WATCH FOR RUST; SAYS MACMILLAN

STATE BOTANIST ISSUES WARNING FOR NEXT YEAR.

Danger to Red River Valley Wheat Next Summer—Infection of Rust Fungus from Straw and Wheat Stubble Likely to Spread.

In the opinion of Professor Conway MacMillan of the university, there is every indication of a disastrous wheat-rust in 1925, which will materially affect the wheat crop of the Red River valley. Professor MacMillan has, during the past years, made a careful study of wheat and its ailments, and in an interview today he gives his reasons for a forecast of poor wheat in 1925 and discusses the difference between wheat smut and wheat rust, terms often confused by the public. Professor MacMillan said:

Without desiring to say anything which would influence the market one way or the other, it may be predicted with reasonable confidence that the Red River valley wheat crop of 1925 will show considerable rust. This is because a strong infection of the straw and stubble has been brought about during the season of 1924 and the rust fungus has shown some particularly virulent qualities. A fortunate climatic condition would tend to reduce the damage, but sufficient moisture for the favorable development of the wheat plant is also favored, and the rust-carrying spores, which are not so bright, are an advantage to next year's crop will be gained by the careful selection of seed wheat from fields where rust was prevalent, provided that the seed should be of full weight and high grade. Seedlings of low weight might indicate weakening of the parent plant by the disease.

Formaldehyde No Cure.

I was called upon a few weeks ago by a couple of gentlemen from the east who were in the business of manufacturing chemicals. They were particularly anxious to know whether the formaldehyde method which has proved successful in the treatment of wheat smut could be applied also to rust. Their idea was that what cured smut would also cure rust. They said they had consulted plant breeders, brokers and millers. When I remarked that formaldehyde could never be of the slightest value in the treatment of rust they were much distressed, but I tried to trouble to show them the difference between smut and rust and then they agreed there was nothing in the formaldehyde treatment of rust.

The fact is that while rust and smut are both communicated to the wheat by minute microscopic dust or spores, the infection takes place at a very different time in the life of the kernel. The smut spores are communicated to the wheat kernel as it is maturing and will be found within certain kernels or caught in the beard at the end of the kernel. Various methods, such as immersion in hot water, bluestoning or subjection to formaldehyde vapor, such spores can be killed without destroying the germ of the wheat. Seed which smutted before it begins to grow, permits infection of the seedling and the next crop will be smutty also.

How Rust is Caught.

The rust spores are communicated to the growing plant by atmospheric currents coming from straw or stubble of previous year. Seed which smutted before it leaves of quite different plants. There is no way of disinfecting the atmosphere of a farm. Therefore the problem of checking rust infection is entirely dependent from that of checking smut infection. While seed wheat from a smutty field is almost sure to communicate smut to the next crop, seed wheat from a rusted field, if it is of good weight and appearance, is least likely to produce plants which will be badly rusted. For the plant which produced the good seed in the rusted field evidently survived the rust attack, and in many cases, might be due to accident, but in others it would be true, and it is to rust which might be communicated to the next generation.

How to Check Rust.

To check rust there is only one line of hopeful experiment. That is, the development of rust-proof varieties. To develop such varieties is not possible without a very full knowledge of both of the habits and the physiology of wheat and of the rust fungus.

What the public does not generally know is that modern botanical work is principally concerned with such important economic questions as these. When information about plant diseases is difficult to obtain, it will doubtless be possible before many decades to limit very much the loss to agriculture thru the various ills of the plants.

Professor E. M. Freeman of the botanical department is just about to publish an important book on Minnesota plant diseases which, in my judgment, will be worth a great many thousand dollars to the state. The main thing is to know that rust, smut, and other acts of Providence or accidents, which are not to be checked by scientific methods as soon as they are thoroughly understood.

STATE WON'T SUFFER
Manley's Evidence in Murder Case Can Be Used in Trial.

Coroner Williams has decided that an inquest is unnecessary in the case of M. L. Manley, streetcar conductor killed at the Central avenue grade crossing Sunday night. The conductor and the motorcar are held to be equally to blame. Manley's body has been removed to the home of his brother-in-law, M. J. Carlson, 507 Central avenue. The funeral will take place Wednesday.

Some additional talk has been occasioned by the fatal accident on account of Manley's connection as a witness in the recent Columbia Heights murder case. As a result of his testimony in the preliminary hearing, however, this evidence will be all that is required and the state's case will not be weakened by his death.

CHILD LABORERS GROWING FEWER

GOOD SHOWING FOR STATE SEEN IN INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

Factory Figures for 1924 Are Completed—They Show 115,085 Wage-Earners—Lumber Industry Employs Largest Number—Increase in Wage-Earners for Year, 3.7 per Cent.

John O'Donnell, state labor inspector, has completed the part of his 1924 report relating to factory inspection. It shows there are at present in Minnesota 115,085 wage-earners, divided as follows: Office force, 9,960 male adults, 921 female adults and 38 boys. Excluding office force, there are 86,370 adult male workers, 16,054 female adults, 507 boys and 224 girls under 16 years of age.

O'Donnell says:

There are 3.7 per cent more wage earners recorded in 1924 than in 1923. The proportionate increase is greatest in the number of adult females, being 6.5 per cent and 3.4 per cent for adult males.

Remarkable child labor conditions are shown in 1924. The total number of juvenile wage earners was 770 as against 972 in the previous period. Changes in the nature of employment from the previous year were the form of an increase in the number of wage earners and a decline in child labor. The increase in the number of all classes of wage earners was 3.7 per cent; in adult males, 3.4 per cent; in adult female wage earners, 6.5 per cent; while in child labor there was a reduction of 26.9 per cent.

The industry furnishing employment to the greatest number of wage earners was the lumber industry. There were 27,816 and 28,141 mills were employed 12,161 persons, in planing mills, saw, door and blind factories, 4,349. For both branches of this industry a reduction of 13 per cent in the number of wage earners from 1923.

Railroad Employees.
Railroad work in shops, locomotives, coach and car repairing, roundhouse work furnished employment to 7,357 persons, an increase of 2.1 per cent. Printing and publishing trades gave employment to 10.9 per cent more wage earners than in 1923, the respective numbers being 5,589 and 6,198 people.

Laundry work in the state showed a net gain of 10 per cent in the number of employees. In the number of wage earners, 2,613, as against 2,357 a year ago. Clothing manufacturing showed a decline in the number of wage earners of 4.6 per cent. The respective numbers being 2,192 and 2,301 in 1923 and 1,902 and 1,994 in 1924. There was also a reduction in the number of wage earners in the boot and shoe industry. In 1923, 2,358 persons were reported, against 2,116 in 1924; being a reduction of 10.3 per cent.

In cigar manufacturing the number of wage earners has been increased by twelve persons, although eleven new establishments have been added to the list.

In regard to other issues by the inspectors, twenty referred to sanitation and ventilation of factories and workshops. The orders had for their object orders had to do with the coupling bolts on shafting. Bakeries came in for forty-one orders. They referred to white-washing ceilings and other sanitary measures.

Defective work blocking necessitated twenty-four orders, and six new fire escapes had been ordered by members of the department. Elevators and hoists required to guard against obstruction, fire escapes and blocking of access thereto.

A. E. Pooler, in police court today, charged the rusted and arrested for stealing his watch. The young man had just been released from the workhouse and now goes back for another thirty days. His only excuse was that he wanted to buy more whisky.

IGO-MILES TRUSTEESHIP AN OUTGROWTH OF THE TRIBUNE HOLocaust IN 1890, IS CLOSED.

The Igo-Miles trust, established following the historic Minneapolis Tribune fire of 1890, terminated yesterday by the forwarding of a $529,633 draft by Trustee J. T. Mr. Wyman makes the following statement:

"I feel very much satisfied with the accomplishment. It was a great and good thing for the people to do. In closing up the affairs of the trustee it is a pleasure to realize that it has done the good that was anticipated it would do when the movement was started. There is very little that I can say about the trust in addition to what is contained in the report. That explains fully the history of the fund's creation and its distribution."

The children of both the aided families have now been reported supporting Mrs. Miles, married again and is living in Michigan. Mrs. Igo has a remunerative position in the Chicago postoffice.

DENY DOWIE STORY

Local Deacons Say the Young Doctor Is Not Married.

A cable report from Switzerland to the effect that "Mrs. Gladstone Dowie, a soldier in Her Majesty's army, is engaged to her native home," is emphatically denied by two Zion elders who are in Minneapolis to hold a series of meetings. They assert that Dr. Gladstone Dowie is unmarried and that Deaconess Ruth Hofer is called home by the sickness of her mother and will return in the spring.

Rev. William Gay will speak to-night and tomorrow night in Zion Tabernacle, 513 Second avenue S., on the subjects: "Dowie's Acre of Diamonds" and "To Hell and Back."

FAKE OFFICER SENTENCED

Attempt to Play Policeman Leads to Fight and Workhouse.

Enamored of the glory of police duty, A. L. Miller tried his hand at doing a special police "stunt" last night, with unfortunate results. He ran across Joseph Bartley in a down-town parlor and it occurred to him that Bartley was not doing the right thing. "Come with me," said Miller. Bartley demurred at first but finally went as far as Lockup alley. "Let me see your star," he then demanded of Miller. The question was both embarrassing and disagreeable to Miller and the result was a fight. Officers Fern and McNamara appeared, and this morning the men were given workhouse sentences by Judge Holt.
