michigan deserved a victory, in the face of these figures, is difficult to see. Perhaps Chicago feels that if she can defeat Michigan her title to the championship will be made stronger by boosting the wolverines beforehand. It is unfortunate that Michigan should play the baby act by making charges of rough playing and slugging against Minnesota. There were at least two instances of palpable and inexcusable violation of the rules by Michigan. Once when Rogers was running down near the punting line, he was not within fifteen yards of the ball, he was seized and tackled fiercely—a foul which had the umpire seen, it would have cost Michigan dear. Again when Harris caught Kramer's punt out after Minnesota had scored a

GOOD NEWS FOR PRINCETON Three Good Men Eligible to Play In the Yale Game. Princeton, N. J., Nov. 2.—It was learned yesterday that Kafer, Rafferty and Bradley, all three of whom were ineligible to play in the Yale team under the amateur rule in regard to men conditioned in their studies, have passed off their conditions and will be able to enter the game if needed. This will be a great help to the orange and black eleven, as all three men are among the best players in the squad; Kafer did the best work of any one in the game with Cornell, Saturday, and it is quite possible that he will force Hart, whose place he took at halfback in the Cornell game, to take second call for the position for the rest of the season. Rafferty weighs over 200 pounds, and he may be worked in at left guard, altho Dillon played a good game at the position Saturday. Bradley also is heavy, and will make a very reliable substitute center for the tigers to fall back on if anything should happen to keep Short out of the game.

Wabash Has a Walkover. Crawfordsville, Ind., Nov. 2.—The dreadful disaster which befell the Purdue team cast a damper over the Wabash-Franklin game this afternoon and the playing on either side was spiritless, despite the big score. Wabash rolled up Wabash made fifteen touchdowns in thirty and fifteen-minute halves, and missed but three goals, giving them a total of eighty-seven points. The score was 37 to 5. Only once was Franklin within striking distance of the Wabash goal, and they took advantage of it.

Case School Team Champion. Oberlin, Ohio, Nov. 2.—Case school of Cleveland won the state championship Saturday by defeating Oberlin in a close game. The score was 15 to 5. Oberlin's only score was a beautiful place kick from the twenty-five-yard line at a hard angle. Case outweighted Oberlin ten pounds to a
