The Game of the Diplomats. "The Diplomatic Game," by F. Cunliffe-Owen, the leading article in The Journal's Sunday Magazine, has a time-interest which the nations of the world are watching the Morocco game still in progress at Algiers. No diplomatist writes this article; he would not be a diplomat if he did. But the author is the best-qualified man in America to write entertainingly on such a topic, and in various guises he has told countless interesting stories of diplomats, statesmen and the world. "The Diplomatic Game" is in his very best vein, and even the players whose game he exposes will be amused by it. For diplomacy, as Mr. Cunliffe-Owen clearly shows, even when professing to be most communicative, always holds something in reserve. In addition to the many secret international agreements of the existence of which the people have no suspicion, there are confidential clauses to nearly every treaty, clauses not included in the official publication.

ASKS THAT ARBOR DAY BE OBSERVED

GOVERNOR ISSUES THE ANNUAL PROCLAMATION.

Day Set Is April 27—Governor's Proclamation Couched in Poetic Terms—Destruction of Our Forests Deplored as Short-Sighted Greed for Wealth.

Governor Johnson issued his Arbor and Bird Day proclamation today. It is a literary production, and written in a poetic style. "It again becomes my duty and my pleasure as governor of Minnesota to set aside Friday, April 27, as Arbor and Bird Day," says the governor, "and to request our citizens, urban and suburban, consecrate it in whole or in part to the cleansing, restoring and beautifying of our fair domain.

"Cleansing and restoration are the debt of the present to the past; beautification is its debt to the future. What our forefathers wooed from nature, or wrested from the hand of the redman and the bay of the bear, let us be able, unashamed, to hand over, when the days of our pilgrimage are ended, not in condition execrable, perhaps, to tenants, but in such a manner as becomes the owners of property entitled.

"Holding with regard to the water system of the continent, the position of the heart to the human body, Minnesota has unparalleled opportunities for agriculture, splendid natural facilities for manufacture, of which she has not only to be expected in days so close to pioneerhood, but also to be expected to possess a sense of the esthetic value of her 10,000 lakes, her forest and field endowment.

"It is with a feeling of keen regret one realizes that, because of the ruthless vandalism of him who covets but to destroy, our state flower appears more and more rarely in its old-time haunts. Too soon it may be that this choicest of our flowers, the florid columbines of the capitol, the protective instinct in man has been so developed of recent years as to have secured relative immunity to his neighbors in fur and feathers. May not it be still further developed to safeguard life that is even more defenseless in its infancy.

"While it has seemed inadvisable," concludes the governor, "to suggest that the exercises in the schoolroom on this day tend more particularly to encourage a spirit of loving, understanding restraint toward flower and shrub and tree, it is not the intention to overlook the obvious duties of sowing, planting and pruning that devolve upon the individual citizen of the community, but these are matters that more obtrusively force themselves on the attention, and the danger that they will be neglected is slight.

NECROLOGIC

THOMAS A. PRENDERGAST died at his home, 429 Ashland avenue, St. Paul, yesterday from heart trouble. Prendergast occupied a position of prominence in St. Paul civic and political life for the last twenty years. He was elected to the office of city clerk in 1879 and held the office until 1895. After leaving the city clerk's office he entered the banking business and was president of the First National bank, a position which he held until the bank closed its doors. After the closing of the bank's affairs he became a partner in the Hamm Brewing company. In 1904 Mayor Smith appointed Mr. Prendergast a member of the water board and he occupied that position at the time of his death.

WHO'S CUSTODIAN OF THE CAPITOL?

GOVERNOR AND CAPITOL COMMISSIONERS DISAGREE AGAIN.

Neither Would Take Responsibility of Granting Permission to Use the Building Till Governor Had Denied It Twice—Commission Only 'Builders and Sweepers' in View of Corliss.

An interesting passage between Governor Johnson and the state capitol commissioners took place in connection with the St. Paul anniversary reception at the new capitol Saturday evening.

The committee on arrangements, headed by Justice E. W. Bazare, first called on the governor to get his permission to hold the reception in the capitol. Governor told them that he had no objection whatever, but that he had no authority to give them the permission. Under the Horton law the building is still in sole control of the commission.

The committee went then to the commissioners, who insisted on passing the responsibility back to the governor. They consulted then with Justice E. W. Corliss of Ferguson Falls, the lawyer member of the commission, wrote the governor that, in his opinion, the commissioners were "only the builders and sweepers of the capitol."

The new code makes the governor custodian of all state properties unless especially entrusted to other officers. The Horton law gives the commission power to properly care for, operate and maintain the new capitol. This, according to Justice Corliss, leaves the governor custodian.

Governor Johnson declined to take that view of the case, and still denied his authority to grant any privileges of the building. The St. Paul committee went back once more to the commission and got the desired permission. Channing Seabury, head of the commission, seemed to agree in passing the matter over to the governor, but was not willing to deny the authority of the commission in the building.

More than fifty Minneapolis bank clerks went down to St. Paul last night in a chartered car to take part in the annual contest in bank work, which is held under the auspices of the St. Paul chapter, American Institute of Bank Clerks, in Knights of Columbus hall. The general management of the events was in the hands of C. G. Roth, second vice agent for the Burroughs Adding Machine company, which furnished several valuable prizes. The Minneapolis men carried off the most important prizes.

The events and winners were as follows: Adding machine listing and footing, first prize, gold watch and fob, Charles Shimer, National Bank of Commerce, Minneapolis; second prize, gold seal ring, G. In the money-counting contest were mingled good counterfeits, raised bills, bills of antebellum issue and Canadian small coins.

Miss Anthony in Domestic Relations. To the Editor of the Journal. You stated recently that "Susan B. Anthony was not celebrated for her housekeeping nor was her cruller recipe sought for."

Now, while this was true in a literal sense, the obvious inference to be drawn from the statement is misleading. Miss Anthony's work for and sympathy with many reforms did not rob her of the obvious inference to be assumed by many. Those who knew her appreciated her mother-heart and strong love of home and kindred. Those who were privileged to enjoy her hospitality at the Rochester home, and they were many, can testify to having been made comfortable and to the exquisite taste with which it was accomplished.

The feeling of her family was beautifully expressed by a niece, Anna Anthony Bacon, in the following poem, written to be read at the funeral: "O AUNT SUSAN. "Story and song shall follow thy dear name. Thou beautiful Aunt Susan, who art dead, And all the world bind laurel round thy head. And lift thy praises in one glorious strain. But those who saw thee nearer than the head. Who heard thy dear voice speak to near home-friends, Saw homely, humble tasks employ thy hands. With true knowledge of thy life are blessed. Thou hadst the universal mother-heart; Thou not a mother in the ties of blood, Full many a child has known thy mother-love. And blessed thee as one sainted and apart. If I could know thee only from one side, I should see thy woman's home-life glorified. —Wendell P. Mosher, Minneapolis, March 29, 1906.

EAU CLAIRE, WIS.—General Charles King, inspector of Company E, Third Infantry, and regimental and battalion officers last night. He is accompanied by Adjutant General B. H. King. A reception for the two generals at the Elks club followed the inspection ceremonies.

WARS ALUMNI HERE A BOOMER

FORMER REGISTRAR JOHNSON WILL ACT AS PRESS AGENT.

Graduates of Institution Formulate Plans Whereby One Man's Time May Be Given to Collecting, Preparing and Sending Out Information Concerning University and Its Affairs.

E. B. Johnson, former registrar of the University of Minnesota, has been elected secretary of the general alumni association of the university, and beginning on April 1, he will devote all his time to the work of bringing the people of Minnesota into closer touch with the state institution and strengthening the bond between Minnesota alumni and their alma mater.

With an office on the campus Mr. Johnson will edit the reorganized Minnesota Daily, manage an information bureau which will probably take the place of the proposed faculty press bureau, make an active campaign in the interests of the alumni association, and devote all his time to "booming" the university. It has been some time that members of the Minnesota Alumni association believed that the best interest of the university demanded that a permanent position should be created for an alumnus who could devote his time to the general interests of the alumni and it is generally felt at the university that the action of Mr. Johnson in taking up the task will result not only in financial benefit to the institution, but in a new era of bettering of conditions at the state university through the state.

Salary Not Fixed. No provision has yet been made in regard to Mr. Johnson's salary, but he will start in his work with the united backing of the board of directors of the alumni association and some permanent officers of the university. He made when the affairs of the association will permit.

The action of the alumni in naming Mr. Johnson as secretary and outlining his work will mean that the proposed press bureau, to be managed under faculty supervision, will not be established. Reports should be made to the scientific and scholastic affairs will be edited by Mr. Johnson and sent out by him in connection with the work of bringing the people of the state and the university into closer touch, but his work will be independent of the faculty.

WISEST HORSE IN THE WORLD IS HERE

CULTURED JIM KEY ARRIVES IN PRIVATE CAR.

He Travels in State With His Groom and Mascot, But Is Democratic Enough When It Comes to a Question of a Chocolate Drop or Lump of Sugar.

Jim Key is in Minneapolis. The highest new-bred, and most talked of horse in the world, reached the city in his palace car at 8 a.m. today. Dr. Cotton's carriage was in waiting for the distinguished visitor, and he was conveyed directly to the veterinary establishment at 617 Fourth avenue S., where he will make his headquarters during his ten days' stay here.

Accompanying his equine majesty are his prime minister, Dr. William Key, and three members of the royal guard, Stanley Davis, Sam Davidson and Gordon Hunch. The party is lodged in Dr. Cotton's establishment and the members of his suite are all busily engaged in preparing for the visit of King Key, who is to have a three days' rest before his initial appearance at the Auditorium, under the auspices of the Minneapolis Humane society next Monday night.

Cordial to Visitors.

Jim Key's apartments are large, airy and well decorated with carpets and accoutrements such as belong to an equine personage of his rank. When called upon this morning by a representative of the press, his majesty showed signs of pleasure and was especially cordial when his visitor presented him with a chocolate almond.

Jim Key is a magnificent horse of a beautiful dark mahogany bay, with black mane and tail and one white stocking. He is a little too thin for beauty and the way to make horses better to look upon, is the most wonderful thing about the horse's appearance is the remarkable width between his eyes, indicating the wonderful intelligence that has astonished the world. He is quiet and absolutely docile in his stall, and while his groom was giving him his morning rub he made the noise of a few signs of eating what was going on about him.

Looks for Sugar.

"Do you feel well this morning, Jim?" asked the reporter. The horse shook his head decidedly and then coyly looked around to see if there was not some sugar medicine coming for him. Dr. Key was away during the visit, and as no one else ever makes Jim do "stunts," the horse was allowed to rest and the visitor departed.

A. R. Rogers, owner of the wonderful animal, must have read of the burglar's advice to Sir Walter Raleigh to the effect that the way effectually to keep burglars away is to have a noisy, rusty look and a little dog on the inside. At least, he has the little dog, and "Munk" is a lively, barkative little Scotch terrier, his mascot, and his constant companion. He eats, sleeps and lives with the horse, and when a stranger appears in the stall the canine sets up a shrill series of exclamations that will arouse a house or a barn-hold in short order.

Will Show All Week.

The first public appearance of the great horse will be at the Auditorium, Monday night. This will be a complimentary performance to invited guests, who include the city dignitaries, ministers, school and press. Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons and evenings he will give exhibitions of his wonderful intelligence and his ability to do all the national humane societies. Every school child in the city will have a half-holiday in which to see Jim Key, and from all indications thousands of Minneapolis will take advantage of this opportunity of learning the lesson of kindness to animals that Jim is teaching. Saturday will be St. Paul day.

The Wedding Silver

That given by the family should be the sort that is undeniably handsome, for time will never change your high estimation of the pattern, so many cheapened designs have been placed upon the market by manufacturers to compete with one another that it has become necessary to get out special designs for the exclusive shops of the country whose patrons desire greater beauty of design—greater artistic merit—of a quality that is not possible where the lower cost of production forbids high ideals. We are showing none but these "special designs" we show are confined to us for Minneapolis. We invite inspection—our prices, owing to our conservative profit, are about the same as asked for the inferior weight, quality and design. See our exclusive designs before buying Sterling Silver.
