ARMSON IS AHEAD
Stillwater Mayor Likely to Be Named Surveyor General.

There is a three-cornered contest on for the job of surveyor general in the Stillwater district, and Governor Johnson is in a quandary. As the change will not be made until April, he is in no hurry.
The leading candidates are J. G. Armson, the present mayor of Stillwater, and J. B. Mosier, who made the run for state treasurer on the ticket last fall. Armson is the son of the surveyor general under Lind. It is understood that Armson is likely to win.
M. J. Moriarty of St. Paul was yesterday named inspector in the dairy and food department, succeeding Charles J. Rouleau. This is the appointment for which Oscar Tankenoff was first slated.

SAMUEL HILL HERE
He Gives Some Striking Figures on the Steamer Minnesota.

Samuel Hill, former president of the Minneapolis Trust company, was in the city yesterday on his way to Boston to attend. He is now practicing law in Seattle, and plans to be in that city Jan. 21, when the new Great Northern steamer, the Minnesota, starts on her voyage to the Orient.
"Set on Hennepin avenue, the Minnesota would block the street from wall to wall," said Mr. Hill, "and would rise high as any five-story building. She would extend from the Lumber Exchange down almost to Third street. She is the biggest thing ever seen, and it will take a line of cars eight or ten half miles long to fill her up. There is a cargo all ready, however."

MINNEAPOLIS MAN

FIGHTING A TOWN

L. L. NERLIN WANTS SUPREME COURT'S ASSISTANCE.

Miller Asserts that Village of Brocton Is in Illegal Competition with Him—Says President of Council Is Proprietor and Town Marshal Is Manager of Business.

L. L. Nerlin, a Minneapolis miller, has appealed to the supreme court for an injunction restraining the village officers of Brocton, Stearns county, from continuing in the business of milling, alleging that it is illegal for a municipality to compete with an individual. A year ago Judge Searles, in the district court at St. Cloud, decided against Mr. Nerlin on the grounds that while it was shown that John Bohmer, president of the village council, was proprietor, and the town marshal was manager of the business which was conducted in a room in the town hall there was no record showing that these officials were acting with authority of the council. Mr. Nerlin asserts now that there are records to prove this doubted point and expects the higher court to grant the relief he asks.

Mr. Nerlin said this morning that he established a business at Brocton in 1898, and that soon after the president of the village council started in the same line, apparently with the intention of driving him out. But while he might have withdrawn from the business, as this he has refused to do, he has driven out, and so Mr. Nerlin began the fight. The odds, however, were against him. The president of the council was a banker, with plenty of money, and this he shared in the new venture, making prices which the Minneapolis competitor could not meet.
"There is evidence," said Mr. Nerlin, "that the president of the village council paid no money for the use of the town hall room where he carried on the flour business; that when the business was begun the council raised the salary of the town marshal and asked him to assist in the new business, and that the council, on one or two occasions, voted money to make up shortages in the flour business. Also, there is nothing on the village officers' books to show that any profits which may have accrued from that business were paid to the city." We have been wondering where they went.

A Boston Precedent.
"About a year ago I read in the Minneapolis Journal an article which said that the city of Boston had engaged in the coal business with a view to giving fuel to the poor of the city at a lower rate than they could get in the ordinary channels. It was a charitable business, and the article stated that the coal dealers at once protested and restrained the city from continuing in that business, the law being on their side. I had not looked up the same as the Massachusetts law, decided to begin action for protection against the unfair and illegal competition I had met at Brocton."

"It seems to me that the village is criminally liable, too. The records do not indicate that the funds paid in by the taxpayers have been properly guarded and used. And besides that, the officers of the council and its president have robbed the farmers and citizens of something they urged me to prosecute and prosecute. And besides that, they have ground and get their flour or mill stuffs in return. Now everybody knows the unjust competition there and nobody will buy me out."

HONOR WAS UNSOUGHT
HAROLD L. LYON NAMED FOR GOVERNMENT SERVICE ON ACCOUNT OF RESEARCH WORK.

Harold L. Lyon, whose appointment to a consulate at Chungking, China, was confirmed by the United States senate on Wednesday, is an instructor in the botanical department at the state university. He is a graduate of the university having been granted three degrees—the B.A., M.S. and Ph.D.
Through the publication of several papers on plant embryology, Dr. Lyon attracted the attention of the agricultural department of the government, and his appointment was made on the recommendation of the department. He will make a study of the plants and grains of the section of China in which Chungking is situated.
Dr. Lyon's home is in Hastings. He graduated from the university in 1900. He is 25 years old.

When you advertise, tell your story attractively. One cent a word.

PULLMAN COMPANY PAYS UP
It Pays $1,160 on Minnesota Business for Last Year.

The Pullman Palace Car company admits doing only $38,686.70 worth of business in Minnesota during 1904. The company's statement was filed yesterday with the state auditor. The 3 per cent tax collected will amount to $1,160.60. The statement shows a slight increase over other years, but is manifestly very small compared to the magnitude of the company's business. The state only collects tax on business beginning and ending in Minnesota.

AUTOS AS DANGER

ON THE HIGHWAYS

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY WANTS LAW MORE STRICT.

Mr. T. Gratton Declares They Bring Grade-Crossing Menace to Every Door—Proposition to Pay Delegates from County Fair Associations Tabled.

The Minnesota Agricultural society has put itself on record as favoring an amendment to the statute regulating the use of the state highways for automobiles. Mr. T. Gratton, who introduced the resolution pronounced the present law the worst in existence, and is a threat to the safety of the state that the running of automobiles at thirty-five miles an hour on highways brought the grade-crossing menace to a door of every farmer's life. He pointed out that the railways, for drivers know where to look out for trains and can take the necessary precautions. Mr. Gratton questioned the legality of allowing autos the use of the highways at all and suggested their regulation by a law similar to that under consideration in New York, which makes five miles an hour the legal speed in thickly settled places. He claimed the highways for the use of the majority, and not the selfish pleasure of the minority. The vote on the resolution was a shout of approval.

The $50,000 balance in the treasury of the agricultural society seems to have been the cause of a resolution introduced by E. T. Champlin, providing that the state society should pay the railroad expenses of one delegate from each county fair association to the annual meeting of the society.
Altho this met with strong opposition it had the sympathy of many present. N. P. Clarke said it was inexpedient to pay anyone for their interest in and co-operation with the society. The resolution was tabled.
The various livestock and breeders' associations met yesterday afternoon in the city capital. The Minnesota Live Stock Breeders' association, elected Thomas H. Canfield of Lake Park, president.
A. H. Bullis of Winnebago City was re-elected first vice president; Joseph Tyson of Redwood Falls, second vice president; Professor Andrew Boss of St. Anthony Park, was re-elected secretary; and J. C. Mills was re-elected treasurer. Every member of the executive committee was re-elected with the exception of L. C. Hodgson. F. H. Lyons of Worthington succeeds him.

Charles Kenning was recommended for appointment as member of the state livestock sanitary board.
The Minnesota Swine Breeders elected the following officer: J. J. Furlong, president; N. K. Hunt, vice president, and Charles Kenning secretary and treasurer.
The choice of the Minnesota Sheep Breeders' association was: W. J. Boynton of Dexter, president; Thomas Keogh of Teopie vice president; and C. W. Glotflier, Waterville, secretary and treasurer.

GOOD "AD" SPECIALIST
W. E. Emery to Start an Advertising Bureau in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis is rapidly acquiring a reputation as the mecca to which young men and women of special talent are swarming. Among the late arrivals is W. E. Emery, who hails from St. Louis. Mr. Emery comes to us equipped with a keen and fertile mind, trained to a high degree of efficiency in his chosen profession, the writing of retail advertising. The amount of practical knowledge which he possesses is quite rare.
He comes of a family of merchants and advertisers. Two large and successful dry goods stores owe their great earning capacity to his family. Mr. Emery shares with his father and two brothers the success of the Harris-Emery company of Des Moines, Iowa, and the Emery Dry Goods Co. of Danville, Ill. Both stores are recognized as exceptional models from many points of view.
Mr. Emery has been fortunate in his career. He has filled with credit to himself every position possible in a department store, and thoroughly understands retail advertising in all its multiplicity of forms.
His success as an advertisement writer has been won through merit alone. His exceptional ability was first recognized among foreign experts in New York city. In competition with some of the brightest lights in the advertising world, his work received first mention. Hartford Crawford, the able manager of St. Louis' most exclusive store, doing many millions of dollars of business annually, Seruzars Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Co., secured Mr. Emery's services for a long-term contract. Of his work there it was said when it came time to sever his connection, "his work was individual in its nature, differing from the usual form of dry goods advertising, and was especially in harmony with our method of doing business."
Mr. Emery came direct from Seruzars Vandervoort & Barney's to Dayton's of this city. He has just resigned his position of advertising manager to open an advertising bureau in this city, fully equipped to write all kinds of publicity special attention will be given to retail advertising. As his methods are aggressive and so thoroughly practical, his original ideas will be especially highly appreciated in Minneapolis. We predict that Mr. Emery will never regret casting his lot with the Twin Cities. The Journal wishes him success in his new venture.

LOWER COURTS SUSTAINED
Two Local Cases Decided Today in the Supreme Court.

In the supreme court decisions handed down today, two cases were of local interest. That of J. J. Mendenhall, appellant, vs. Henry Ulrich, respondent, resulted in an affirmation of the finding of the lower court. In the appeal of the city of Duluth vs. John Lowry, respondent, the judgment of the lower court is affirmed. Both opinions were those of Chief Justice Start.

NEW FACES AT CAPITOL

STATE OIL INSPECTOR APPEARS AND INSURANCE COMMISSIONER ANNOUNCES HIS FIRST APPOINTMENT.

Two new appointments were announced from the governor's office today. Harris Bennett of Duluth is to be a food inspector on the staff of the dairy and food department. Stephen Lynch, also of Duluth, is to be deputy oil inspector for the head of the lakes district, one of the most important and lucrative in the state.

Insurance Commissioner O'Brien announced the appointment of E. A. Waters of St. Paul as chief clerk in his department.
J. A. McDermott, the new state oil inspector, will open offices on the third floor of the new capitol Monday. The change of administration will not take place until Jan. 21, and the present deputy will hold until Feb. 1. Mr. McDermott is flooded with applications, and has a big task in selecting deputy inspectors for the numerous districts. The new oil inspector was appointed as a recognition of the traveling men, and his office will be headquarters for the capitol.

W. H. Williams, the new labor commissioner, took the oath of office today, and next week will assume his duties. His entire staff, with the exception of the assistant commissioner, is yet to be appointed.

O'BRIEN TAKES HOLD
The New Insurance Commissioner Assumes Charge of the Office.

Thomas D. O'Brien of St. Paul is the first one of Governor Johnson's department heads to qualify and assume his duties as insurance commissioner. Immediately after his confirmation by the senate yesterday Mr. O'Brien took the oath of office, deposited his $25,000 bond, and took charge. For the present he will retain the entire old office force.
E. K. Slater, the new dairy and food commissioner, is really in charge of the office, but the formal transfer has not been made, as Commissioner McConnell is absent attending a dairy meeting.
Major Fred B. Wood, the new adjutant general, is detained in Austin by the illness of his father, Eugene Wood, register of deeds of Mower county. W. H. Williams, the new labor commissioner, will not take hold until his force of employees has been selected, and until his predecessor, John O'Donnell, has finished work on his biennial report.
