MINNESOTA WHEAT AREA IS BROKEN

GREATER TENDENCY TO DIVERSIFY THIS YEAR.

Indications Point to More Oats, Oats and Barley and a Considerable Increase in Macaroni Wheat Acreage—Season Backward in Spots, but General Conditions Very Favorable.

Reports to The Journal confirm the former intimations of a more decided tendency on the part of Minnesota farmers to sow coarse grains and macaroni wheat this year, and indicate that in spring wheat the acreage in the state will be about the same as last year, with more probability at present of a slight decrease than of an increase.

Corn is favorite in some localities, and oats and barley will cover a larger area. Minnesota farmers who raised macaroni wheat last year did so well in price, indeed, the superior quality of the crop was such a large acreage, also Minnesota heavy lands are not suited to it, and the increase will be found on high lands in northwest and west central counties.

Blooming Prairie—Seeding just begun. Wheat acreage no larger. Little macaroni wheat around here. Outlook fair. Rainfall sufficient and soil in good condition.

Belle Plaine—Seeding a little late. Less wheat will probably be sown. There will be more macaroni wheat. Corn will be planted very largely. There will be considerable barley raised. There has been a trifle too much rain and the soil is a little too wet; wheat on low ground will be late.

Madison—The wheat acreage is smaller. There is more barley, and some flax, oats and rye. The soil is in excellent condition and the outlook good at this time.

Glyndon—Little seeding done yet. Ground too wet.

Carver—Owing to the cold weather of March seeding is more backward this year than last season. The wheat acreage is smaller, a majority of the farmers deciding to grow sugar beets, flax, oats and rye. The soil is established at Chaska, the land being secured by pledge early enough to affect the wheat acreage. The large amount of moisture in the soil is regarded as favorable to good crops. Farmers are quite optimistic.

Hallowell—Seeding of wheat is well advanced, fine weather having reached here two weeks earlier than last year. The wheat acreage will be smaller by one-third than last year owing to the little fall plowing done. Kitten county farmers expect to sow more macaroni wheat than ever. A large acreage of oats, barley and flax will be sown.

Barnesville—Seeding is not so far advanced as last year. The wheat acreage will not be as large. In view of the late season, there will be much more macaroni wheat sown. Present indications would point to an increase in the acreage of oats and barley or should the rains continue a very material increase in flax. With fair weather flax would remain about as last year.

Advanced seeding around here has hardly commenced yet as only a few farmers have been able to get out on their lands on account of the wet weather, but it is hoped that by next week if this dry weather keeps on they will be able to commence. The wheat acreage will not be as large, and oats and barley more generally sown. There will be more macaroni sown than before, as macaroni gave good success last year.

With the heavy rains of last fall and the heavy snow during the winter added to the abundance of rain this spring the fields are not in very good shape for seeding and the outlook is the brightest. Only with favorable weather can a crop be expected. The southwestern part of Norman county is worse off, as in these fields the snow lodged more heavily during the winter and it will take some time before they can be plowed.

Fergus Falls—The wheat acreage will be somewhat decreased. There will be more macaroni sown and less spring wheat; a very considerable increase in macaroni. Practically no oats or barley are sown yet; however, the farmers are planning to sow a larger acreage of these grains. The rye crop here is not worth mentioning. It is probably the same as last year.

Flax is also an important crop here; the yield is seldom heavy, but there will be as much sown this year as last. There has been too much rain. Otherwise the soil is in good condition.

For this immediate vicinity, which is very decidedly rolling, the outlook is good. There is still time to raise a good crop in all lines. In the vicinity of Foxhome and Everdell it will be impossible to seed for at least a week, and in some places longer. This means that the grain is going into the ground very late, and it will take an exceptionally favorable season to produce an average crop.

Wheat—Seeding is not so far advanced as last year. The wheat acreage is a little larger. There will be considerable more macaroni wheat sown. Less flax this year, practically no rye. Oats and barley about the same.

Elbow Lake—Seeding is later in Grant county this year. On the flat west of here it is still too wet, and seeding will not begin for another week. The wheat acreage will be about the same as last year, with an increase in macaroni. About the usual acreage of flax and barley. The season is two weeks later than last year, but the soil is in good condition.

Albany, Lea—Seeding in Freeborn county is behind last year. The wheat acreage will be smaller on account of the low price and the lateness of seeding. Very little macaroni was raised here and the acreage sown will be light. More flax will be sown if seed can be secured, as there is sale for the straw, but about the same amount of oats and barley will be sown as last year. There has been so much rain that seeding has been delayed until this week and the soil in many fields is wet.

Unless the weather proves very unfavorable there will be a larger acreage of corn this year than ever in Freeborn county, as farmers are coming to recognize that as one of their best crops. There will be a large acreage of potatoes, perhaps 10 per cent more than a year ago.

MME. NORDICA Mme. Nordica was welcomed by a large audience at the Auditorium last evening in the closing number of the "All-Star course," and seemed to have lost none of her power to please. She looked, indeed, the superb singer of song and justified her claims to the title, in a program that was charming in its entirety, and sung with great artistic finish and with a voice full of warmth, brightness, power and flexibility.

It would be difficult to say in just what numbers Mme. Nordica was most successful. The "Dieu Theure Halle," from Tanhauser, was given with splendid dramatic power and effectiveness. Each note rang clear and true with all declamatory precision, and yet full of music. An encore was of course demanded and accorded after several recitations.

The English group of songs seemed, if anything, less grateful to the ear. Perhaps it was the selections themselves, altho Handel's "Angels Ever Bright and Holy," with its pretty recitative was one of the number. It was exquisitely sung. At the conclusion of this group, Mme. Nordica was recalled again and again for a double encore and sang two verses of the "Swanance River," much to the delight of the audience.

In the diva's second group of French songs, she was most felicitous. They were all charming, and sung with grace and an intuition of the spirit of the selections that was delightful. As an encore Mme. Nordica, by special request, sang the "Walkure's Cry," a brilliant rendition of the famous song, less shrill than that of Gadske's and perhaps for that reason a little less effective. The German group of songs, including Grieg's immortal "In Kjan" and Strauss' "Serenade" and the close of the concert she was again called and recalled until a last encore was sung. It was superb, and formed a fitting close to the evening's program.

The play of Signor Angelo Patricolo was a study. His opening number, Thalberg's "Fantasia on the Airs of La Sonnambula," was uninteresting and not well played.

The hackneyed Chopin numbers were played without special temperament, but with good technique. It was the encore which followed, however, which woke up the audience and brought forth the capable artist. It was the immensely difficult "Tremolo," which was given with a dash and a clearness of interpretation, that, taken at the presto tempo, was marvelous as well played, but was surpassed in its execution and results by the Gottschalk's "Pasquinade," which was played after three recalls.

Beethoven's "Sonata" by Mme. Nordica as heretofore and with the same care for results.

—Howard Boardman.

"U" Glee and Mandolin. The University Glee and Mandolin club appeared in a "twilight" program at the university chapel yesterday afternoon and achieved a bigger success than they have this season.

The work of both clubs was excellent, and the audience, which completely filled the chapel, showed its appreciation with much enthusiastic applause.

A. F. Milner made the hit of the afternoon with his splendid singing of the "Border Ballad," which was excellently and by singing "Dearie" with the Mandolin club accompaniment. Mr. Door's violin solo was also a fine number and well received.

TRIED TO BRIBE JUROR St. Paul Man Sentenced to County Jail as Punishment.

Judge Kelly, in the district court in St. Paul, yesterday sentenced Henry Holland to serve five months in jail without the option of a fine, for contempt of court in trying to influence a juror.

Dubord in the case of Edward Hartman against the Soo road for damages. Dubord told the court he was given $50 by Holland to induce him to stand out for a verdict against the road of at least $10,000. He produced the $50 and surrendered it to the court in corroboration of the story. The court refused to grant any stay in the sentence unless such stay is ordered by the supreme court.
