LANSING SCORES CRITICS OF U. S. FOREIGN POLICY

for this government to hold firmly to those neutral rights which international law has clearly defined, and to insist vigorously on their observance by all belligerents. In not the slightest degree can the settled rules be modified unless all the parties interested consent to the modifications.

"It is true that the rights violated by the belligerents may differ in importance, and, therefore, require different treatment. Thus the violation of the neutral right of life is a much more serious offense against an individual and against his nation than the violation of the legal right of property. There is not, and cannot be, adequate recompense for the wrongful destruction of life, but property losses may be satisfied by the payment of indemnities. If one belligerent violates the right of life and another belligerent violates the right of property, can you doubt for a moment which one gives this government the greatest concern, or which one will call forth the more vigorous protest and the more earnest effort to prevent repetitions of the offense?"

SOME AMERICANS DO NOT RECOGNIZE DIFFERENCE

"A government which places life and property on an equality would be generally condemned, and justly condemned. Yet, I regret to say, there are some Americans who do not recognize this difference. How many take this view it is impossible to say; but the numbers are large, judging by some who sit in the halls of Congress. This mental attitude makes one wonder if the sensibilities of the American people have become so blunted by materialism that they think as much of the loss of their property as they do of the loss of the lives of their fellow-countrymen. Such an idea is repugnant to a liberty-loving American; it is utterly wanting in the nobler impulses of a great people; it is hostile to the spirit of true Americanism. Yet it exists, and is widespread, and must be reckoned with.

"This attitude of mind of a portion of our people increases the difficulties of diplomacy. It is almost impossible to present a strong and unbending front in a controversy unless a united and determined nation is behind you. Furthermore, the knowledge that our people are not a unit in supporting a vigorous policy encourages a foreign government to resist our protests, feeling sure that we must withdraw or modify them. I firmly believe that the American people will one of these days crush out this influence, and become, as they should be, a great united nation, jealous of their rights and eager to defend their honor, regardless of personal sacrifice.

"When you disapprove of some course of action taken by this government, be lenient in your judgment, for very often the action is the result of conditions which cannot be made public and which may never be made public.

WONDERS WHAT CRITICS WOULD DO IF IN POWER

"Let me add just a word. When foreign policies of the government are criticized by honest critics—I mean by honest critics those who are not influenced solely by political considerations or personal ambitions—I often wonder what the critics would do if they had the responsibility. Would they be so belligerent? Would they make demands when it was questionable they could compel compliance? Would they count the full cost of their action? I wonder whether they would be radical or conservative? Responsibility makes a world of difference in a man's point of view. When a few words may plunge this country into war, the man who has the power to utter those words will think a long time before he exercises that power. He will submit to a deal of criticism and endure abuse and ridicule rather than see the young men of America sent forth to die on the battle field. Only the supreme necessity of maintaining the honor of the United States or of defending its independence will induce him to speak the fateful words which may bring death to thousands of his fellow-countrymen, and change the destinies of the republic.

"Those who are prone to blame the government because it does not demand that freedom ought to consider very seriously what it would mean to the nation if their wishes were carried out. If they were responsible for the consequences, would they give the counsel which, as private citizens, they are so ready to give?"

TAZEWELL OBSERVES DAY

Veterans Attend Memorial Exercises as Guests of Chapter of United Daughters of the Confederacy.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] TAZEWELL, VA., June 3.—Confederate Memorial Day was observed appropriately here to-day. The veterans of the county were invited to town to be the guests of the local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. A feature of the ceremonies was an address by Judge S. S. Graham, who read a paper on local Confederate history, outlining many incidents of the Civil War happenings in this community, in which Tazewell people participated.

A paper by Major James P. Whitman was read by Miss Ellen Bowen. It gave a history of reconstruction days. The graves of the Confederate dead were decorated with flowers, the trip to the cemetery being made in autos furnished by the people of Tazewell and community. On account of the heavy downpour of rain early this morning many Confederate veterans were unable to reach town to attend the exercises.
