WHAT WOMEN

WANT TO KNOW

By Marion Alcott Prénice.

Relieving Stiff Muscles—Can you suggest any remedies to be applied at home for stiff and unyielding cords and muscles of the back of the neck?

I have suffered so for a year or more and it hurts me to move my head and I have a great deal of pain.—M. H. C.

I wish you had told me if the stiff cords and muscles at the back of the neck were the result of accidental strain because actually existing for several years, have then been more helpful to you. The pain in the back of the head is probably due to the tense condition of the muscles which may also aggravate the case. I suggest that you be examined by your family physician in order that the exact nature of the ailment may be determined. Unless some disease actually exists, the best means of relieving the stiffness is massage, accompanied by the use of some lubricant liniment which will act as a stimulant and help to relax the muscles.

Heat is also invaluable when the pain is severe and the muscles are stiff. The back of the neck is the most sensitive method of applying heat. Keep out of the cool or damp draughts of air, and wear a collar of uniform thickness. A slight change in this respect may induce stiffness and pain when ordinarily no ill effects would result. Have the following massage performed by a competent person, if possible, to avoid fatigue and strain. Bathe the painful parts with the liniment, then place the finger tips of both hands just below the hair (over the spine) and stroke the muscles downward and outward toward the shoulders, repeating the stroke for ten minutes.

Rest the head on the forward on a cushion to avoid fatigue and let the operator massage the back of the head. Do not apply the liniment here as it is quite oily and would soil the fluffy angoré of the hair. Place the finger tips at the base of the neck and gently draw the fingers upward to the curve of the head; continue until the last strokes are over the ears, then reverse the movement. Continue this exercise for fifteen minutes.

FINE COPIES OF OILS

P. CLAUSEN, MINNEAPOLIS SCENE PAINTER, DOES NOTEWORTHY WORK FOR RED WING AUDITORIUM.

P. Clausen, for thirty-four years a scene painter in Minneapolis, has just completed two fine proscenium paintings in oil for the new Red Wing Auditorium. They are copies of two famous oils in the collection of T. B. Walker, and were reproduced at the public library in one of the rooms of the Fine Arts society. The two works are declared masterpieces by Lowell A. Lamoreaux, the architect who ordered the pictures, and by other experts. The colors and the outlines themselves are produced with great fidelity and with the skill which is required in enlarging properly an ordinary-sized oil painting to ten by fourteen feet.

One view is by Hans Dahl, of a scene in the fjords of Norway after a storm. The waves are still choppy and the sky is still lowering. Back home from their shelter places are sailing several boats with hardy Norwegians. In the foreground a young Scandinavian makes bold love to a ruddy-faced flaxen-haired girl, while her companion casts a jealous look straight ahead, ignoring the courtship youth, whom she undoubtedly cares for herself. The second study is a beautiful Venetian scene by Ziem. This is copied with great success.

Mr. Clausen has worked twenty days on the two paintings. They will be placed in frames at either side of the auditorium arch. The drop curtain at the 1,000 seat theater and the famous "Bonnie" scene on the curtain at the St. Paul Metropolitan theater, and also the large foyer paintings, are the work of Mr. Clausen. He has been employed some time by the Northern Pacific to paint scenes from nature, and has finished two panoramas of Seattle and Tacoma for the company, the originals hanging in the Boston block studio.
