

IOWA'S MYSTERY IS CLEARED AWAY

Mrs. Butterfield, Supposed to Have Been Murdered by Her Husband, Is Found.

Special to The Journal. Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 10.—Carroll county's murder mystery was untangled here by the finding of a letter addressed by Charles Butterfield, the supposed victim, to the postmaster at Lanesboro, completely exonerating her husband from the crime for which he came near being lynched twenty-five miles southwest of Fort Dodge on Sunday.

Mrs. Butterfield has been missing since July 17, and her disappearance furnished one of the big mysteries of the year. The finding of bloody clothes on the Butterfield farm by Sheriff Anderson put the fact that Butterfield immediately after his wife's disappearance went to live with the woman who caused his domestic trouble, led to the murder theory. Mrs. Butterfield's letter explaining the whole case is as follows:

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 10.—Postmaster Lanesboro, Iowa: Please let Sheriff Fred Anderson of Jefferson know that my husband is not a murderer. It is true that Charlie did not harm me the night after our quarrel because of my attention to the Wash woman. Charlie came home Saturday evening and found me there with our five children. He had deserted me April 25th because I found a letter he had written to another woman.

When I saw papa after he came back, my little girl begged me to let him stay. I told him that I would forgive him all for the children's sake. He would not come back, but said that if I had put in the crops, he would stay until after harvest, put up the hay, fix things pleasant for us and then depart for good.

That almost a year ago I raised him good night nursed my 18-month-old baby for the last time, and kissed the children in their beds. I could not leave them while he was away. I found out from the house determined to drown myself, but the faces of my children arose between me and that awful black river. I must have gone insane.

The first I knew was two weeks later when I found myself here in Des Moines. So now let Charlie alone. I left because he is strong and better able to care for the children than I am. I raised him. Do not hunt for me, but please see that my babies are cared for.

—Allen Butterfield.

The letter was compared with the handwriting or scraps taken from a diary kept by Mrs. Butterfield while her husband was away. The diary read:

Our dear papa left us April 25, 1904. On Monday, about 5 o'clock, he went down to the bank and stayed there until 10 o'clock then he took the train. He took her to the theater Tuesday night. The last kiss he ever gave me was with liquor on his lips. The first kiss he ever gave me was when he was so pure and good. Oh, how I did love him. Poor, dear, lost darling, God be with you and angels guard you. Poor, broken-hearted Allen.

Our dear papa came back to see us June 21, 1904. Lennie and I were plowing corn. We were so glad to see him. He went away again about 10 o'clock. I thought it was to see him again. God, how can I live thru it all?

Mrs. Butterfield found. Mrs. Butterfield was found here this afternoon. She confirms the story of her disappearance and still loves her husband desperately, but will not return to him. She is working as a waitress at the Nelson house.

Her hand slipped and she fell backward beneath the machine, her hair, loosely dressed, catching in the revolving crank shaft. In a few seconds the scalp was torn from her head.

TEACHERS FAIL TO GET RICH QUICK

Chicago Instructors Caught, but Promise One Will Be Punished.

New York Sun Special Service. Chicago, Aug. 10.—The smashup of a new "get-rich-quick" scheme, involving the sale of almost a hundred public school teachers, was ventilated before Master-in-Chancery Sawyer yesterday afternoon in the restoration of the Consumers Coal company. It is alleged that a teacher who sold stock appealed to the school board for the return of the money.

The secretary will manage the service thru complete reorganization. Lack of organization and system has handicapped the efforts to furnish ample food for the strikers. MINNEAPOLIS DRY GOODS CO. Why Your Dollar Goes Farthest Here

Sifted down, merchandising is simply buying and selling. They are the twin screws that drive the store ship to success or failure. Methods of gathering and distributing merchandise vary greatly with different stores. This, in a nutshell, is the policy here: To buy directly from makers at home and abroad, cutting out the third party and his profit wherever possible. To this end we maintain buying offices in the leading commercial centers of America and Europe. In distributing our wares, we mark them on a narrow margin of profit. We do not burden our selling expenses with the cost of prizes, premiums, stamps or other glib "something for nothing" schemes. We tolerate no misrepresentation. We aim to have every dollar spent here do its duty, to give your dollar greater purchasing power than it has elsewhere, without sacrificing quality one iota. This is why we can serve you best.

GOELET JEWELS FOUND IN SAFE

"Stolen" Gems, Valued at $200,000, Hedged About With Mystery.

New York Sun Special Service. New York, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Ogden Goelet's jewels, valued at $200,000, and which were reported stolen from Newport, were found by her in her safe in this city late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Goelet made the "find," it is said, on the investigation of private detective agencies of Police Richards of Newport, who were simultaneously seized with the idea that the missing property might be secured under lock and key in its accustomed place.

Why the idea did not strike the detectives and the astute chief of police sooner is not known, as beyond modestly admitting that they told Mrs. Goelet where to lay her hands on the jewels, the sleuths refuse to talk. One of the chief mysteries of the case now is why the detectives, if they knew the jewels were in the safe in this city, did not inform Mrs. Goelet as soon as she notified them of her supposed loss.

The mystery of prime importance is, if the jewels really were stolen, how did they get back into the safe in this city, to be opportunely found by the owner?

The fog which wraps the affair is, therefore, by no means dissipated by this development, and there is talk of an inside job, that was pulled off by some one intimately acquainted with Mrs. Goelet, and who knew enough about her and her affairs to be in possession of the combination of her safe at the time of the robbery.

Publicity made its longer dishonest retention decidedly dangerous. Fletcher, the palmist, made a forecast for 1904, published on July 10, in which he said:

"During the summer there will be a great jewel robbery at Newport, which will remain a mystery until the close of the year, when it will be revealed that the thief is one of the owner's family—driven to crime by Stock Exchange gambling."
