IN SEARCH OF HUSBANDS

Two wealthy and fashionable Parisians are about to take their family of four daughters to the United States to have them educated in American fashion and to marry them to Americans. They are M. and Mme. Emile Berteaux. Their theory is that the education which an American girl receives today is the most practical and best suited to the requirements of the times.

Hitherto Americans have sent their daughters to Paris for finish. Now these Parisians of the Parisians have turned the tables. M. and Mme. Berteaux wish to marry their daughters to Americans on the principle that American husbands

FAMOUS WHITE BALL

Miss Alice Roosevelt Was One of the Guests.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 20.—The leading social event of the Newport season, the "bal blanc," was given last night by Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs her villa, Rosecliff, and was attended by nearly all the cottagers. It was the most elaborate affair of the season, and must have cost Mrs. Oelrichs small fortune, so elaborate were the decorations.

The display of gowns and jewels was the most striking ever seen at Newport. The scene at the height of the ball reminded one of court gatherings. The women appeared in white cos-tumes with powdered hair, while the men, as a rule, wore pink hunting coats, white satin breeches with rhinestone buckles, and white stockngs and slippers, while even the at-tendants were dressed in white. Mrs. George King, an Englishwoman, has recently been decorated by the czar with the Russian Red Cross, in appreciation of her splendid services as a nurse during the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-78. This was her first work as an army nurse for which she gave up an excellent social position as the wife of a prominent Lon-don magazine publisher. On her return from the Turkish field of action, she spent some time as superintendent of a hospital at Newcastle-on-the-Tyne, and later saw service as a nurse in the Zulu war, for which she was rewarded by the late Queen Victoria with the South African Get the little book, "The Road to ernment, even in the matter of conferring Wellville," in each pkg.

The summer residents at Wildhurst and cottage owners are greatly interested in landscape gardening and the homes with tall shady trees as a setting and picturesque old-fashioned flower gardens as a background, make the place one of idyllic beauty. Facing the full sweep of the upper lake. Wildhurst shore is one of the most attractive, and nature lends in abundance charms which human hands could not create, but which can be constantly improved upon. No place is better proof of this than Old Orchard, the John F. Wilcox home. This summer the adjoining property, which Mr. Wilcox has owned for some time, has been laid out as a park, the grounds have been terraced and gently sloping lawns lead from the house to a picturesque spot under high-branched trees and amidst grassy turfs. The park is not quite to make the place of the lake in Mr. Dittenhoffer's touring car, dined in the grillroom and remained over for the hop.

This evening there will be the regular hop at the hotel and the young people around the cottages will participate with pleasure in the pleasant weekly party.
