JOS. WISE'S BODY FOUND IN RIVER

THE CORPSE RECOVERED NEAR WASHINGTON AV BRIDGE.

Wise Disappeared on April 9, and Foul Play Was Suspected—It Now Appears that He Fell from the Soo Line Bridge.

The body of Joseph Wise, the man who mysteriously disappeared near the Fridley saloon April 9, was found floating in the river near the Washington avenue bridge late yesterday afternoon. The watch had stopped at 4:30, which shows that he probably fell from the Soo Line bridge while he was trying to follow the woman and the two farm hands across.

The body was removed to the county morgue and the inquest will be held later.

Wise and a woman, giving her name as Mrs. Bessie Williams, went to Anoka April 8, and on the return trip stopped at the Fridley saloon. While there she and her companion were over a $10 bill and she left, going over the Soo Line bridge to Camden Place, where she took a car for the city. Nothing further was seen of Wise and his rig was found later at the saloon. The matter was reported to the police and at first it was supposed that he had been murdered by the two farm hands who escorted the woman across the bridge.

When the woman was found she told Police Superintendent Conroy that she did not know the man who was missing until she read about it in The Journal. She said that he was drunk when she had last seen him and believed that he might have tried to follow her across the railroad bridge and have fallen into the river.

Wise was a brother of the William Wise of Anoka whose wife was murdered and who was himself seriously wounded about four years ago. He was about 40 years old and was employed as a taylor by the Lumber Co., wood and coal merchants, at Sixth avenue N and Fifth street, and resided at 528 Seventh avenue N.

Twins Accidental Drowning.

At an autopsy this morning Deputy Coroner M. J. Ryan decided that the two boys who were drowned in the man's head or body. Detectives Heintz and Hanson, who had charge of the case, are positive that Wise attempted to cross the railroad bridge while intoxicated and missed his footing.

ANOTHER LANDMARK GONE

Old Harlow A. Gale House Being Torn Down.

Wreckers are tearing down the old Harlow A. Gale residence, which has stood at 418 Second avenue S. for thirty-six years, and was during its early days one of the mansions of the city where the first building of the day gathered and where Mr. and Mrs. Gale were famous for keeping open house.

When it was built, the house was on the street grade, but a gradual lowering of the grade left it standing a full story above the street, which came to be known facetiously as "Dutch Gap." Mr. Gale lived in the house for fifteen years, afterward moving out to Hawthorn avenue.

The Harlow A. Gale house was in the class with the S. C. Gale stone residence; which was torn down to make room for the new Northwestern bank building; the Major Crafts house, which stood at Fourth street and First avenue S, where the Century building now stands, and the Daniel R. Barber building, formerly at Fourth street and Second avenue S.

CARPENTERS WALK OUT

PRINCIPLE OF THE OPEN SHOP INVOLVED IN STRIKE OF TWENTY OF C. F. HAGLIN'S MEN.

Because C. F. Haglin, the contractor, refused to discharge some of his workmen who were dropped from the union rolls Jan. 1 for refusing to subscribe to a fine, twenty men employed by Mr. Haglin on the Peavey residence, on Park avenue, walked out yesterday afternoon, and there is some danger of a general tie-up in building circles.

The workmen whom Mr. Haglin refuses to discharge are a part of that small body which stuck by the contractor during a walkout on a big electric wiring job last summer, when the temporary employment of a few non-union electricians caused a general strike at a critical time. These workmen were fined by their various unions, refused to submit to the fine, and were dropped Jan. 1.

Since then the unions have sought to have Mr. Haglin discharge them, but he has stood by them. The walk-out yesterday, while a small thing in itself, involves the principle of the open shop and hence interests the Building Trades' Council with its 6,000 members, and the Builders and Traders' Exchange, of which Mr. Haglin is a member, and before which the question has been taken for action this afternoon.

Mr. Haglin is accused by the union men with having advised his employees against paying the fine. "To this he enters a denial and says: "I did not bribe them to return to work or do anything more than appeal to their sense of honor and justice, and they did not get any gratuitous advice from me about paying their fines. They simply objected to being fined on the principle of the thing, and were willing to be dropped from the union rather than pay their fines."

At the meeting of the carpenters' union last night the action of the striking carpenters was endorsed.

MISS LA MOURE DIES

Typhoid Fever Takes Daughter of Senator Jud La Moure.

Miss Mattie La Moure, only daughter of Senator Jud La Moure, of Pembina, N. D., died at the home of Mrs. William Hunter, 1611 Elliott avenue Friday. The remains were taken to North Dakota last night. Miss La Moure spent the winter in Florida, and came to Minneapolis a few weeks ago. She was here but a short time when she was taken ill of typhoid fever which it is believed she contracted in the south. She was 27 years old.

AMES' DEFENSE HELPS THE STATE

CROSS - EXAMINATION BRINGS OUT DAMAGING EVIDENCE.

Defense Unwittingly Elicits Testimony Which Can Hardly Fail to Impress Jury with Extent of Graft System Under the Ames Administration—Case to Be Resumed Monday.

Thomas R. Brown, private secretary to Dr. Ames during his last term as mayor of Minneapolis, and Christopher C. Norbeck, an Ames detective, now serving a three-year sentence in Stillwater for "grafting," were the only witnesses called yesterday afternoon in the Ames bribery case. At the close of Norbeck's cross-examination court was adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

The state will complete its case Monday, and the defendant's fate should be in the jury's hands by Wednesday night or Thursday morning at the latest.

The most noticeable feature in the examinations of these witnesses, as in that of the Minneapolis witnesses, was that evidence of the far-reaching plan of the so-called Ames graft system, which was carefully excluded by the defendant's lawyers in the first trial, was brought out this time in cross-examination. This fact is pleasing to the county attorney, whose principal fear in the case was that the jury would be loth to believe a man of Dr. Ames' standing would stoop to accept a paltry $20 bribe.

Norbeck testified principally to his seeing Gardner pay over a roll of bills to Dr. Ames, which, a strenuous cross-examination elicited from him, Gardner had told him was the result of great collections. Mr. Cary failed in an attempt to rattle the witness or to impeach his testimony.

Norbeck told practically the same story that he told at the last trial, and corroborated Gardner in regard to the latter's appointment as a special officer and his visits to the women from whom he collected protection money.
