LOWRY AS "LORD OF OUR STREETS"

MAGAZINE WRITER LIKENES HIM TO A FEUDAL BARON.

Tells of the Disinterest of Thomas F. Ryan in His Vassals in New York and Says Mr. Lowry Is Refreshingly Different—How Latter's Lordship Operates.

In the September number of the American Historical Magazine, under the title, "The Lords of Our Streets," Henry Kitchell Webster draws a comparison between Thomas F. Ryan, the practical magnate of New York, and Thomas Lowry, the feudal lord of St. Paul, which is highly complimentary to the latter.

Mr. Webster likens the men who control urban transit to feudal barons and intimates pretty strongly that he considers Ryan an overlord of the Front-de-Bœuf type. Writing of Mr. Lowry his tone is different. He says: "But up in Minnesota, where the baron of the other sort, a man with the true local sense. He is Mr. Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis."

Following up what he praises as the local patriotism and public spirit shown by Mr. Lowry and dwells at length upon his popularity with all classes and his high standing in the business world, the difference between Mr. Lowry and Mr. Ryan, according to Mr. Webster, is that Mr. Lowry regards his business as a public service to be conducted so as to give to his subjects the full benefit of his lordship. He likens him to the feudal lord who, having conquered his territory, devoted himself to the protection and uplifting of his vassals—while Ryan merely tries to wring the utmost profit from his people and has no sense of obligation toward them.

Writing of the local patriotism shown by Mr. Lowry, the author says: "As for him, his serene confidence in his city never wavered, and when things came his way they came fast. Minneapolis has caught up with him at last and made him a very rich man. But he could not make it a harvest. An idea of going away to look for a wider field to rule than a New England preacher could think of going to the far east and setting up a barony."

"So there are two sorts of lords of our streets. The former, it must be admitted, is the more common, but a glance at the latter is not the less refreshing on that account."

MISCREANTS SOAPED STREETCAR TRACK

A practical joke came near wrecking a Kenwood car at Kenwood hill last night and detectives are looking for the perpetrators. The tracks on the incline were soaped and the car was unable to control the car. It dashed down the hill at a terrific pace and several times came near leaving the track. It was finally brought to a standstill after all the passengers were given a good scare.

ELKS TURNED OUT

Helped Celebrate Opening of Orpheum Season. The Orpheum and the members of No. 44, B. P. O. E., fraternized last night in celebration of the opening of the vaudeville theater's second season. Several hundred seats in the body of the house were occupied by Elks and their guests. The Elks' colors were conspicuously displayed, and Judge H. Danforth Dickinson made his first appearance in vaudeville as the spokesman of the occasion.

The gathering was largely in expression of appreciation of the courtesy shown the Elks by the Orpheum Circuit company last June, when the house was reopened, contrary to custom, and given to the Elks for their minstrel show. Judge Dickinson took occasion to compliment the theater on the quality of entertainment it was furnishing and to felicitate the community upon the possession of such an excellent playhouse.

HEART FAILURE, NOT DROWNING

HAROLD BERGENDAHL MET A STRANGE DEATH.

University Student Sank in Lake Elmo, After Shouting That He Could Not Reach the Boat—Practically No Water in the Body When It Was Recovered.

HAROLD BERGENDAHL, University Student Who Met Death While Swimming in Lake Elmo.

The body of Harold Bergendahl, the university student, who was drowned in Lake Elmo, near Stillwater, early Sunday morning, was recovered late yesterday afternoon. It lay under seventy-five feet of water and the task of finding it was very difficult.

Bergendahl was spending the day with a camping party as the guest of Charles Englin, a class mate. He and Englin were bathing from a boat about 100 feet from shore. Bergendahl called to Englin that he could not reach the boat, which was some distance away. Englin replied, "Come on, you can make it all right." Again Bergendahl called, "I can't make it," and his companion turned to assist him just as he disappeared.

Englin swam to the spot where Bergendahl had gone down and waited to help him when he came to the surface. He did not come up. It is thought that he died from heart failure. This theory is borne out by the fact that practically no water was found in his body when it was recovered.

Bergendahl was a junior in the electrical engineering course at the state university and in the summer vacation had been in the employ of the Andrew Heating company. He was a member of the Engineers' society, and was popular among his classmates and associates. The body will be taken to his home in Ellendale, N. D., for burial. An aunt, Miss Arnold of Milwaukee arrived in the city this morning and will go to Ellendale with the body.

The child was thrown out and was picked up unconscious. Klausman was locked up by a policeman and friends took the child home. The baby will recover.

HIGH WINDS AND HAIL

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE TO CROPS BY RECENT STORMS, ACCORDING TO GOVERNMENT REPORT.

T. S. Outram, local weather observer, issued the following bulletin today, giving crop conditions for the week ending Monday. Rain fell in nearly all parts of the state on the 14th, in northern portions on the 15th and 16th, in central and northern portions on the 17th, and in southeastern portions on the 20th. The rains of the 14th and 17th were locally heavy, particularly in the Red River valley, along the Mississippi river and in the lower Minnesota valley. On the night of the 17th these storms in Hubbard, Blue Earth, Steele, Le Sueur and Washington counties were accompanied by high winds which caused damage to a few buildings and to standing crops, and in some places by lightning, which set fire to several farm buildings, etc. On the evening of the 20th very severe storms, accompanied by destructively high winds, heavy rain and very heavy hail, visited localities in the region extending from Stearns county to Mower, Fillmore and Houston counties, also in northern Benvenue county. In places there was evidently tornadic action, with the loss of at least one life, and the destruction of crops and much property. The weather was moderate till the 20th, which was warm, with temperatures of 90 degrees or higher in southern and southwestern portions.

In the southern third of the state all the grain crops cut except the latest fax; in central portions there are still some fields of wheat and oats to cut, while in the extreme north wheat is ripe, except at some points in Kittson county, and oats and barley need cutting. In much of the Red River valley there is still a good deal of wheat and oats to cut, but for some days cutting will be difficult on the lower lands because of the soft condition of the soil. Harvest was resumed on the 18th or 19th on the drier fields, and it will progress as rapidly as possible because the wheat is ripe and in danger of falling down. There has been some loss already by crinkling down, and an appreciable loss in a few places by black rust. In central and southern portions of the state the rains delayed stacking and threshing from the 18th, but this work was resumed on the 19th. In some southern portions there is said to be damage to grain in shock by dampness and the beginning of sprouting. Where threshing has been done wheat is yielding well, oats splendidly and barley well, the barley is discolored. Corn is growing rapidly, with the most advanced already denting. Potatoes are generally a fair crop. Plowing is begun in the stubble fields, with the soil in good condition.

POOR SEED DOES WELL

FIELD RAISED FROM RUSTED WHEAT GOES 58 POUNDS TO THE BUSHEL.

Evidence of the good quality of the northwest wheat that will be moving freely to market is coming to hand daily. Today the Cargill company had a sample of fine milling wheat weighing fifty-eight pounds to the bushel. The fact that this lightweight seed will produce so comparatively heavy a yield is highly encouraging, as many acres were sown with lightweight wheat. The above instance shows what may be done when it is necessary to use poor seed, provided conditions are favorable.

The northwest wheat crop of 1873 was a rusted crop, yet that of 1879 was of high quality. It is believed the same will show again and the poor crop of 1904 is bound to be followed by a high-quality production this season, when final averages for the three states are figured up.
