AMERICAN HEIRESS SHARES LORD'S EXILE

Wife of Baronet, Shunned for Cheating at Cards, True to Husband.

Special Correspondence of The Journal.

London, Oct. 26.—I met the Gordon-Cummings in London this week on their way home to Scotland. Lady Gordon-Cummings was Florence Garner of New York, one of the Garners, her sisters being the Countess de Moltke, and the Marquise de Breteuil. No woman ever made a greater sacrifice for love than Florence Garner. To marry a man brought in guilty of cheating at cards meant and means to the day of her death social ostracism.

At the time of the famous trial, she and Gordon-Cummings were only engaged and after the verdict, which made him a marked man for life, he came straight to her and offered to release her. She rose to the occasion in a manner which touched everyone who knew them, saying if he insisted upon giving her up she would kill herself.

Gordon-Cummings turned to her and replied: "That is precisely what I had intended to do with myself had you taken me to my word."

Out Dead by Society. To this day they are still "cut dead" by society. This gives them but little trouble for they are just as much in love as in that first hour when Gordon-Cummings was drummed out of his own set for all time. There are people who still say he is innocent, notably all his humble neighbors in Scotland, who just adore him. Some time ago, the Wilsons of Cranby Croft, at whose house the alleged cheating took place, were about to build a mansion near the Cummings, but the workmen engaged on it were stoned from the premises and altogether things were made so hot for the Cranby Croft people by Sir Gordon-Cummings's poor neighbors that the Wilsons thought discretion the better part of valor, so they abandoned the idea of erecting this Scotch seat. The site upon which it was to have been built is overgrown with weeds and has become a kind of common.

Auto to Restore Complexion. When a woman loses her complexion, you may regard her socially as a person of the past. This is what happened to the Countess of Essex, who before her marriage was Miss Adela Grant, daughter of Beach Grant of New York. She was in despair, more especially as she is one of the women whose good looks depend so much upon their coloring. The loss of her complexion was caused by acute dyspepsia. She consulted every specialist in London and the continent. One suggested a vegetarian fare, another fruit, a third grains and so on. The somewhat better than when faring on meat, she was still far from well when she went to a Paris "quack"—I have heard him called. Anyway, he has given her back her looks! His prescription chiefly was to motor at an unholy rate, the idea being to take in—with the greatest rapidity—as much oxygen as possible. This is supposed to stimulate the digestive organs more successfully than anything else. It worked marvels in the case of Lady Essex, who has just completed a "scorching" trip thru the south of France, and is now looking like the proverbial "peach." What she paid in fines is a detail. Has she not accomplished the all important!

Wife Chief Solace.

No woman is having a worse time just now than Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain. The illness thru which her husband is passing—I may almost write "passing away," for that is practically what it amounts to—is of a most serious nature, and his nervous being in such a strained condition, have caused his temper to be most trying.

I never before knew of an American woman becoming a slave, yet this is what she has arrived at. She is never out of the sickroom, and tho there are nurses, of course, they count for little, as it is his wife who does everything for the fallen chief. She is to him exactly what Mrs. Gladstone was to the great liberal premier—the sole individual essential to his happiness in private life.

When he is out of pain, she has the same unlimited power over him and she rules him by "canoodling" him into believing he has his own way! She has never posed as being a clever woman, but that is where her cleverness comes in, for this great statesman has a holy terror of all femininity which aces that cut.

Snubbed the Queen.

Well, Mrs. Chamberlain has had her triumph—no one more so—and she had the distinction of once snubbing, in a very ladylike way, Queen Victoria herself.

"You are not a bit like an American," said the queen.

"That is the very worst compliment you could possibly pay me," was the reply.

American women, Queen Victoria could not tolerate at any price. Like society of her time, she used to say they were all the daughters of pork butchers, whose fathers had suddenly made "piles."

Mrs. Chamberlain has had no ambition to shine socially. As a hostess she has been a dire failure. On a memorable occasion, things were so badly managed at one of her parties, that royalties who were invited, never got beyond the hall, so great was the crush. The chancellor of the exchequer, as Chamberlain then was, behaved like a maniac when he heard what had happened; but the hostess in her quiet way, remarked:

"Such a pity, dear, but it really couldn't be helped. Had they had the courtesy and presence of mind to have gone into the lower rooms and sent for me, I could easily have made way for them on the staircase!"

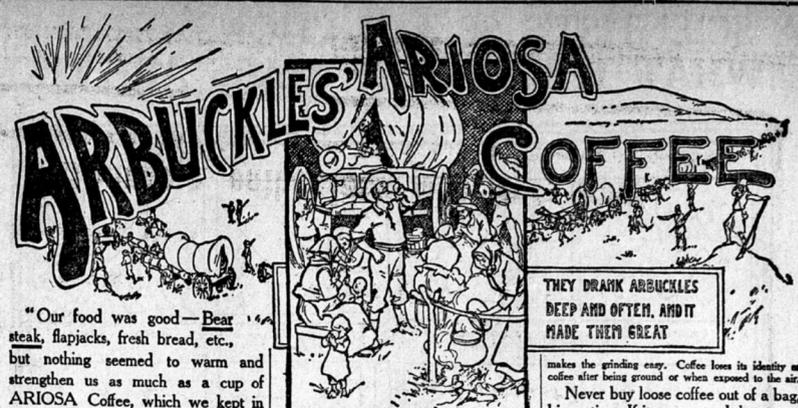

—Lady Mary.

City Sash and Door Co. Corner Fourth St. and Third Av. S. Opposite Court House.

Our food was good—Bear steak, flapjacks, fresh bread, etc., but nothing seemed to warm and strengthen us as much as a cup of ARIOSOSA Coffee, which we kept in the original package and ground as needed. From a gentleman now in Bethlehem. Arbuckle's ARIOSOSA was the first roasted packaged coffee, —packaged for the consumer's protection and the pores of each berry sealed after the roasting with fresh eggs and sugar to keep the goodness in and make the coffee settle clear and quickly.

This Great Copper Kettle gleams like burnished gold, and is a perpetual source of admiration to the other attendants, etc., used in brewing and fermenting.

Gund's Peerless Beer

Is scrupulously scoured every day, because absolute chemical cleanliness in every process is essential to the production of a perfect and wholesome malt beer. Furthermore eminent physicians declare that the properties of alcohol in Peerless (about 3%) is the right amount for gently stimulating the gastric fluids in the assimilation of solid food.

Peerless has been brewed from choice hops and malt by the Gund Natural Process (exclusive) for over 50 years. Won Gold Medal at St. Louis, 1904—Diploma and Medal at Paris, 1900. Bottled at the brewery only. Sold at all good hotels, business clubs, restaurants, dining cars, etc. Delivered in cases at private homes. Try a case! Telephone, write or call.
