MEN TOO MODEST

IN MINNEAPOLIS

SLOW TO TELL VISITORS ABOUT ATTRACTIONS.

Dixie Is Filled with People Who Are Pastmasters in Art of Booming, Says J. H. Eschman, but Brilliant Talk Has Little Foundation.

"There's only one thing the matter with Minneapolis, and that is that business men are too modest," declares J. H. Eschman, concessionaire of the Lake Harriet pavilion, who, as a member of the "see America first" school, has just returned from a fifth tour of the south.

"My winter's journey, taken by easy stages," he says, "began at Hot Springs, Ark., extended to the Gulf of Mexico, took me as far south as Tampa, as far east as Augusta, Ga., and brought me into direct contact with the mountain dwellers of the south, and with the exception of the latter folk, what impressed me more than anything else was the constant and enthusiastic presence of the 'boomer'."

"In every town of any size in the south the 'boomer' is first and last in evidence. Whether the 'boomer' is the first evidence of the real industrial beginning of the south, just as he is inseparably associated with the development of the far west, is a question, but he is there, all right, and there all the time.

"At Atlanta, which is one of the most promising cities of the south, a committee of citizens meets you on the train, wants to know your business and intentions, whether you propose to remain in their beautiful city or not, and if not why not. And the committee does not lack in eloquence, either."

"The Atlanta way," which is one of the most promising cities of the south, a committee of citizens meets you on the train, wants to know your business and intentions, whether you propose to remain in their beautiful city or not, and if not why not. And the committee does not lack in eloquence, either."

"Unfortunately, the south hasn't the talking points we have in Minnesota. For the most part, the land is so sandy that nothing will grow without fertilization, but labor is cheap. This is especially true in Birmingham, which is the coming city of the south, and in the cities where the cotton goods factories are springing up. I have met department foremen in these factories who were getting $1.25 a day and thought they were well off, while children work there for 25 cents a day when they should be in school.

Land Cheap Here.

"In comparison with the valuations in Atlanta, Birmingham and several other cities I visited, real estate in Minneapolis is low, decided low, and it seems mighty good to get a look at real black loam again.

"The south is fast becoming eminently practical, in spots. There one can get 5 cents an acre for the best of the most beautiful views anyone would care to look at.

Among other things I decided to see down south was the Natural Bridge of Virginia. It cost me $2, $1 for the other dollar to get into the showgrounds. In some respects the south is not so slow."

MANY DIVORCES ARE NOW NULL AND VOID

The United States supreme court decision handed down yesterday in the New York-Connecticut case of John W. Haddock against Harriet Haddock, was really commented on today by judges and lawyers.

By its rulings over half of the divorces granted in Hennepin county are null and void and thousands of men and women who have imagined themselves free and have exercised their supposed freedom by remarrying are in reality still legally married and are technically guilty of non-support, bigamy and similar offenses.

In substance, the decision, as reported, holds that state courts have no jurisdiction in divorce cases where parties have been married in a state living outside of the state.

"If this decision stands as reported in the press, it will cause more different kinds of trouble than any decision ever rendered," said a judge of the Hennepin district court today. "It means that over half of the divorce judgments issued by our courts are void and no one can be certain what is really divorced or not. It also means the revolutionizing of our practice, and where it will all end is a matter for the most imaginative speculators."

"Of course the matter will have to be fought out in our courts on the strength of this United States supreme court ruling, but the prospects for an endless tangle are the best in the world. Our courts have held, and I believe that they will do now, of course, remains to be seen, but this decision will put thousands of people on the anxious seat."

Roosevelts Shine in "The Rane of Oudh"

Bigger, brighter and better than any of its previous attempts, the Roosevelt club achieved another triumph last night with the Minneapolis opening of "The Rane of Oudh," the fifth elaborate musical production undertaken by that organization. Full of brilliant stage pictures, sumptuous scenic effects and charming and bewildering costumes, it more than makes the grade. The lines, bright with wit and local color; music that always fits the situation, whether it be the rollicking chorus of the soldiers, the lay of the lover or the chant of the high priests, and perfect orchestration, all go to make the production a success in every way.

"The girls are not like other girls, they look it, and some of the broilers looked good enough for a Johnny at the stage entrance and a little supper afterward. The men were real men, there was no doubting that. Society was out in force to be amused after the Lenten season and was amused from first to last and with everything and everybody."

"It was so good that it is hard to tell where to begin saying the good things. From the time the curtain went up on a gorgeous Benares street scene until the finale, when Ben Ege kindly stepped aside that the courtesan in the distance might be seen and heard, there was a bewildering series of changing stage pictures, brilliant costumes, charming scenic and bewitching musical numbers.

The real interest began when Mrs. Crosby-Parbury of Minneapolis, the sumptuous Charles M. Lane, appeared, followed by his, her or its (take your choice) six charming daughters, dainty little Margery, alias "Louie," Collins, and the prettiest of them, after they arrived the audience felt thoroughly at home in Benares. Selim, the rajah's silent and unique adviser, as played by Phil Brooks, was a screaming success, and his little song with the Parbury "piano movers," "The Festive Nonsense Rhyme" was one of the comedy hits of the show.

"The point in the production the care in staging, the perfect acting of chorus and principals, and the judgment displayed in their selection was shown in the high standard of the style of Mr. Lane as M. Lane, who revealed, even after the other successful impersonations of previous years, another hit. Both are high class. Captain rajah had all the august serenity of the title on the bill, but at the same time gave the part the lofty and dignified but not overdone quality of the part.

Two of the strongest types of the production are Louise Renard, the French milliner who lives by her wits, and J. Blather Skite, the typical crook, for the time being courier to Mrs. Parbury and her party. John E. Paris is a big haul and in the last act they appear in a Spanish dance that is one of the most artistically executed specialties of the performance. Another clever specialty is a solo dance by Walter Winslow.

No better stage lovers could exist than Molly Mudge, the poor niece, played by William Newgard, and Harry Shaver-Smith, played by Frederick Newcomb. The two have a number of beautiful musical numbers that are most capably handled. "Shy Little Peggy," which they sing together, "The Message of the Rose" sung by Mr. Newcomb, and "My Boy and Babe," one of the clever little melodies, by Mr. Newgard. George F. Meader, a star of other attractions, had one of the musical opportunities, "Like unto a Star," and received a call after call. His singing is easy and most artistic and his makeup as Laura Parbury was charming. A. Balfour Champlain, better known as John Bayenscroft, and the soldiers, received an ovation and numerous calls for a dashing soldiers' chorus, "The King's Colonials."

The specialties galore: "The Galloping Cooks," a dashing chorus led by Claude Cotton, the Cook conductor, and supported by the tourists; the double sextet by the English officers and the Parbury daughters; and many others, each of the three acts is remarkably strong in arrangement and in chorus work.

Great credit is due those in charge of the production for their care in producing so elaborate a spectacle as the "Rane of Oudh." All the preliminaries—the book, the music and the stage arrangements—were in capable hands and the high standard of the production is proof of the capable work done. Great credit is due to Cyrus Brown, who wrote the book, and to Claude Madden, who is responsible for the music. Both are high class. Captain rajah was as their work, much of the credit for the success is due to Miss Ethel Malcolm, who trained the ballet and arranged the ensemble, which are elaborate and strikingly artistic.

NEED POND FOR STORAGE MINNEHAHA IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION ASKS PARK BOARD TO INCLUDE LAKE AMELIA IN SYSTEM.

Another petition asking for the inclusion of Lake Amelia in the park system was presented to the park board at its meeting yesterday. The petition came from the Minnehaha Improvement association and recited the advisability of securing control of the shores of Lake Amelia for park purposes. The chief value of the lake will be as a reservoir for Minnehaha creek, so that the falls will show to advantage in dry seasons.

Plans for beautifying the entrance to Minnehaha park were adopted. The pony track will be removed to the north side of the Godfrey road and the space devoted to trees and shrubbery. A garage and horse shed will also be erected and other improvements made.

Plans for improving Richard Chute square, University and First avenues SE, were adopted and $375 was appropriated for planting. Several minor improvements were ordered at Harriet with a view to making the approaches more attractive.

A recommendation from Superintendent Theodore Wirth that $3,000 be expended on ornamental trees referred to the committee on improvements, with power to act. The matter of vesting the park caretakers with authority as special policemen was referred to the committee on police.

In order to secure the peaceful removal of Mrs. Carrie Decker, the squatter on St. Anthony parkway, it was decided to give her $100 to help her in removing her house and sheds.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Elsie Bonham and Jack Langway was incorrect and is causing the young people much embarrassment.

ELABORATE PLAN OF CAMPAIGN DOESN'T BRING EXPECTED RESULTS. Suckers bet their name, and are no sadder to catch than other fish when a special effort is made to get them, as was attempted yesterday at Lake Harriet. The attempt was not an entire failure, as about 250 pounds were taken.

THE PURPOSE OF THE ONSLAUGHT against the suckers was to rid the lake of them, as they feed on the bass spawn in the spring. Under the direction of Park Commissioner John H. Van Nest and Game Warden J. C. Williams a party of men from the workhouse set out yesterday to war on the suckers. The party had a seine 300 feet long and a big trap net.
