KELLOGG SAYS HE'S FOR CLAPP

St. Paul Senatorial Possibility Declares He Will Not Be a Candidate.

He Says the Party is Already Bound to Nominate Clapp.

FRANK B. KELLOGG, St. Paul Politician, Who Declines to Be a Senatorial Candidate.

Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul today formally withdrew his name from the senatorial contest with which political gossip has been persistently connected it as that of a Ramsey county "dark horse," to be brought out in event of Clapp's strength failing.

Mr. Kellogg, while admitting that many friends had approached him on the subject, gave out the following statement:

"I am not a candidate for United States senator and shall not be. Senator Clapp was indicated by the state convention as the candidate of the republican party, and this the convention followed the example of previous conventions in nominating Senator Davis and Senator Nelson.

"Senator Clapp is entitled to, and I believe he will receive, the support of the republicans for that position.

"I believe that a large majority of the members of the legislature have voluntarily announced their intention of voting for him. I do not think anyone else has any chance in the field.

"The statement was the most important development of the day. The feature of it is that it leaves those members of the Ramsey delegation who preferred Kellogg, and who are estimated to number from three to six, either to declare for Clapp, or else go over to John B. Gillilan of Hennepin.

"Friends of both Clapp and Gillilan will probably not be slow to jump into the opening.

"Congressman C. B. Buckman of Little Falls was the only new arrival of political importance in St. Paul today.

"The ten republican members of the house in the sixth congressional district are all for Clapp, and are estimated to number from three to six, either to declare for Clapp, or else go over to John B. Gillilan of Hennepin.

CHADWICK DEBTS OVER A MILLION

Strange Case Is Likened to the Humbert Mystery in Paris.

Woman Borrowed Like a Money King, and Spent Money Like Queen.

New York, Dec. 1.—The announcement that one of the largest creditors of Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick, the Cleveland woman whose financial affairs came into prominence in a sensational way a few days ago, had agreed upon a settlement, has given a new phase to this strange case.

"At the same time the air of mystery which has surrounded every turn thus far made was still present today and there was absolutely nothing beyond conjecture to indicate what the outcome would be.

"Mrs. Chadwick will be met at the statement made by her attorneys, but at the same time they decline to say anything as to the source from which the necessary funds will be obtained.

"Mrs. Chadwick will produce the necessary collateral to meet all just obligations at the proper time. We do not feel called upon to disclose the nature of this collateral or from whence it will come.

"This statement in brief covers the attitude taken by Mrs. Chadwick's legal advisers. Beyond that they have absolutely nothing to say. They would not discuss the value of the securities said to be in the possession of Ira Reynolds, treasurer of the Wade Park Banking company in Cleveland.

"Claims Near a Million. The settlement of the Newton claim, when made, will reduce Mrs. Chadwick's alleged obligation by $100,000. At the same time, however, there remain claims aggregating at least $600,000. That they may reach a greater sum is apparent from a statement made by her attorney yesterday.

"Mrs. Chadwick has not yet formally asked for a statement of the amount of the claims already filed against Mrs. Chadwick, but declined to do so. When asked if they would reach $1,000,000 he replied: "Well, you may place it at that figure. For all I know there may be claims for $20,000,000 against her."

"Will Issue Statement. It is now Mrs. Chadwick's plan to issue at the time she settles with her pressing creditors a signed statement for the purpose of dispelling the cloud which has overshadowed her name because of the reports that she is Lydia De Vere, a convict and forger.

"Mrs. Chadwick has declined to issue the statement on which she has set her heart. This statement will include: A denial that she was ever convicted of a crime; A denial that she was ever charged with forgery.

"A frank statement concerning her antecedents; A positive proof that she is not Lydia De Vere; Enough enlightenment concerning her personal difficulties to remove all doubt of criminal intent.

"It was learned today that the late Senator Hanna, in a letter, in which he made a general appraisal of the woman, that Mrs. Chadwick was a thoroughly reliable person. This occurred when Mrs. Chadwick was in the city for an appraisal of some goods she brought from Europe.

DIAG INAUGURATED FOR SEVENTH TIME

Entire Mexican Republic Observes the Day—Ceremonies at the Capital.

City of Mexico, Mexico, Dec. 1.—The inauguration of General Porfirio Diaz, as president of the republic of Mexico for the seventh time, and of Senor don Ramon Corral as first vice president took place today in the hall of the Chamber of Deputies under most auspicious circumstances.

"The afternoon was devoted to field sports and merrymaking. Tonight there will be music on the various plazas by military bands and an inaugural ball to which over 1,000 persons have received invitations.

Informal announcement came today from authentic sources that the control of the Chicago Great Western system had finally passed to E. W. Harriman, co-operating with the Chicago & North-Western and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul roads.

Joint control of the Great Western by the North-Western and the Milwaukee will take out of competition one of the most progressive and aggressive western lines ever chartered.

The Rockefeller and the Vanderbilts were both represented at the final conference with A. B. Stickney of the Great Western at Chicago. Mr. Stickney has always been ready to sell when he got the price he believed proper for the child of his energy, and he has not just enough irritation in the transportation world from time to time in the last ten years to produce the right financial effect.

Railroad men do not believe that the transfer of Great Western control will put the road out of existence. It will simply quiet an influence that has disturbed the transportation world for a long time.

The Great Western has never been a traffic destroyer and did not play doo in the manner, but it was too independent and the only way to get rid of this disturbing element was to buy control.

When the managers of the North-Western and the Milwaukee found this out they took the right tack and it transpires that as a result of the Chicago meeting the management of the road, but not its identity, has passed to the two big lines.

In the deal the southern part of the system will be of most use to the North-Western and the rest of it to the Milwaukee.

San Francisco, Dec. 1.—Since Tuesday of this week officials of the Wells-Fargo Express company and a force of special detectives have been seeking a trace of $15,000 in gold which has disappeared from the company's office in this city.

The money was in double eagles and was delivered to the company's agents for shipment to San Jose. It has been found that the money was properly waybilled, but from that point all trace of the gold is lost.

Whether it was lost or stolen no one knows.

WORLD'S FAIR TO END AT MIDNIGHT

Louisiana Purchase Exposition Closes by Honoring Francis.

St. Louis, Dec. 1.—The Louisiana Purchase Exposition will pass into history at midnight. Today the gates were thrown open to children, and to those who were worthy, but had been unable to attend from pecuniary reasons.

President Francis was the guest of honor today and ceremonies were conducted commemorating the services he has rendered in making the exposition a success.

Is estimated that the attendance today was in the neighborhood of a record-breaker. The official announcement last Sunday night showed that 18,317,457 admissions have been recorded since the exposition opened on April 30.

The largest single day attendance was on Sept. 15, when "St. Louis day" was observed.

Today was proclaimed a holiday by Mayor Wells. A large number of business houses ceased operation today and the public schools were closed.

North-Western and Milwaukee to Co-operate with Him in Its Use.

JOY AMONG JAPS OVER HILL'S FALL

Possession of 203-Meter Hill Points to Early Reduction of Port Arthur.

Russian War Office Apprehensive—Loss of Position Means Beginning of End.

Tokio, Dec. 1.—The Japanese have captured and now hold 203-meter hill, Imperial headquarters made the following announcement yesterday:

"The important position known as 203-meter hill, reported taken by the Japanese, has been the object of severe and continuous fighting, and cable reports from time to time have indicated that many men have been sacrificed in the effort to capture it.

"The position is a dominating height in the range to the westward of the town of Port Arthur, and according to reports, it commands artillery range of the harbor, and a portion of the main town. The distance from the citadel or main defenses is three to four miles.

General Nogi's telegram announcing the capture of 203-meter hill, was received with cheers by the Japanese people. It revives the hope of an early capture of Port Arthur proper. The people have never despaired of the success of the besiegers, but the fortitude of the defenders and prolongation of the siege, which exceeds by months the most liberal preliminary estimates of the time that would be required to accomplish the reduction of the stronghold, have been a source of deep regret, which has been accentuated by the loss of life and disappearance of the soldiers.

"The Russian war office, however, is apprehensive. It is reported that the Russian war office is apprehensive of the loss of 203-meter hill, and that it means the beginning of the end of the Russian position at Port Arthur.

"STANDPATTERS" FORM FOR FIGHT

Opposition to Tariff Revision or Amendment Is Now Solidifying.

Calling of Extra Session Hinges on Big Change in Attitude.

Washington, Dec. 1.—Opposition to tariff revision or amendment is solidifying. Members of the senate and of the house who do not believe the system should be touched are getting their following lined up and are appealing to public opinion against what they say will be radical and dangerous tinkering with the business conditions.

Senators Cullom, Hale and Aldrich have told the president, and have declared openly, that they are opposed to his plan to call an extra session. In the house Speaker Cannon, Seno Payne, John Dill and James A. Tamm are open standpatters.

Perhaps the most open declaration against the president's plan is that which comes from Sen. Eugene Hale of Maine. After discussing the remarkable election returns he said:

"But beyond this (the popularity of Roosevelt's personality), the republican position and the issues which it maintained not only commanded popular support, but those issues were advanced and upheld in just as bold and courageous a fashion, as the republicans and acts of the president. The position of the party upon these great issues—the protective tariff, the currency and the oppressive trusts, was unimpaired. Every attack by the democrats on these positions, touching any of these great issues, was met with overwhelming defeat, and when the American people woke up on the morning after election and knew its results they had a right to expect and to assume that the policy of the party on these great questions was settled, and would be so considered during the next four years of administration."

Senator Hale Defiant. With a note of defiance Senator Hale alluded to the prospect in this wise: "It is no rare thing after a political battle has been won to find the weak sisters coming in and arguing the weak party to lower its colors, and in whole or in part give up what it has won. For myself I do not propose to let this be done in the face of all the opposition to it which I can muster."

Ebb in Revision Tide. For the past few days there has been a decided ebb in the tariff revision tide. Many folk with overwhelming cocksure that there would be a special session of congress in April are now inclined to hedge a bit and to say that perhaps the position will not be able to bring the standpatters over to his way of thinking.

Some of the more timid observers are inclined to believe that the president has for once underestimated something that is too much for his strength.

While I admit that there has been a slight change in the situation, so far as the surface is concerned, I believe it is entirely too early to say whether there will or will not be a special session of congress. Opposition by the standpatters was more for form by the president and his advisers, and it is not more lively than it was known it would be. It would be foolish, just because of the position taken by Speaker Cannon and Senator Hale, to say that revision is all off.

Something definite will probably be known by the middle of the month, by which time the president's conference with party leaders will have been concluded, and in the meantime gossip about an extra session will undoubtedly go from one extreme to another a number of times.

This much may be depended upon: There will be an extra session if the president can get about 100 votes without producing serious party friction. He is too good a party man and disciplinarian to demand revision at the expense of party harmony.

No Factional Split. President Roosevelt does not anticipate a factional split over the tariff. He has no idea of beginning his administration by smashing his party and opening a feud between himself and the powerful men in congress. It is true that there is a situation in prospect which might easily lead to these results, and without some diplomacy the circumstances would almost certainly eventuate in this way. But Mr. Roosevelt is no rubber-stamp man in congress.

Up to the President. Briefly, it is up to President Roosevelt to convert the standpatters in congress if he is to get an extra session, and an amendment of the tariff. It would be fatal for him to go to congress for such legislation without such men as Speaker Cannon, a majority of the ways and means committee, and a majority of the finance committee in the senate actively arrayed against him. Even if he should be able to bill the

300 SHOTS FIRED IN ZEIGLER ATTACK

Machine Guns on Stockade Respond and Militiamen Are Called Out.

Duquoin, Ill., Dec. 1.—According to Sheriff Stein, an attack was made on Zeigler last night. Firing began at the pumping station, two miles north of Zeigler, and spread back to the mining town, where Stein said at least 300 shots were fired. The machine guns responded promptly.

All the militiamen were called out and the sheriff's son called for a posse in Zeigler, but the non-union miners would not respond.

The Zeigler stockade is about 800 feet long and 400 feet wide. It is a tight board fence about fifteen feet high. At each end, at diagonal corners, are blockhouses, in each of which is a machine gun. As soon as darkness approaches, these guns are placed in readiness for an attack.

Superintendent C. C. Whittier refused to give details of the attack, but beyond stating that there was considerable firing, to which the company's machine guns responded, Sheriff Stein said that he could not say whether most of the firing was from the inside or outside of the town. It is not known whether any one was injured.

The Zeigler Coal company has concluded to rush into the mining town as many men as are necessary to work the plant to its fullest capacity. Last evening thirty-five skilled miners were brought in from St. Louis via the St. Louis Valley railroad, by way of De Soto. They arrived in two special coaches, and were drawn directly inside the stockades. The cars were half filled with deputy United States marshals and private guards furnished by the company.

Word is received from Zeigler that six of the twenty-two Pennsylvania miners, who were shipped into Zeigler, deserted last night, bringing their traps out under cover of darkness, and were met by agents of the United Mine Workers, who furnished transportation back to Pennsylvania.

IBSEN'S CONDITION IS BETTER, NOT WORSE

Copenhagen, Dec. 1.—Contrary to the sensational report published in the London Daily Telegraph this morning, in a dispatch from here, Henrik Ibsen continues to improve and his condition is now regarded as satisfactory.

The Telegraph's correspondent said that the illness of Henrik Ibsen had assumed the form of a dangerous anemia, and that he was unable to speak, read or write.

Spent Money Lavishly. There is not a store in Cleveland of any prominence with which Mrs. Chadwick has not had dealings. At some of them she has spent thousands and thousands of dollars, and has paid spot cash. There is not a store in town that has not its story to tell. Here are some of them:

On a recent Christmas eve Mrs. Chadwick invited her husband to go to the theater. Before they left their home on Euclid avenue, she called up a firm of house decorators and gave them instructions. When the theatrical performance and the supper that followed were over they returned to their home. Not a piece of furniture, not a hanging nor a rug, picture or piece of bric-a-brac that had formerly been there remained; everything was changed.

"This is my Christmas present to you," was all she said when she returned. There is a firm of jewelers here in Cleveland who do a business that would break the bank of Tiffany of New York. They are not given to telling what they do for their customers, but here is a story of Mrs. Chadwick's prodigality that is known to almost every clerk in the store.

Some time ago she took twelve young society girls on a trip to Europe. When they returned to Cleveland Mrs. Chadwick went into the private office of the head of the big jewelry firm and displayed twelve exquisite miniatures painted on porcelain by one of the greatest Parisian artists. "I want each one of these framed," she said. Just do them in 18-karat gold and use your own good taste about each one."

This firm is not telling what the amount of their bill was, but it was sent to Mrs. Chadwick and was paid as soon as it was received.
