The Metrostyle PIANOLA

One of the most reasonable and natural additions that can be made to the home.

ALMOST every home contains a piano of some kind, and the Pianola, by making it possible for everyone to use it, helps to realize the splendid possibilities for enjoyment contained in that instrument, and makes it worth all that it costs. As a refining means of acquainting children with all that is good in music, as a relaxation for the business man's mental strain, as an entertainer for guests—ready at all times to do the bidding of every member of the family—the METROSTYLE PIANOLA, the highest development of this standard piano-player, furnishes, in addition to technique, a standard Guide for Interpretation. Yet it does not hamper a player's individuality, since the Metrostyle markings may be accepted only in part, or even rejected altogether, it serves the important purpose, however, of showing exactly how some authority considers the composition ought to be played.

The Ralph Connor club of Grace Presbyterian church will give its third annual cornroast Wednesday evening at the corner of Hennepin avenue and Twenty-fifth street. The club will be assisted by the ladies of the church.

The Cornor club cornroast is a novel affair. As the name indicates, it originated as an open-air cornroast, but each year new features have been added, so that while the corn is still the prime attraction, it is by no means the only one.

The list of attractions for this year includes music by the Journal News-boys' band, a surtiding fishpond, automobile rides, lemonade, homemade candy, flowers, bagpipe music and the ever-present peanuts and popcorn.

Rufus Choate once tried to get a Boston witness to give his idea of absent-mindedness. "Well," said the witness, "I should say that a man who thought he'd left his watch to him, and took it out in his pocket to see if he'd time to go home and get it, was a lectio absent-minded."
