Special to The Journal. Washington, April 14.—Apropos of weddings, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth received a gift which all of her acquaintances are coveting.

It is a pretty conceit in the shape of broadcated satin book, wherein are kept all the souvenirs of a wedding. A scrap of the wedding gown, the going away frock and all the different trousseau dresses is pasted over cleverly sketched pages, in which no nonsense verses are written.

The signature of Bishop Satterlee adorns Mrs. Longworth's book, together with the autographs of her distinguished father and all his cabinet.

There is a snapshot of the auto in which Mr. and Mrs. Longworth ventured into the unknown, and many different views of the McLean place, Friendship, where the honeymoon was passed.

This book is perfect treasure, and Mrs. Longworth values it more than rubies.

The she said with a fine show of firmness at the outset of her married life that she would attend to her own correspondence and that the employment of a social secretary was a piece of nonsense, Mrs. Longworth has been forced to hire a stenographer. She did not count on the mass of letters that would come her way. They are as fast as a lightning bolt.

Some ask her advice about affairs of the heart, or other petition for pecuniary assistance so that the wedding day may be hastened. A sample plea comes from a young woman, the daughter of a missionary, who says she sorely needs $3,000 so that she may get a suitable trousseau and journey to Sitka, Alaska, where her betrothed is working.

The diplomats are already making their plans for the summer flight. Newport, which was for so many years the Mecca for almost the entire corps, will be abandoned this year by most of the ambassadors, who will scatter in the Berkshires and the more northerly resorts along the Maine coast.

The British ambassador and Lady Durand will again occupy their cottage at Lenox early in May upon the ambassador's return to England. The British embassy has a new third secretary, Herbert Watson, who has arrived from the foreign office in London.

The Russian ambassador spent last summer at Manchester-by-the-Sea, and the Baroness Rosen liked it so much that they will occupy Jefferson Coolidge's villa again this season.

If the German ambassador and Baroness Speck von Sternburg are in this country they will go to the same resort, but if the ambassador should take his holiday during the summer months, Freiherr von dem Bussche-Haddenhausen will be charge d'affaires and will join the colony at Lenox. The latter, with his wife, will be in the Berkshires in absence, but will return in time to enjoy an American summer.

Bar Harbor claims the Danish minister, M. Brun, and it is safe to predict that the French ambassador and Mrs. Jusseland are in this country they will be near Boston, Mme. Jusseland's girlhood home.

Lloyd C. Griscom, the new United States ambassador to Brazil, and Mrs. Griscom, have arrived at Plymouth, England, from New York, and proceeded to London, where they will be the guests of the United States ambassador and Mrs. Reid.

One of the most prominent and influential women in Washington society, is Mme. Christian Hauge, the beautiful American wife of the first Norwegian minister to this country. She was formerly charge d'affaires of the kingdom of Sweden and Norway at our national capital, and proved so efficient in that post that when Norway recently established her independence she was selected as her diplomatic representative in the United States. He is performing the duties of the high position most acceptably and daily justifying his choice for it by the new government.

Mme. Hauge, before her marriage to the present minister two years ago, was Mrs. Frederick Joy, of Louisville, Ky., and a popular member of the society of the city. The couple became acquainted in Washington, the social secretary. Hauge's position is of no little importance, and in this field Mme. Hauge is a power. While she is not noted for

The entire diplomatic corps attended in full uniform and will spend the entire summer making trips to interesting places in France and other European countries.

Mrs. Townsend, "Frances Hodgson Burnett" has been the guest of Miss Mollie Elliott Seawell for the past week, during which she has been the recipient of much social attention.

On Wednesday Mrs. Townsend will be dining in her honor, which was one of the most delightfully informal functions of the early spring.

Mrs. Townsend expects to remain in Washington for several weeks preparatory to sailing for Europe, to spend the summer at her estate, Maythan Hall, in the suburbs of London.

The receptions to be held during the coming session of the recently continental congress, D. A. R., include one by the president general, Mrs. Donald McLean, Wednesday evening, at the New Willard, and a reception to the charter members of the national society, D. A. R., at Continental hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont have completed the purchase of a triangular lot at the intersection of New Hampshire avenue, Eighteenth and R streets, and will, as soon as plans are completed, begin the erection of a residence there for a permanent home.

Until this house is completed they will continue to occupy each season the residence on Scott circle which they leased from Mr. Morgan of New York.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Adola Greely, daughter of Major General and Mrs. A. W. Greely, and the Rev. Charles Lawrence Adams, which takes place at high noon in St. John's church, April 24. There will be a breakfast for the wedding party and relatives at the home of General and Mrs. Greely in G street.

Mrs. Fairbanks will probably go to the Virginia Hot Springs immediately after Easter for a few weeks' rest. She is in need of a respite from constant social duties before resuming spring entertainments.

Women prominent in society are identified with the ball to be held at the New Willard on Thursday night, as one of the social features of the grand arch council of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, which will be in session next week. The patronesses will be Meses, Joseph General Sherman's daughter, Mrs. Alexander M. Thackara, wife of the United States consul general at Berlin, is the leader of the American colony in the kaiser's capital. Her home is in that part of the city known as the District of Columbia, because so many Americans are domiciled in the vicinity.

Once white, now yellow with age, a pair of satin slippers is treasured by Mrs. Joseph B. Foraker, wife of the senator from Ohio, and thereby hangs a tale. When Benjamin Harrison was inaugurated in Washington Mrs. Harrison naturally had an extremely busy day. When evening came she was greatly fatigued and her feet, cased in new shoes all day, were aching.

Her inauguration ball slippers were of pearl-embroidered white satin. She managed to get them on, but when she arrived in the ballroom she was in agony. She took off her slippers, and the consequence was that when it came time to lead the grand march she could not get them on again. Mrs. Foraker was near by and offered her own slippers. They "felt like heaven," said Mrs. Harrison. Thereupon Mrs. Foraker said: "You wear them thru the evening and I will keep on my feet."
