KODAK PICTURE HANLEY'S UNDOING

PROMOTER OF RAILROADS AS PROMOTER OF MATRIMONY.

Wife No. 1 and Wife No. 2 Trap Doubly Wedded Man and Expose a Marriage in Minneapolis and Another in Chicago, with Only One Bridegroom for the Two.

A little kodak picture taken by wife No. 1 and cleverly handled by wife No. 2 has proved the undoing of Samuel M. Hanley, a prominent man in the northwest, who until a few weeks ago lived at 227 Polk street N.E.

Hanley is the latest Minneapolis man to try a hand at bigamy, and his record for keeping two wives from becoming suspicious is a clever one. One wife lived in Minneapolis and the other in Chicago, and Hanley, who always seemed to have more business than money, has divided his time about equally between them since last November.

His two wives, working in conjunction with Police Superintendent Doyle, have at last forced him into hiding.

According to the story of the women, Hanley married Katie Spranger in 1884. He was then in good financial condition, and he has lived in Minneapolis much of the time since then.

They have one daughter, now 13 years old, who lived with them in their home on Polk street.

At the Altar Again.

Last fall Hanley was in need of money, and while in Chicago became acquainted with Miss Helen Knight, who knew him as S. A. Hartley. He told her he had owned a large factory in Minneapolis, and that it had burned down. Then began his trips. He would spend a week in Chicago, telling her he had owned a large factory in Minneapolis, and that it had burned down. Then began his trips. He would spend a week in Chicago, telling her he had owned a large factory in Minneapolis, and that it had burned down.

He was then in good financial condition, and he has lived in Minneapolis much of the time since then.

They have one daughter, now 13 years old, who lived with them in their home on Polk street.

Trusting to his abilities, wife No. 2 drew her savings from the bank and placed them in the hands for investment. Shortly after this supposed failure of the Chicago wife, in looking over some of his papers, discovered the name Hanley scratched out and the name Hartley written over it. This aroused her suspicions and she at once wrote to Police Superintendent Doyle of Minneapolis, who informed her that Hanley lived here and had one child.

A Picture Did It.

Hanley had given the Chicago woman a picture of himself taken by his first wife. To make sure, wife No. 2 sent this picture to the other wife, telling her that the man had married her last fall. This was about five weeks ago. Mrs. Hanley of Minneapolis recognized the picture and the two women planned to set a trap for the bigamist.

Hanley was to arrive in Chicago on a certain day and his Minneapolis wife went to that city, where the two women met him at the station. As he stepped from the train, the two women approached him, but he muffled his eyes and fled the ordeal.

Which one of us do you prefer? Speak! said the two wives at the same time.

Hanley stammered several excuses, saying he didn't know why he did such a thing, and to avoid a public scene he was allowed to go. He is thought to have gone to the other wife, and both women have agreed to prosecute him if he can be arrested. Wife No. 2 has applied to the courts for an annulment of the marriage.

His Rise Rapid.

From a railroad conductor to railroad president was Hanley's rapid rise a few years ago. He was formerly a conductor on the St. Paul line and in 1902 he was made president of the Minneapolis, Superior, St. Paul & Winnipeg Railway company. This company purchased terminals in all of these cities and Hanley was the chief promoter. The road, however, was never built, although the company is still in existence. Hanley was well known at that time and was considered a shrewd business man.

APPEALS TO YOUNG MEN

Governor Johnson Addresses Large Audience in St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

Governor John A. Johnson entertained a large and enthusiastic audience at the St. Paul's Swedish Lutheran church, Fifteenth avenue S., in Bloomington, last evening. He spoke mostly to young men and his subject, "The Way to Success," was treated with the governor's usual energy and directness.

He eloquently urged the young men to exert their best efforts and to win the goal of their best ambitions despite all obstacles.

"If you wish to win in this world," he said, "do not sit down and wait for some one's automobile to come along and pick you up and carry you on to success. Get out and win your own automobile and create your own opportunity, for as surely as there is anything worth having in this world, so surely is there your equal chance of attaining what you desire, and it is true, that life and success is a 'survival of the fittest.'"

BOARD OF HEALTH MAY MAKE LAWS

ATTORNEY GENERAL INDORESSES AUTHORITY FOUND IN CODE.

Rules Adopted by State Board for Sanitation Will Have all the Force of Law, and Power of the Board is Greatly Strengthened by the Code.

Attorney General Young today informed the state board of health that in his belief the board may exercise the increased powers granted to it by the new code.

The code gives the board general powers to make reasonable regulations for the public health, which after approval by the attorney general and after their publication, will have all the force of law.

The question was raised whether this was not a legislative right that the legislature could not turn over to any one else. The attorney general holds that it is a valid grant of power.

The board held an adjourned meeting today and resumed its consideration of the new code of rules drawn up by Secretary Bunker. Under the attorney general's opinion it will go right ahead and enforce these rules as far as deemed advisable. They are always subject to review by the courts if any one claims they are unreasonable.

There are 150 rules being considered, covering the whole subject of sanitation. They embrace contagious diseases, water supplies, sanitation of public buildings, railway cars, the regulation of nuisances, and other minor topics.

When the board and the attorney general have passed on these rules, they will be published, and will then be the same as laws of the state, with the same force and effect as laws of the state. The state capital commission had a regular meeting at 2 o'clock for one of its bimonthly meetings.

AUTOIST'S LIBERALITY GALLING TO "NATIVE"

Ten cents is too much for the use of a horse at two hours, in the opinion of one of the residents along the Excelsior road. Consequently, he returned that princely sum to a prominent business man and automobilist today.

The man from Minneapolis was making his way to Excelsior, when he found himself stalled at the foot of the Deephaven hill. Investigation showed that an empty gasoline tank, and he entered the yard of a nearby house in search of fodder for his engine. A search of the premises failed to reveal a quart of the Standard Oil product, which the owner cheerfully offered to lend.

Pitying the automobilist's plight, the native further negotiated from a neighbor the loan of a horse and buggy to be used in a trip to Deephaven after the needed gasoline to reveal the native's small son was also sent along as a pilot.

In two hours the lad returned alone, with 10 cents clutched in his chubby fist. He had driven to Deephaven, walked with the automobilist to Cottagewood, helped carry back a ten gallon can of gasoline and had agreed to return it to its owner in Cottagewood the next morning.

"Money was not what I did the favor for," said the indignant native today. "All he needed to do was to thank me decently, for I am always glad to help out anyone in trouble. The gall of offering such a sum for such services is almost as bad as his lack of common courtesy."

JAIL IS DISGRACE SAYS THE SHERIFF

DECLARES NIGHT GUARD IS ENTIRELY INADEQUATE.

Smaller Cities Without Exception Make Better Provision for Caring for and Guarding Prisoners Than Minneapolis, Says Official—Move Being Made to Secure Modern Prison.

"Hennepin county's jail is a disgrace and the provision for only one night guard is criminal," declared Sheriff J. W. Dreger today. "Notwithstanding my repeated requests for more help on the night shift the county commissioners have seen fit to make provision for only one night jailer and as a result we run a perpetual risk of a jail delivery."

"What if the night guard should be taken sick during his watch? I hate to think of the possible result. If anything should happen to this lone guard there might be several hours' time given to the desperate men who are in the jail to cut their way out and gain their liberty. In no jail of anything like the size of the Hennepin county institution is there so small a guard. I have visited a number of prisons all over the country and our provisions for the safety of our prisoners are the poorest of any I have seen."

Some Outside Figures.

"In St. Paul, where there are barely half as many prisoners cared for as in our jail, they keep three men on duty in the daytime and two at night. We have two and one in Detroit, Mich., their guard is divided into three shifts of seven, five and three men. In Winnipeg, where they have an average of sixty prisoners, there are two turnkeys and five guards. Some of the other jails in the state have had as many as ninety-five prisoners at a time, we have but one guard at night. It is certainly a responsibility of letting one my deputies sleep in the jail as an aid in time of emergency the guard is entirely inadequate."

Everything Is Bad.

"The jail itself is also antiquated and what with improper ventilation and barbarous arrangement it affords nothing but the worst place for the safe and proper care of the many classes of criminals left to our care. In no way can we prevent the hardened criminals from coming in contact with the young and impressionable inmates and the result is anything but desirable."

"This evil, however, may soon be remedied as steps are already being taken to secure a new and modern county jail. At the request of some members of the municipal building commission I have written to some of the jail builders and the Pauly Jail Building company of St. Louis has promised to send a man here in the near future when we will get figures on the cost of doing the rebuilding so much needed."

SAYS BOY CUT SISTER

Edna Prindle Tells Court that Wilford Lyons Used His Knife.

The case of Wilford Lyons, charged with hitting the face of 7-year-old Marjorie Prindle at White Bear, was before the St. Paul municipal court yesterday morning, but continued to Saturday to procure additional evidence. Dr. Charles L. Clarke testified that the girl was brought to him for treatment, but that because his office was being repaired, after applying an anesthetic dressing he sent her to Dr. Francis' office.

From his examination he thought all but one of the wounds appeared to have been made by the barb wire. Edna Prindle, twin sister of the injured girl, told the court that Wilford Lyons had threatened to cut off their ears. When Judge Orr asked how her sister's face was cut she said "By Wilford Lyons." "How?" asked the court. "He cut her," was the reply.
