THE WITCH DEFEATED

Her Power Overcome in "The Sad Shepherd."

The beautiful old play which will be presented at the International auditorium next Friday night for the benefit of Ruskin Hall is the romantic tale of Robin Hood and his merry men, told in some of the most exquisite poetry in English literature. It was the last stage work of Ben Jonson, the contemporary of Shakespeare. The play is full of interesting comedy and ends with a realistic witch hunt.

Robin Hood has invited the shepherds of Belvoir Vale to spend a day of feasting and merry-making with him in Sherwood forest. The only cloud over a very happy day is the despair of Aeglamour, "The Sad Shepherd," over the loss of Farine, who is reported as drowned. Farine, in fact, has been taken by Maudlin, the witch, and imprisoned, as she intends Farine for her own son, Lovel. The witch, disguising herself as Marian, orders the venison killed for the feast to be sent to her (Maudlin's) house, thus throwing Robin Hood and his guests into perplexity. In the end the witch is hunted down after transforming herself into a hare, and Farine is restored to the sad shepherd. In the play there is a love story in the lives of Annie, a shepherdess, and Karolin, a shepherd, whose love is born of a kiss which is exchanged under orders of the sad shepherd. These two are betrothed, and the guests join in a country dance.

WAYS ARE DARK; TRICKS ARE VAIN

CAMPAIGN CLIMAX BRISTLES WITH STORY TELLING.

How One Toga-Seeker Stole a Horse—Bums Utilized to Kill a Candidate by a "Tight Wad" Canvas—Singing of a Helper Stirred Sleepy Patrolmen to Action.

On the eve of a crisis in the political affairs of men, the nervousness incident to the approaching climax is being counteracted by the relation of experiences which shed a wistful light on the situations of those most involved in the scramble for nomination. There is told the true story of how Otto E. Greely, campaign manager for John A. Schiener, candidate for the republican mayoralty nomination, inadvertently turned horse thief and had the police department on his trail before he had time to reform.

It was about 10 o'clock Wednesday morning when Mr. Greely hastily summoned every rig, and rushed manly down the Phoenix building stairs and out of the front entrance. He threw the hitching weight into a red-wheeled, blue-cushioned buggy, such as he had ordered, and dashed off down Fourth street S in tow of a sorrel horse. Standing on the opposite side of the street Max Sturm, party organizer with Charles Field, of the rig in question, beheld the abduction.

He hastily informed Mr. Field of the outrage and Mr. Field muttering lurid anathemas on the unknown lawbreaker, seized the telephone and enlisted the sympathy and assistance of Chief of Police Conroy.

While he was telephoning bystanders observed Mr. Greely returning to drive away a second later in another buggy. A moment thereafter Mr. Field appeared on the scene and was amazed to find his property returned intact. "Who was he? Where is he?" demanded the man Mr. Field had named.

"He was a large man and he just went into the bank," answered the truthful Max; and at a late hour in the afternoon Mr. Field was still ruminating about the Phoenix building looking for "that man."

He had taken the wrong rig. Another story goes the rounds is that of a candidate in a campaign which may properly be described as recent who designed peculiarly atrocious methods of putting a rival through combat in the lower sections of the city.

First securing two villainous looking specimens of the law, he armed them with his rival's cards, gave them some money—not much—and sent them forth with instructions which were carried out in this manner. The disreputable twain would invade the precincts of a saloon in the Washington avenue neighborhood and after passing around the room the candidate's card would loudly proclaim that he was a "good fellow," "the best ever," a "friend of the boys," and generally entitled to the votes of those present.

To this the thirsty throng present would readily assent, licking their anticipatory chops the while. Then would the characterless hirelings step to the bar, order one glass beer, solemnly take turns drinking the same and as solemnly walk out amid the muttering of the mob.

While the storm was yet brewing the agents of the candidate who developed the diabolical plot would appear with cards of the said diabolical candidate and with a cheery invitation to everybody present to "step up and have something on Mr. Blank," pass around the candidate's cards, and the hirelings would get most of the votes from that section of the city.

There was a great commotion about First avenue and Third street at 2 o'clock of Thursday morning and the cause of the same has not been explained to many of those whose attention was attracted to the riotous scene. Great was the surprise of the officers on the beat, when at 2 o'clock of Thursday morning there issued from the upper floors of the Third street side of the federal building the most appalling aggregation of uncanny vocal sounds. Ten thousand demons in distress would have been but a burlesque quartet in comparison.

"Postoffice must be getting robbed," said one officer on the corner. "No, it's a loose lunatic," shouted his companion as they rushed for the building. Much undoing of bolts and bars, hard rushing up the stairs and a rapid descent upon the rooms from which the lost soul was giving vent to its feelings discovered the cause of the uproar.

It was John Dahl singing after having mailed 5,000 letters for Al J. Smith. Meeting Solicitors. It is a common fact to solicitors that every man who is called upon frequently by agents soliciting business develops a method of his own of turning them down. Some always agree to do anything the solicitor says to save time and then promise to buy in the near future. Others are honest and try to argue the matter, but they soon learn that this is the most honest way for both customer and solicitor as it saves time for both. This question of meeting men is worth considering just as it will pay you to look into the merits of golden grain feed beer and try a case in your home. Knowing that it is the best money you can't want, at least, to try it for yourself!

THE UNIVERSITY FOR THE CAMPAIGN

Treasurer of "U" Republican Club Explains Collections.

D. E. Bowe, secretary and treasurer of the University Republican club sends a letter to The Journal explaining that the collection of $2 fees from each candidate who spoke before the club at a recent meeting was necessary to secure money to defray expenses of the meeting, and what balance was left over would go towards work of the campaign. He notes that the University club is a body of grafters—which was never alleged. His communication is as follows: To the Editor of The Journal: In view of the article published in The Journal of Saturday in reference to money collected from speakers for the privilege of addressing the Republican club of the university, it is but fair to say that the money was collected solely for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the meeting, it was not by the speakers with the full understanding that it was to be so used, and with the pledge on the part of the club that any money received in exchange of their names should be devoted to the work of the campaign, after the nominations have been made. Not a man in the club will receive a single penny of the money for his individual advantage, and the club heartily repudiates the thought of receiving contributions from candidates except for the legitimate expenses of the campaign. As noted in your paper, a receipt was given each candidate for the money collected from him and for such money he hold myself personally responsible. The University club is not a body of grafters.

Louis W. Stayart, a successful Chicago wholesale grocer, who owes his life to Healthtone, and who is pleading it on the market out of gratitude for his cure. Twelve years ago Mr. Stayart was victim of extreme nervous prostration, unable to attend to his business as president of the great mercantile establishment which he founded, and was given up by a noted physician called in consultation regarding his case. He prescribed a medicine which restored him to robust health within a short time. Others tried the same medicine and were cured. Mr. Stayart and his family have used it as a beverage daily, since his cure, and have never known a day's sickness. His children drink it as freely and as often as they wish. Mr. Stayart's friends urged him to give it to the world; he argued that it was his duty. One serious obstacle stood in the way. The doctor refused to allow it to be used. After years of waiting and persuasion he yielded. The result is Healthtone.

I WANT every man or woman, who is nervous, debilitated, pale, tired, worn out and "brain-fagged" to have a bottle of Healthtone. It will cost you nothing and prove to you, beyond a doubt, there is one tonic for the nerves and blood that will do you good. It is costing me a large sum of money to give two million bottles of Healthtone away, but I rely absolutely on the merits of my remedy to repay me. This must show to you how much confidence I have in Healthtone.

Healthtone is not a bitter nauseous drug, but a pleasant beverage free from alcohol or drugs. It can be served at meal time for it makes a pleasant and refreshing drink. It is the modern medicine and the very latest scientific remedy. I would not offer it to the public unless I knew that Healthtone was to become the greatest household remedy of to-day. And to prove to you and your friends what Healthtone is and what it will do, I will give you each a bottle free to try.

Rev. H. B. Reed, a prominent Chicago minister, Pastor of St. James English Lutheran Church, says:

"Permit me to say that we have used Healthtone in our household and have found it to be not only an excellent tonic, but at the same time a pleasant refreshing drink. It is all that its name implies and has the advantage of being one of those pleasant remedies that children like."

If your blood is weak, your digestion impaired and you have no appetite, if you can't sleep at night and have that "tired" feeling all day long, try Healthtone; let me show you how easy it is to get well.
