THE case of the South Dakota Central Railroad company vs. the Milwaukee road, involving the land about half a mile long on the right-of-way of the Milwaukee company in Sioux Falls, was dismissed by Judge Carlson on the ground that the laws of South Dakota do not authorize the taking by one railroad company the right-of-way of another which is utilizing the right-of-way as a common carrier.

WISCONSIN

CERTAIN TO WIN, SAYS LA FOLLETTE

DECLARES HIS MAJORITY WILL BE LARGER THAN BEFORE.

Stalwart Is Not a New Thing and Many Democrats Will Vote for Him—Republican Electors Will Carry the State by a Large Plurality.

Special to The Journal. Stoughton, Wis., Oct. 24.—Governor La Follette has not given an authorized interview since he was nominated until he was interviewed here after his political address.

"You are to be elected?" he was asked. "Yes," said he, "I am confident that I am to be elected by a majority larger than I had two years ago, perhaps by a majority larger than I have ever had. I hope to get many votes from democrats who believe in my principles, and do not expect to be cut more than usual by the stalwarts."

"You see, this is not a new fight. There has always been a stalwart bolt. I figured that I was cut 35,000 votes by the stalwarts in 1902, when I ran for governor the second time. Perhaps I shall lose more votes than that this year, but I shall not lose enough to defeat me."

"It took a long time to get the primary election law passed, and I believe the people will vote in this fall, and I believe approve it."

"I have had a rate commission, a plan for a body of men, and I believe the power to fix rates and see that they are lived up to, who shall have the power to examine books and verify the accounts of the public utility system, in my mind, for some years, but I have never allowed it in a republican platform until this year, because I do not believe it is a fair thing to do at once. I firmly believe the legislature will pass this rate commission bill."

I firmly believe the legislature will pass this rate commission bill."

"Yes, in time."

"Do your ideas go so far as to contemplate municipal ownership of these public utilities?" "No, unless such a plan of supervision falls. I do not think it will fall. I am confident it will not. If it does fall, it is found there is a loose end, for example, where the corporations might control the commission and thus regulate the rates themselves, then some such step as municipal ownership would have to come, for the people must be protected against these corporations."

"Will President Roosevelt carry Wisconsin?" "Certainly, there can be no doubt of it. I do not think the stalwarts will cut him, and the republican electors do not appear in the stalwart column on the ballot. Still the republicans will carry Wisconsin."

"They have had a lot of it to do in the last fifteen years. Of course, there will be some who will not vote for him, but the majority of those of wrong marked ballots will not amount to much."

MICHIGAN

STATE MAKERS IN NEW CAMPAIGN

RESIDENTS OF PENINSULA ANXIOUS FOR SEPARATION.

Many Are Out of Touch with the Southern Part of the State, and Take but Little Interest in Public Affairs—Three Probable Candidates for Capital.

Special to The Journal. Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 24.—The old idea of making a new state of the upper peninsula has been revived by the citizens of this part of Michigan. But the old plan of taking on a part of Wisconsin has been dropped, the general opinion being that the upper peninsula is large and rich enough to become a separate state without acquiring any new territory.

Advocates of the plan favor calling the state Superior, which would be the most representative name that could be chosen. The upper peninsula is growing rapidly, both in population and wealth. Its mining interests are assuming mammoth proportions, while it will be but a short time before some of its cities will be large manufacturing centers.

One of the chief reasons for wanting a change is that the peninsula really has very little in common in politics, the northern part of the state has never been represented as it should be, leading politicians feeling that they have been given nothing but the crumbs. Their strongest men have been turned down in favor of less worthy aspirants for public favor, simply because, it is alleged, the upper peninsula has always been sure to give a big republican majority.

A majority of the people of the upper peninsula know nothing of the southern part of the state, and they are not interested in it. Therefore, they do not take the interest in state affairs that they would if the upper peninsula were a separate state by itself.

Marquette, the Soo and Menominee will probably enter the race for the state capital. Marquette is the best natural harbor as it is nearest to the center of the peninsula, but the other towns have many advantages that would make them strong bidders for the prize.

MINNESOTA

BRUTAL MURDER IN WOODS

ANDREW BLUM SLAIN BY SPADE AND KNIFE IN HANDS OF UNKNOWN MAN.

Two Harbors, Minn., Oct. 24.—The remains of the murdered man found at a deserted lumber camp near mile post No. 44, on the Duluth & Iron Range road, two miles north of Highland station and fifteen miles north of here, have been identified by several persons as those of Andrew Blum, and not Ed Peterson, as formerly reported.

The crime appeared to be one of the most brutal and senseless ever committed in this part of the state. The details as yet only can be surmised from the appearance of the room where the murder was done, and the wounds on the remains. The motive was robbery, that the crime was premeditated, and possibly was perpetrated while the victim was sleeping, is probable.

The remains were found in an old ravelin-roofed house, about 125 feet in the rear of the abandoned camp. The wounds indicated the desperation of the murderer, and the precautions taken by him to make sure his victim was dead. The first blow was inflicted by a spade, which struck on the temple and cut a long gash. Four times was a knife driven into the man's left breast; his throat was cut, and the back of his head was pounded into a pulp. The body then was dragged feet first to the place where found.

About 150 feet from the body, hidden under some brush which the person who concealed it took care to keep covered, was a spade and the contents of which indicated it was the property of A. O. Hamnerberg.

Hamnerberg had been employed at one of O'Brien's camps at Cloquet river for about nine days. He left that camp Friday, Oct. 14, in company with Hamnerberg, and they started south on the Duluth & Iron Range road. Hamnerberg arrived in Two Harbors and stated that he had had a thing to eat for a day and a half, and he carried his effects in a bag over his shoulder. He took a boat for Duluth that same evening. He was at the home of his brother-in-law, in Superior, on Sunday, and on Monday went to Duluth, where he cashed his timecheck. Every possible effort is being made to locate him, as it is thought he may be able to give some information.
