CZAR SAYS PARIS; MIKADO, LONDON

Hostile Rulers Offer First Suggestions for Place of Peace Meeting.

JAPS OBJECT TO THE CZAR'S VERBAL NOTES

They Want All the Preliminary Agreements Carefully Reduced to Writing.

Washington, June 13.—Following the important conferences of yesterday and last night there was a lull in negotiations today.

The discussion of the time and place of meeting of the peace conference is proceeding between the representatives of Russia and Japan at this capital and their home governments. These subjects were taken up with Count Cassini and Minister Takahira yesterday by the president, but neither the ambassador nor the minister was empowered at that time to speak definitely for his government.

It is intimated officially today that Paris was the choice of the Russian government and London of the Japanese. It can be said that neither government expected that its choice would be ratified by the other.

It was ascertained today that in the exchanges between the Russian embassy and the Japanese legation with their respective governments, The Hague is being considered as a particularly desirable location of the peace conference and it is regarded as unlikely that The Hague may be agreed upon by the belligerents.

No Armistice Yet. It is pointed out that a formal armistice between the two great armies facing each other on the plains of Manchuria will hardly be arranged until the peace conference plans take definite form.

The subject of the pending negotiations was considered in an informal way at the cabinet meeting today, the president receiving the congratulations of members of his cabinet.

Verbal Messages Won't Do. Ambassador Cassini delivered the Russian answer to the president's note of June 8 verbally. Minister Takahira was much dissatisfied with that way of doing business.

Both nations have practically agreed upon the men who will negotiate for them. Their names have been given to President Roosevelt, but he will not make them public until after they have been formally named.

As to peace plenipotentiaries, the speculation involves the names of Ministers Witte and Baron Rosen as being Russia's envoys; Marquis Ito and Minister Takahira as being Japan's. Baron Kurino as the colleague of Marquis Ito, if Washington is not selected as the place of meeting.

The appointment of plenipotentiaries means that the exchange of notes now going on will be regarded as sufficient base upon which to found a treaty of peace.

Japs Want Written Agreements. Japan will take nothing for granted. It is known here that she will continue war preparation even after negotiations are begun, so that she will not lose anything by the cessation of hostilities.

PEACE MEETING NOT FIXED. Announcement of Time and Place, However, Is Expected Soon.

St. Petersburg, June 13.—An early announcement of the time and place for the meeting of the Russian and Japanese peace plenipotentiaries is expected to come from Washington as a result of the exchanges between the belligerents on that subject now proceeding there.

Mr. Oswald was a charter member of the Harmonia society, a social and musical society composed exclusively of Germans, organized many years ago. He was an incorporator and director of the Minneapolis, Saint Ste. Marie & Atlantic Railroad company and also the Minneapolis & Pacific Railroad company.

Made Park Board Possible. At the organization of the Minneapolis park board, Mr. Oswald was appointed one of the commissioners, and from the first took a deep interest in its success.

Lamsdorff Jubilant. Ambassador Bompard, who has returned from Paris, was closeted with Ambassador Cassini this afternoon.

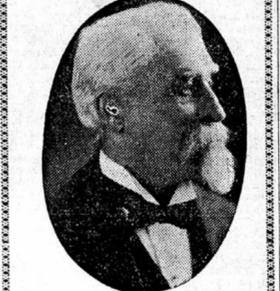

The opinion is practically unanimous that if Emperor Nicholas avails himself of the offer of the German emperor, the peace conference will be held in midsummer, Washington almost certainly would be selected, as both Russia and Japan regard this capital with favor, not only on account of the admirable facilities it affords, but for the strong additional reason that the conference is to be arranged thru the efforts of President Roosevelt.

JOHN CONRAD OSWALD, The Minneapolis Pioneer Who Died at His Home Today.

John Conrad Oswald, one of the few remaining pioneers of Minneapolis died at an early hour today at the age of 81 of bronchial pneumonia. About five weeks ago Mr. Oswald caught a severe cold, complications set in which, owing to his age, he was unable to throw off in spite of a vigorous constitution, and the end came peacefully at 6 o'clock this morning.

Born in Switzerland. He was born in the village of Oberaach, Canton Thurgau, Switzerland, on May 20, 1824, on his father's homestead, where three generations of the family had lived.

Early Minneapolis Ventures. Soon after his arrival in Minneapolis Mr. Oswald opened a store in connection with his brother Henry, in North Minneapolis, and for a year he bought out his brother's interest and soon after took another partner, and continued the business at Hennepin avenue and First street, which was extensive and profitable for three years.

Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard Will Take the Trail—Rivalry and Quarrel with Wallace.

New York Sun Special Service. Halifax, N. S., June 13.—Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard is here with a party of four en route to take up the work of exploration where her husband lost his life. With the party is Elson, the Cree Indian who accompanied the previous party.

Mr. Wallace, according to his sister, is in ignorance of this second expedition, although he was suspicious that such a project was thought of when George Elson refused to accompany him on his expedition.

Mrs. Hubbard intends to visit the place where her husband died and from that spot will probably take up the work which her husband tried to do. She probably will be in the woods a day or two earlier than Wallace. The latter's party leaves St. John's on Thursday on a steamer which will call at several ports before her destination is reached, while Mrs. Hubbard, leaving here on Friday, will go direct.

Mrs. Hubbard, in her grief at the tragic death of her husband, could not reconcile the apparent discrepancy between the diary of her husband and that of Wallace. Wallace's story has been vouched for by Casper Whitney and others.

The cause of the death of Hubbard was that his party lost their trail. All along they thought they were on the right track. It was not until Wallace got to civilization that he showed the diary of his husband and that he was unaware of the fatal mistake at the time of his death.

Mrs. Hubbard cannot believe her husband was wrong.

Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard Will Take the Trail—Rivalry and Quarrel with Wallace.

COLONEL WILLIAM COLVILL A HERO OF GETTYSBURG

Reunion of the Regiment Saddened by Colonel William Colvill's Demise.

This is one of the latest photographs of Colonel Colvill, and probably the best likeness ever made of him. It was taken at the regimental reunion a year ago by Edward A. Bromley.

On the eve of what was to be the greatest reunion of Minnesota's first and most famous regiments, Colonel William Colvill, the Gettysburg commander of that intrepid body of men, entered peacefully into the long rest.

His body, scarred and maimed in the defense of the Union, was found this morning at the Soldiers' Home, where he arrived yesterday for to-day's reunion of the old First Minnesota volunteers and to participate in tomorrow's ceremonies of the Confederate removal of the Minnesota battle flags to the new state capitol.

As the man who led that desperate charge of 202 Minnesotans against a whole Confederate brigade and checked a threatened disastrous advance, Colonel Colvill was a man who has enjoyed a peculiar esteem in this state.

Wounded thrice at Gettysburg and many times at other battles, he had been but the mere battered remnant of a man for forty years. But his spirit was indomitable and his pride in the glorious record of the regiment he commanded was unabated.

The End Was Peaceful. Bereaved and practically alone in the world, suffering and crippled physically, the old hero knew that end that peace which sometimes leaves its ineffable imprint upon the face of the dead, but of which the living can know nothing. So he died as this evidence that the death angel had touched the old man kindly in his sleep, that the body was not disturbed for hours, but lay as it had been found until about noon, and then was gently carried to the chamber gazing peacefully on their old commander in his rest.

Colonel Colvill came to the city from his "Winnipeg" farm last night and went directly to the Soldiers' Home. Never had he appeared in better spirits and his health seemed good. Last evening he visited with old comrades until about noon, and then he was again the old fighter and the dear memories of the dead soldier days were recounted with accuracy and real pleasure.

Expected a Good Rest. When he retired he bade Adjutant F. L. McCusick good night and said that he felt sure of a good night's rest. His friend slept in an adjoining room with the door open between them. He heard nothing at another hour, and when he went to call the colonel. He entered the room and spoke to his friend. There was no answer. He approached the bed and was startled by the sight of that had spread over Colonel Colvill's features. He looked closer and found that the gallant old soldier was dead.

The body naturally lay on its left side, with the left hand under the cheek. The features were calm. The bed clothes were unruined. The old soldier was summoned at once, but there was nothing to do, as death had come several hours before the discovery. The coroner later visited the home and pronounced the death due to heart failure.

The Reunion Saddened. Early this morning the survivors of the "Old First" and their wives, children and grandchildren began to assemble at the home for the reunion. Few knew of the loss in their membership and when they were met by comrades living in the home and learned of the bereavement, strong men wept and the spirit of the reunion was changed from joyousness to sorrow.

At a'clock about twenty-five of the veterans of the First had collected at the pavilion—one of the largest reunions of any regiment in recent years. They were standing in small groups waiting for the officers and discussing what should be done. Major McGinnis and Major C. B. Heffelfinger arrived together and a short consultation was held with the officers and they decided together they went to the little room where Colonel Colvill lay.

Every effort was then made to discover if their comrades had any relatives at Red Wing or Cannon Falls. No definite knowledge could be obtained and it was decided to telegraph to the mayors of Red Wing and Cannon Falls to see if there was any one who wished to take charge of preparations for the funeral. Until further word is heard the body will be untouched.

It was at first thought that special service might be held at the home this afternoon, but this plan was given up. However, in the short address that was made after the midday dinner, the memory of Colonel Colvill was honored.

LED MOST FAMOUS CHARGE. No Parallel for Work of Colonel Colvill's Men at Gettysburg. History has recorded no braver charge than that led by "Rough and Ready" Colonel William Colvill at Gettysburg. The charge prevented the utter rout and destruction of the entire left wing of the Union forces. It was the first Minnesota charge against the advancing, victorious army. It was the bravest, most gallant charge in the history of the war.

For Sunday, the 18th inst., the society has arranged a railway excursion up the line of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road to one of the good fishing lakes north of their town and will charge a sufficient price for tickets so the church will receive a revenue from the trip. The ladies will pitch tents and serve dinner and other refreshments, also with an eye single towards church revenue. They announce that there is the very best fishing at the lake that has ever been seen in northern Minnesota.

The early mass will be said, for the convenience of excursionists, at 7:30 o'clock, soon after which the train will leave the station.

Jig and Clog to Be Dances of Fashion. Columbus, Ohio, June 13.—If the plans of the dancing masters of the country, now in annual session here, go thru, and it is believed they will, the old-time jig and clog, with a dash of the waltz, will be a prominent feature of all well-developed dance programs in the country, from that of the hoodlums' unrefined set to that of the most ultra refined set in Boston.

The jig and the clog, the masters say, are the "real goods" in developing the time, combining grace with the activity of motion and all other things that the waltz has been doing for centuries past. Some of the members look askance at the innovation, one said that the waltz and the two-step are the only dances, and that they may popularize some things in spots around the country, but those two are "the" dances.
