AFTER 20 YEARS

FOUND HIS COUSIN

RELATIVES UNITED THRU MEDIUM OF JOURNAL INTERVIEW.

Thomas O'Hara Saw His Cousin's Name Among Those of Bridge Square Habitués Who Discussed Sunday Closing and Saved Him from a Winter at Shoveling Snow.

There was a happy reunion of long-parted relatives in Minneapolis Monday evening as a result of the Sunday closing interview published in The Journal of that day with twenty-five Bridge square habitués.

One of the men, Charles O'Hara, had booked with a gang of railroad laborers and was at Union station Monday evening awaiting the train which was to take some sixty snow shovellers to Minot, N. D. The train was called and O'Hara drifted, a stick in the jam of human driftwood, toward the gate. In a few moments more he would have passed the gates.

"Charles O'Hara! Charles O'Hara!" "It's a fly bob game," and similar exclamations were heard in the crowd. O'Hara went on unmoved. Just as he was about to pass the gates he was accosted and turning saw a well-dressed man whom he did not know.

"Williamstown, Ky.?" eagerly inquired the stranger. "I'm it," was the laconic response.

Thomas O'Hara, the proprietor of the O'Hara saloon, 416 Nicollet avenue, threw his arm around the would-be snow shoveler and pulling him out of the crowd, remarked:

"Then you're my long-lost cousin. Come with me." Explanations followed and the cousins checked up enough to find there was no mistake.

"I'll take care of you for the present," said O'Hara, and the other cousin, who was a wanderer, took a sign of relief.

"All right," he responded. "Here, pal," he said, turning to a bewhiskered specter, "you're the goods; take them for me, and the newly discovered relative handed his 'turkey,' containing all his worldly clothing and possessions, to his 'side kicker.'"

He has been a wanderer for twenty years. He says he likes the change and he will remain in Minneapolis thru the winter, where his cousin promises to find him some suitable work for him.

"Why, we thought Charles was dead," explained Tom O'Hara to The Journal. "He disappeared twenty years ago from Williamstown. I knew him as a kid, but long ago we had given up seeing him in this world. I happened to read in Monday's Journal an interview with Charles O'Hara among those Bridge square Sunday-closing talkers. It struck me at once that he was my cousin, and I set out in search of him."

"I tell you I'm mighty glad to find him. I believe I've saved him from a winter of hardship at least. There's good in that man, and I'm going to give him a chance to bring it out."

The newly found cousin is a man of about 35, also he looks much older. He has been a wanderer for twenty years. He has worked on railroads all over the country and has turned his hand to almost every kind of manual labor, from that of a lumberjack in the northern woods to road work in warmer climates. He bears the marks of his various situations and is worldly wise. His reticence concerning himself is not that of ill nature, but of philosophy learned from hard knocks.

"I'm glad my cousin found me, and I hope it will all be for the best, for I've had enough of the other thing."

Charles J. Bonaparte, secretary of war, is the president of the league.

LAUDS INVESTIGATOR

BUREAU OF LABOR

REPRESENTATIVE FROM WASHINGTON BUREAU VISITS CITY.

James Eaton Conner, on Tour of Examination of Free Labor Bureaus in Different States, Says Minneapolis Institution Makes a Very Fine Showing with Others Visited.

The James Eaton Conner, representative of the bureau of labor, Washington, D. C., completed at the end of the Minnesota free labor bureau late yesterday and last evening left for Butte, Mont.

When seen at the Vendome hotel last evening Mr. Conner stated that he was now engaged on a mission from the Washington bureau of labor; the examination of state free labor bureaus. These are operated now in thirteen states: Connecticut, New York, Maryland, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri. There are also a few municipal bureaus, as at Duluth, Seattle, and Providence, R. I. Colorado and several other states are contemplating legislation to create employment bureaus.

"It is my purpose to study the causes that brought into existence their organization, methods of operation, purposes and efficiency. The result of my investigations will be published by the bureau in bulletin form and appear sometime within the next few months."

"As to the Minnesota free employment bureau, I can say that it is doing a very good work, especially considering the small funds at its disposal. The superintendent, and his assistant both show an active, intelligent interest in their work. There is one special point of commendation for the Minnesota bureau; that is, it is located with the municipal office of the city hall. This locates it above the local newspapers and agencies and gives it a standing it could not otherwise secure. It makes it more appreciated as a public affair."

"Certain obvious improvements might be made in the Minnesota system, such as have been noted by other citizens, but taking it altogether it compares very favorably with the others, so far as I have gone. The Minnesota bureau has been having filled over 4,500 positions the past month. This is a very fine showing, above the average of the other state bureaus I have visited."

"I should like to give a more definite statement of my findings relative to the Minnesota bureau and its statistics, in comparison with bureaus of other states, yet this is to be made public in my report and it would not be courteous to the department at Washington to give in detail in my report the statistics before presenting it at Washington."

"So far I have found most of the bureaus established are of comparatively recent origin. I believe there is a great future for their enlargement and for the adoption of the plan generally in other states. I believe the movement is at present in its infancy."

TODAY IN THE DISTRICT COURT

First instance of jury enlargement and a subcommittee. Rev. S. N. Deland and Dr. J. G. Gordon, appointed to look into the matter. At the judicial societies held on foot for benefit parties of various kinds, and the committee as a whole expressed its disapproval of such procedure. The subcommittee will confer with those having these parties in charge and see that the money is put into the proper place. So far $2,500 has been raised for the suffering Jews in Russia.

MRS. CHASE TELLS WHY SHE SEEKS A HUSBAND

The married twice before, Mrs. F. E. Chase of 2433 Fourth avenue S. professedly a widow, today in the city seeking a husband. She has written to the Minneapolis state free employment bureau desiring the names of masculine applicants for life partners and discusses without reserve the reasons for this seeking a protector.

"I see no reason why I should not take this way of finding a husband," said Mrs. Chase to The Journal today. "I am a widow, and I do not want to go out into society, so I meet few men."

"Yes, I want to get married. I find it very yonessome living here alone, as my mother is a musician and is out at home evenings, and it would be a real comfort to have a nice, gentlemanly man about the house. I have enough to support myself, but I would like companionship."

"What are the qualifications a husband should possess? Well, in my case I want a man who is not young, one about my own age. He must be fairly good-looking and cheerful and pleasant. I am not so anxious to marry that I would support a husband, so he must be fairly well-to-do and be able to take care of me a little. No drunkard need apply. He can take a drink down now and then, but I could not stand for a man who would come home intoxicated."

"What I want to know is to form a sort of partnership with a man who will be a good companion to me. I am willing to do my share, but will not be any man's slave. One man wrote me and asked if I was a Christian, could keep house for his two grown-up daughters and cook. I could come up to the first requirement, but the other two were impossible. What he really wanted was a hired girl. I wrote him a polite letter turning him down."

"I shall keep up this way for a while longer. I think I know my mind and know men well enough to know if I have a good man. I shall certainly be very careful in doing it."

"You are not bothering me at all by asking me about it. I know that some reporters would be out here sooner or later if I wrote to the employment bureau and took that into consideration when I decided upon this course. You may say that I should be glad to hear from any man who thinks he can fill the requirements I have explained to you."

FORGETS HIS POST

Arthur Kenyon Professes Lapse of Memory in District Court.

"I do not know," was Arthur Kenyon's only answer to questions of counsel when on the stand in his own defense in Judge H. D. Dickinson's court today. "I know nothing of his past life. He said he did not know any of the witnesses, did not know how to write and did not know whether he had a father and mother or not. Kenyon is charged with robbing Robert O'Connell with holding up and robbing William Copeland of $40 last July. O'Connell pleaded guilty and was sent to the reformatory. Kenyon was committed to the state insane asylum after his arrest, but was recently released as cured."

MUCH DEPENDS ON

NEW BRIDGE PLAN

'TWOULD AFFECT NEW POSTOFFICE AND UNION STATION.

With Proposed Third Avenue Bridge, Traffic Would Naturally Center in a Real Union Station—Government Would Favor Postoffice Near a Station Favored by All Boards.

With the agitation for a new bridge across the Mississippi river at Third avenue, some revival of the talk for the union railway station, Minneapolis now has an alleged union railway station, but at the same time there are four other passenger stations. In some cases individual roads use more than one station, an arrangement that makes for delay and confusion. For years a true union station has been wanted, business men and even railroad men have hoped for one and various and divers suggestions and plans have been offered.

Another feature that is interwoven with the bridge and station agitation is the need and possibility of a new postoffice building. The postoffice department would be far more likely to recommend a new building for Minneapolis if a site near a union station, used by all the roads running into the city, could be selected. In this way the postoffice building could be provided with private tracks directly connected with the passenger yards, and mail cars could be switched direct to the postoffice receiving station. At the same time outgoing mail could be loaded directly into mail cars by chutes from the local receiving and distributing floors, and the expense of transportation from the postoffice to the various stations would be avoided.

One of the chief difficulties in the way of a new station has been the intransigence of J. J. Hill, who controls the present union station. His building occupies the ideal location. At the same time his influence in control of the property has operated against other roads than his own account of the heavy business that has been widely talked along business interests, and has even been carried into railway circles. It has not been considered for some time, but has been revived by the Third avenue bridge agitation.

There is ample room for track extensions sufficient to care for the business for all time. The site is commanding and a beautiful structure equal to anything of the sort in American could be built. The two bridges, one at Hennepin and the other at Third avenue, would allow ample room for the distribution of traffic for the East Side.

There is also room in the vicinity for the new postoffice building, and the baggage trackage. If it is a fact that mail cars could be saved in this way, an incoming mail could be distributed about the business center of the city at least an hour sooner than at present, that much time being lost in the double handling and transfer. The further distribution could be made thru the branch stations as at present.

DISAPPROVES OF PLAN

Jewish Committee Does Not Favor Social Functions for Benefits.

Direct contributions, and not money committed to social functions, are what the sufferers from the local recession in Russia want. At a meeting of the committee, held in the Jewish Reform temple, Fourth avenue S. and Tenth street, last night, the matter was taken up formally by a subcommittee. Rev. S. N. Deland and Dr. J. G. Gordon, appointed to look into the matter. At the judicial societies held on foot for benefit parties of various kinds, and the committee as a whole expressed its disapproval of such procedure. The subcommittee will confer with those having these parties in charge and see that the money is put into the proper place. So far $2,500 has been raised for the suffering Jews in Russia.

BURGLARS MAKE SPINT

Patrolman McLeod Surprises Men Attempting to "Break and Enter."

Three shots were fired at two burglars in an early hour today by Patrolman McLeod, who caught the men attempting to enter the O. H. Peck photographic supply house on Fifth street S.

The prowlers, armed with a jimmy, were near their goal when McLeod stepped out from the doorway and interrupted their game. He was spied by him and almost as soon as he saw them and by zigzag running at a speed that would have shamed Dan Patch they escaped the bullets.

Two men who were probably the burglars were seen on Fourth avenue by Officer O'Mally several minutes later. They were still running.

PROHIBITIONISTS MEET

Tenth Warders Form Organization and Discuss the Coming Campaign.

Tenth ward prohibitionists met last evening to perfect a ward organization and elect delegates to the county and state conventions. J. R. Farnham was elected ward chairman, Arthur Campbell secretary and Arthur Welton treasurer. Rev. Joseph Hogg made an address, after which all present pledged themselves to support the prohibition ticket. J. D. Engle, county chairman, commented on the object of the next campaign would be to secure the election of prohibitionists or friends of temperance to the legislature. George W. Higgins said that any nominee for mayor who would pledge himself to close the saloons on Third would have the support of all prohibitionists in the city.

IMPLEMENT MEN

REAFFIRM FIGHT

AFRAID OF BILL KILLED LAST YEAR BY THEM.

Measure Providing for Manufacture of Implements in State Prison May Be Resurrected and Opposition Is Already Forming—Better Relations Between Manufacturer, Jobber and Retailer Urged.

Fearing that an attempt may be made to resurrect the bill, killed by it last year to unionize the manufacturer of implements in the state penitentiary at Stillwater, the Minnesota Retail Implement Dealers' association, now in convention, will make ample preparations for opposition in case the measure is revived. The subject has not come before the convention, but is the subject of lobby talk and will doubtless be discussed at the closing session tomorrow, with the result that the legislative committee will be instructed to load its guns for battle.

With their mutual fire insurance project already a husky infant, with over $100,000 worth of risks subscribed, when the requirement is only $75,000 the meeting today resolved itself into a lovefeast. H. E. Miles of Racine, Wis., and H. C. Staver of Chicago, both members of the National Association of Agricultural Implement Manufacturers, pleaded the cause of better relationship between the manufacturer, jobber and retailer dealers.

W. W. Sivright of Hutchinson, Minn., read an interesting paper on "How to Sell Goods," in which he pointed out the pitfalls which the retailer must avoid. Matt Fitzpatrick of Stewartville treated the subject: "Are Local Organizations Beneficial?" and the paper "The Cream Separator As It Is and Should Be" by A. Marcell of Perham, who was unable to attend, was read. The afternoon program was as follows: "The Thresher Business," treated in a paper sent in by Joseph Keenan of Austin, who was unable to attend; "Twine Business Situation," R. F. Lamb of Slayton; "The Blue Earth," H. Casey of Jordan; "What Comprises a Constatute a Legitimate Implement Dealer," R. W. Winter, Granite Falls; "The Relation of the Jobber, Manufacturer and Dealer," O. H. Hellekson, Wheaton.

This evening the convention will be the guests of the manufacturers and jobbers of Minneapolis at a theater party at the Orpheum.

The program for tomorrow morning presents some interesting papers, as follows: "The Meeting of Manufacturers' National Federation at Kansas City," F. J. Lake, Scandia; "The Requirements Necessary to Elevate the Implement to the Plane It Deserves," D. D. Murphy, Blue Earth; "The Cutter," Basil Smunt, Wells; "The Relation That Should Exist Between Competitors," D. H. Evans, Tracy; "Let Us Not Abuse the Concession Regarding the Freight on Implements," D. H. Williams, Rochester. The concluding session will be held tomorrow afternoon, when the reports of the committee, the election of officers and the appointment of standing committees, together with all other business, will come up.

ENJOY A SMOKER

Visiting Implement Men Gather in Force at West Hotel.

The first day's session of the implement dealers' convention was brought to a fitting end by a smoker at the West hotel last night which attracted a large number of guests. The accommodations for the many factory and jobbers were the hosts and 300 visitors enjoyed their hospitality. Several vaudeville features and excellent cigars preceded the gathering for the luncheon that followed. Arthur J. Dean represented the wholesalers as discussed and W. W. Sivright of Hutchinson reported for the retailers.

The following convention committees have been appointed: President, E. Grinols and are engaged in their respective duties: Grievances—S. J. Mealey, Monticello; Louis Smith, Scandia, Wis.; F. M. Robbins, Willmar.

Resolutions—W. W. Sivright, Hutchinson; Charles T. Taylor, Mankato; John Liddell, Wadena.

Committee on the Convention—Matt Fitzpatrick, Stewartville; C. J. Dempsey, Long Prairie; Casper Wachman, Detroit.

The wool is shipped east all at one time of the year, when the market is not at its best. This would mean millions of dollars to the producers in territory tributary to Minneapolis and St. Paul.
