MRS. HARRIS PERISHED AFTER BRAVE FIGHT FOR LIFE.

Special to The Journal. Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 12.—Mrs. George Harris of Powell township, Edmunds county, met a horrible death while driving home at night from the home of her sister, who is sick. There is no living witness to the accident, but it is surmised that the horse strayed from the road and passed close enough to the well to allow the buggy wheels to strike it, tipping Mrs. Harris out.

The well is about four feet wide and nine feet deep and contains about five feet of water, and when searched from Mrs. Harris the next day she was sitting in the bottom of it, her husband and children felt no alarm at her failure to return, as she frequently remained over night with her sick sister.

When the husband arose in the morning and discovered the empty buggy and horse at the stable door he was alarmed and immediately commenced a search, but it was some time before the body was discovered.

CORNSTALKS KILL FARMERS' STOCK

DISEASE BREAKS OUT WITH VIRULENCE IN NEBRASKA.

Texas live seems to have been thronged recently from the state by dipping, but many of the stockmen are keeping up the dipping on account of the higher price offered for dipped cattle. "Only a few of the cattle districts of Nebraska are under quarantine, and it is thought that by spring there will be none. Blackleg has been the most common disease of the country since vaccination has been used as a preventive.

Some cattle died suddenly in the warmer months with all the internal symptoms of blackleg, but with none of the external symptoms. The veterinarian examined several cases and declares that the deaths were due to pneumonia, caused by exposure to the weather. An animal kept in a cold barn after a warm day is apt to contract pneumonia and die in a few hours. In the warmer months most animals have but light coats of hair and the rain and wind beat them, causing chill and congestion of the heart and lungs, which later develops into pneumonia.

FINDS BOY AFTER 19 YEARS

Crookston Interested in Romantic Lost and Found Story.

CROOKSTON, MINN.—After a weary search of nineteen years for a missing son and brother, a Crookston home was made happy today by the news that the lost one was found. The story is a romantic one and has interested many.

Several years ago a family of the name of Creighton was broken up. The mother and father separated, the father going to Chicago with the daughter and the oldest child while the mother and youngest boy remained in Iowa. Mrs. Creighton then assumed the name of Smyth. Being forced to earn a living for herself and her children, she worked for a music house and began a life of a traveling saleswoman.

Not being able to take her boy with her upon all of her trips she was in the habit of leaving him with a friend in Jessup, Iowa. Upon her return from a journey she found that her boy was gone, no one knew where, and that the old lady, who had had care of him was dead. She made every effort to find the child, but was unsuccessful.

A short time ago she learned the address of the postmaster who had been in Jessup at the time of the death of the old lady, and writing him she got information concerning the case. He wrote that it was his belief the child had been taken to an orphan's home. She wrote the postmaster and he informed that James Creighton, her son, had been received there nineteen years ago and had been adopted shortly after by a family named Barr. Further inquiry elicited the fact that the boy was now known as Jay Barr and was living in Manchester, Iowa. The mother wrote to him at once and told him that Mrs. E. P. Spink of this city was his sister.

MANITOBA

SEES VICTORY FOR THE WEST

LAURIER'S TRIUMPH MEANS NO CHECK ON PROSPERITY.

Its Significance to the Prospective Settler in the Canadian West—Tariff Wall Will Not Be Mounted Highest—Consumers vs. Manufacturers.

Special to The Journal. Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 12.—According to the policy as stated by the liberal government before the election and, in fact, carried out by this government during its last term, the western country, now that the government is returned to power, will be aided by a further policy of low tariff duties, a vigorous immigration campaign and increased transportation facilities, says a correspondent for the Commercial West of Minneapolis. The Laurier government has been returned to power by an overwhelming majority and even the east, which it was supposed would support the opposition, owing to the fact that it promised a high tariff wall to assist manufacturers, voted with few exceptions for the liberal government's policy which would be more beneficial to the western country.

This policy should interest incoming settlers. The government has declared that anything calculated to make living here cheaper for the consumer was the very best policy for the country as a whole, for it is imperative to the continued prosperity of the Dominion on the same rate of progress as at present that no stoppage should take place in the flow of immigration.

It is conceded by nearly everyone that the policy of the government in expending large sums of money for immigration was greatly assisted by the fact that prosperity which the Canadian west enjoys, and this is one of the planks of the government on which it was re-elected.

Triumph of Consumers.

The campaign should be of some interest to Americans as it was fought out recently by the conservative government in favor of a higher protective duty and the manufacturers of eastern Canada, who were greatly assisted by the campaign as it would, they asserted, and their interests to have the wall across the forty-ninth parallel made so high that it would be impossible for American manufacturers to compete with the present government will not make this wall higher. On machines it implements the per cent duty will be all that will be put on the tariff will likely be changed in no respect except probably on Pennsylvania.

More towards the west the development states, no move in this direction will be made until definite advances come from the United States.

As to freezing wheat it is not likely that anything will be done in this respect as there is no reason to believe that it will make any difference to Canada. The tariff on wheat is a matter that takes towards the Chamberlain policy will be a passive one, for, of course, this must be done wholly from Great Britain, the United States and Canada, which must Canada's agriculture and industry and make Canada more attractive for the farmer, there is little doubt.

Winnipeg River Power.

It is realized here that all that is necessary to bring Winnipeg to the importance of a leading manufacturing city is the supply cheap power for manufacturing purposes. Electric power is now being sought, as steam power, owing to the scarcity of coal, is out of the question. That cheap power will be supplied to the city is a matter of the water power of the Winnipeg river was realized some time ago, but it is only now that this work has been prosecuted to an extent large enough to make it certain that the power supply will be produced. The work being done on the river has reached an advanced stage.

The Winnipeg General Electric company is the one that is doing the work, and rapid strides are being made in the work. The principle involved is simple, being merely a dam across the river to give the required head to the water, which is delivered thru a battery of penstocks to the turbines. After performing its work the water is carried off thru a tail race having a natural fall.

This is the principle of the power plant. It has been a problem involving the employment of a large force of men and the outfit of a large sum of money. Under the original plan it was the intention to build a dam across the river and feed the water direct from the forebay into the penstocks, but it was found that a modification of this plan was necessary. The dam was abandoned, and it would not only furnish a more constant supply of water, but would also do away with a great part of the difficulties arising from floating and anchor logs. The dam consisted of the excavation of a canal seven miles in length, leading the water from the main river to the powerhouse.

The engineers are now getting out and several gangs of men are getting out the stock and constructing the retaining walls.

Scheme of Transmission.

The dam is 600 feet in length and 40 feet in height, being composed of solid concrete. When the works have been completed a wing dam will be used to divert the current from the main river thru the canal and at normal low water level sufficient will be brought thru to develop electrical energy to the extent of 40,000 horse power.

This is the plan for the development, but only about one-third of this will be used at first, the remainder being kept in reserve pending an increase in the demand. The company will purchase or appropriate a right of way twenty feet in width from the powerhouse to Winnipeg, a distance of sixty miles, and on it will erect a line of steel towers carrying the cable along the river and generators will be delivered at a high voltage. This voltage will be again reduced on its arrival at the city, where it will be delivered in the required voltage to the consumers.

There is a large quantity of machinery already on the ground, which will be installed as soon as the buildings are ready. This consists of turbines, motors, dynamos and generators, main river, several villages of men are at the main works and it is the intention to deliver power in Winnipeg by the end of October, 1905. It is the expectation of the first delivery, amounting to about fifteen thousand horsepower, will have a tendency to reduce the cost of electricity for lighting and power purposes, and will also bring down the price of gas. If this is the case it will enable several factories to operate profitably, and will have a tendency to tempt others to open in the city. The estimated cost of the whole work is $2,000,000.
