

BRITISH COUNTESS IS A SOCIALIST

Beautiful Countess of Warwick
Declares for Labor and Against House of Lords.

New York Sun Special Service.

London, March 8.—The latest recruit to the cause of socialism, the beautiful Countess of Warwick, says she has given up society and is doing all she can in a quiet way to assist the cause of socialism.

She says: "I was a millionaire's wife and spent every penny on the socialist movement. My conversion has not come suddenly. For several years my sympathies have been with the socialist—that is, with the real labor party in England."

One reason why I am assisting that party is that I do not think either of the great political parties in England, liberal or conservative, is democratic enough to further the interests of labor, unless it is forced to do so by the presence of a strong and united labor party in the house of commons, and I hope that eventually the labor party will control the house of commons, so as to place the economics of the country on a different footing.

Lady Warwick sums up society as those who bore and those who are bored. She would frame a platform for political ends with these planks: Adult suffrage, irrespective of sex; disestablishment and disendowment of all churches; abolition of land monopoly; taxation of land values; democratization of government machinery; abolition of the house of lords; abolition of all indirect taxes; free maintenance of children in state schools; abolition of school rates; nationalization of the land; control of labor on co-operative principles; and forty-eight hours the maximum of a week's work.

DIPLOMATS RAGE OVER PRECEDENCE

Supreme Court Justices March Ahead of Foreigners and War Is Renewed.

New York Sun Special Service.

Washington, March 8.—The diplomats, especially the ambassadors, are denouncing in all languages, but with only one idea, the discourtesy with which they think they were treated by the supreme court justices at the inauguration of President Roosevelt on Saturday, and the whole subject of official precedence at state functions has been reopened.

The supreme court justices were intensely indignant when they were held back by an officious young officer at a White House reception some years ago until after the members of the diplomatic corps, including the army of secretaries and attachés from South and Central America, had been presented to the president. The difficulty was smoothed over with much trouble and a personal apology from the president.

Justices "Get Even." But the justices were not fully apologetic for the injury to their dignity. They waited for a chance to "get even," and it came with the inauguration.

Count Cassini, then dean of the corps, and his fellow ambassadors were surprised and troubled when the procession started for the outside stand to inaugurate the president. Chief Justice Fuller led the way with the president. Then came the committee on arrangements and, as the procession moved, the assistant justices fell in behind them, leaving nothing for the disgraced ambassadors to do but bring up the rear.

The ambassadors were happy, then, but they were dismayed and angry a few minutes later when the procession started for the outside stand to inaugurate the president. Chief Justice Fuller led the way with the president. Then came the committee on arrangements and, as the procession moved, the assistant justices fell in behind them, leaving nothing for the disgraced ambassadors to do but bring up the rear.

Escorted by Senate Page. The diplomats were further angered when they were told that a senate page would show them the way to the stand. They had expected to be escorted by no one less than the sergeant-at-arms of the senate and probably by a committee of senators. Rather than create a scene, the ambassadors accepted the situation and followed the triumphant justices, but what they are saying about it cannot be later told in the procession. Their own languages are much more expressive. They have advised their governments that they were not given the precedence to which they are entitled, but it is
