ONCE A RESIDENT OF MINNEAPOLIS

MME. LOUISE HOMER, PRIMA DONNA, VISITS OLD FRIENDS.

Was the Daughter of Rev. William Trimble Beatty, at One Time Pastor of Plymouth Church—Has Studied Abroad, but Retains Warm Spot in Her Heart for Minneapolis.

While grand opera has been giving pleasure to thousands of Minneapoleans this week, at least one member of Mr. Conried's company has been enjoying Minneapolis keenly. Mme. Louise Homer has been revisiting childhood memories in company with her husband, Sidney Homer, and their pleasure in these memories cause their Minneapolis callers to straighten up with beaming local pride. Mme. Louise Homer sang in Minneapolis just once during the last visit of the Metropolitan opera company, but she was obliged to stay in St. Paul and saw nothing of her old home. This week she started out immediately on her arrival with all the eagerness of a child to hunt up old haunts. Her inquiry for St. Nicholas street having been interpreted as Nicollet Avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Homer were surprised to find themselves at Eighth street in a minute. They were greatly pleased with the Beatty window, Plymouth church, and Mme. Homer arranged at once to have a photograph made for her. On Ninth street Mme. Homer was asked to stop by her memory had played her a trick, for she was certain that the stone tenements which formerly adjoined the Hampshire Arms were directly opposite to her home on Tenth street, and she was relieved to have her impressions verified by learning that they had been moved.

Meeting Old Friends.

Mme. Homer told with much enthusiasm that lighted up beautifully her fresh, girlish face, of her delight in meeting a group of her former schoolmates at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Charles Wagoner, a close friend of her parents. Two tins of herself, not more than an inch in height, were presented to her, these collections being a school children's organization she attended the Washington school.

Recognizing and appreciating the friendly interest of the old family friends and the kindly feeling of Minneapolis, she was warmly greeted by Mrs. Homer talked in a charmingly unaffected way of her life since leaving Minneapolis, its climax being her love and marriage with Sidney Homer, who was proudly brought out by Mr. Homer.

Life for Mme. Homer differs so strikingly from the popular conception of the life of an opera singer, that it is of more than local and personal interest. The life of Mr. and Mrs. Homer does not differ in any important particular from that of many of her artistic professions, for Mr. Homer is also a musician, a composer of songs popular with leading vocalists, and his wife was one of the best.

Her present home in West Nineteenth street, New York, and after the second season closes, go to some quiet country place for their summers. They will bring their children and go abroad for the summer.

Wrong Impressions.

"People get altogether wrong impressions of the way grand opera interferes with the life of an opera singer, that it is of more than local and personal interest. The life of Mr. and Mrs. Homer does not differ in any important particular from that of many of her artistic professions, for Mr. Homer is also a musician, a composer of songs popular with leading vocalists, and his wife was one of the best."

Mme. Homer was the daughter of Dr. William Trimble Beatty, pastor of Plymouth church and lived here about four years. She left here just as she was entering the high school, the family moving to West Chester, Pa. It was there that her beautiful, rich contralto voice was discovered. After some experience in a large choir in Philadelphia she went to Boston to continue her musical training, one of her most artistic teachers being Mrs. Beatty, who was married to Mr. Homer. After her marriage to Mr. Homer, they went abroad and Mme. Homer studied voice under Fidelio and acting under Paul Lehrie in Paris.

Her First Appearance.

Vichy was the place of Mme. Homer's debut and the select audience numbered some of the most distinguished musicians and critics of France. Her work that season met with immediate recognition and the roles of Amneris in the Metropolitan Opera company of "Aida" and "Lohengrin" and "Della" are still among her favorites. She made her first appearance in Covent Garden, London, in 1899, and sang at Buckingham palace for Queen Alexandra when Princess of Wales. After a second season at Covent Garden, in which she made her first appearance in "Rigoletto," she was engaged for the Metropolitan Opera company of New York. She at once made herself indispensable and her engagements there have filled all of the time she cares to give to professional work.

Children Like Music.

Little Louise Homer, as she calls herself, a pretty 9-year-old, gives promise of inheriting the musical abilities of her parents. She has a clear, sweet voice and is a clever little pianist. The little son, Sidney, is not 3 years old, but even his baby tastes show a strong musical bent. Mr. and Mrs. Homer leave tonight for Kansas City, having remained over to have as much time as possible to see Minneapolis and their friends, old and new. Mr. Homer is especially pleased with the city on account of its substantial character and agreeable optimism, which is a strong contrast with the carping cynicism prevailing in many cities.

BEGIN FIGHT ON THE OIL TRUST

DISCRIMINATION IN RATES IS ALLEGED.

File Formal Complaint with State Railroad and Warehouse Commission—Dealers of Twin Cities Combine for Fight—Classification of Commodities on Tariff Schedules Condemned.

Independent oil companies of Minnesota have declared war against the oil trust. They have filed formal complaints with the railroad and warehouse commission, alleging that because of excessive freight rates charged them for less than carload lots to local points, they are unable to compete with the trust.

The name of the Standard Oil trust is not used directly in the complaint, but the use of the term independently of the commission draws attention to the existence of the combine.

The complaint, in which all the independent oil dealers of the twin cities are named, is directed against the railroad operating in Minnesota, some thirty. The complaint pays special attention to the classification of commodities of the third class, when shipped in less than carloads, the contention being that the fair and reasonable compensation for transporting such merchandise would not be less than carload lots to local points, and that the tariff schedule for commodities of the fourth class. Such a classification would reduce existing rates from 20 to 25 per cent.

Two rates are applied upon shipments of less than carload lots, the third class, and applies to shipments in less than carload lots; the other is founded upon the fifth classification and applies to shipments in carload lots or over. Between the two rates there is a great difference. The latter rate is fully 50 per cent less than the former.

The complaint is based upon this difference. The Standard Oil company, by reason of its better facilities for shipping and unloading at all stations in the state, exacts a higher rate for the class rate, while the independent dealers, who have no such facilities for shipping and unloading in carload lots, must pay the third class rates.

The independent dealers do not ask for carload rates on smaller shipments. But they do assert there is too great a discrepancy at present between carload and smaller shipments. The Standard Oil company has tank stations at all important railroad towns in the northwestern part of the state, and the contents of a tank car. Such conveniences enable the trust to enjoy rates as low as one-tenth of the rate of independent companies.

The latter, for want of such facilities in interior points, must load their tank cars at St. Paul, Minneapolis or Duluth, then barrel and ship to suit the wants of customers. It is on this sort of shipment that the third class rate is applied, and the independent dealers claim a tremendous advantage which would be greatly modified if they would distribute on fourth class rates.

The independent companies, joining in the complaint are the Bartles Oil company, the Complanter Oil company and the Craig Oil company of St. Paul, and the Pennsylvania Oil and Supply company, and the Crescent Oil company of Minneapolis.

GRINESE WANT THE LIZARD SANSAPARILLA

Lizards, dressed, dried and bound on pieces of bamboo, will be imported by the Chinese doctors of the twin cities at the rate of $1.00 per dozen.

The importation hitherto has been restricted because the customs inspectors have declared dried lizards to be medicine. It is now rumored that the lizards are not used as medicine, but as an ingredient to be cooked with herbs to make a medicine. Such ingredients are not specially provided for in the dutiable schedules.

The lizards are imported in pairs. They are prescribed by Chinese physicians, and are supposed to have some pagenic essence derived from the gods. The lizards and herbs are brewed and the broth administered to the patient as a tonic. A Chinaman without his lizards soon becomes afflicted with a disease termed ergomania, which means "that tired feeling." There has been no outcry for lizards in Minneapolis for some time.

AFTER THE BACHELORS

Improvement League Disapproves of Actions of Four Opponents.

Strong disapproval was called forth by the announcement yesterday at the meeting of the Minneapolis Improvement League that the most serious opposition encountered in connection with the filtration plant bonds comes from four bachelors. The league is working actively for the bonds, and is in constant receipt of letters encouraging its members to vote for the bonds. The league has been carrying on this campaign, which was enlarged the scope of its work. It includes a number of prominent physicians. Dr. O. K. Richardson reported for the water bonds subscription of six lectures on birds in April by Dr. Olmstead of Decorah, Iowa. Two lectures have been given at Ruskin hall and Riverside church respectively. A report was made of the interest shown by the Commercial club in the vaccination school work. That body will contribute $100 to the levy to provide for the vaccination schools.

Dr. Ethel Hurd asked the support of the league for the efforts of the Woman's Medical club, which is trying to have women physicians recommended for future city appointments. Mrs. J. O. K. Richardson and Mrs. John A. Crosby and Mrs. Louis Hoover were elected delegates to the convention of the Eastern Public Education association, meeting in Richmond, Va. in May.

SPLendor RISES FROM WRECKAGE

SYSTEM AND BEAUTY FOLLOW A FIRE DISASTER.

The Great Powers Store Emerging from the Ordeal of December Greater and Better than Ever Before—Cost Unthought-of in Preparing the Big Establishment for Its Patrons.

"System" and "Beauty," the twin sisters of mercantile success, have sprung full-grown from the wreckage of the Powers store, partially destroyed last December by fire and water. In three months, improvements which would have taken years to install under ordinary conditions, have been almost completed. In a few weeks the store will be entirely remodeled, refitted and will stand not only among the foremost department stores of the northwest, but of the entire country.

From the concrete foundation, fifty feet below the sidewalk, to the hospital and restaurant for employees on the top floor; from the imposing arcade on Nicollet to the entrances on First Avenue S, no expense has been spared to equip the building with every device to please the eye and every equipment to facilitate purchases with the greatest ease to the buyer.

Altho it was known that the building was of solid construction, some fear was expressed that there might be a weakening of strength after the ordeal of fire and water. A careful investigation failed to show the slightest deterioration. The first day that the store was opened after the fire, 50,000 people passed through the building and at one time there were 50,000 people on the floors. Not the slightest oscillation was felt.

Will Add Another Story. The H. N. Leighton company has the contract for adding another story to the building after plans by Kees & Colburn. The cost will be $150,000. The new floor will contain a hospital for the sick and a recreation room for the girl employees, with waiting, retiring and lavatory rooms for lady customers. The exterior will be remodeled to give a more solid and imposing appearance. The cupolas will be removed and the corners squared with heavy overhanging cornices.

The first feature to attract the attention of the public is the entering main floor will be the 192 pillars cast in ornamental stucco of the Italian renaissance period. Formerly the iron columns were round and entering the main floor from a pale cream at the top to a dark ecru at the foot, give an air of classic beauty. The new steel ceilings preserve the same general design, and cover 149,000 square feet. The large circular air well, which opened to the dome, has been converted into floor space, adding greatly to the systematic arrangement. This has given 5,750 feet of additional floor space.

Interior Arrangements. The entire arrangement of the selling counters has been changed, the aisles widened, and every department confined to its own space, the mosaic flooring in the arcade has been declared unsatisfactory, and will be changed to maple to correspond with the main floor. The new maple flooring will be 135,000 sq. ft. All panels on the main floor will be of solid mahogany. The quality will be of the best mahogany, and the floor will be finished with the finest varnish. The mounding has been carried by hand. The carpeting on the second floor will be 4,500 yards of royal Wilton being used. Hundreds of yards of green silk velour will be consumed in the window decorations. Four hundred and fifty feet of window glass will be used in the interior decorations will be used, and 850 yards of Wilton carpet will be put down in the show windows. The windows will be lighted with electric lights, and there will be 2,500 new electric lights in the arcade.

Varying Decorative Schemes. Different schemes of decoration will be found on the several floors. The basement will be newly decorated in white, the main floor in three shades of buff and the second and third floor with the ceilings in light buff and the walls in light green. The arrangement of the basement has been altered. As the rooms under the arcade were considered unattractive, and as customers they have been changed into storage rooms for crockery and glassware and a sufficient stock to supply a large wholesale store is kept in the basement. The counters of the basement will be paneled with sliding doors so that all wrapping paper and stock not required for immediate exhibit is kept out of view. The departments of the basement have been remodeled, including the meat and grocery departments. The trunk, traveling bag, suit case, picture, outglass and crockery departments have been rearranged. The restaurant has been finished and has become so popular that it is always crowded. A new mirror space has been added to the cut-glass department. In the hardware department 235,000 feet of new showcases have been installed, the best possible to obtain.

On the basement is found one of the finest shipping rooms in the country. Thru a new arrangement goods are sent down on a chute which does away with the dragging of trucks across the floors.

In the sub-basement three new electric dynamos of 125 horsepower each have been installed. In case of accident the city current or the Edison plant can be used at a moment's notice. In addition to the electric light the store is equipped with gas fixtures.

Other Improvements. Among other improvements are 12,000 feet more shelving in the shoe department, new mahogany cases for displaying women's suits and cloaks; new mahogany military show cases, 5,900 additional square feet of mirrors inside the store, and 2,150 square feet of space for the girls' lunch and recreation room. New rooms and departments added include ladies' reception and toiletrooms on the second floor, four fine art rooms, a drapery department on the third floor, the nursery, refitted and finished, the men's department remodeled and finished, and a new bedding department on the third floor.

To operate this immense store A. J. Powers has devised a system of checking and auditing which is unexcelled. The store closes at 5:30. At 6 o'clock every itemized account and the totals are on Mr. Powers' desk.
