

COAL STRIKE TAKEN UP AT WHITE HOUSE

Harding and Daugherty Discuss Situation—Not Alarming, President's View.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Upon leaving the White House after a conference with President Harding today, Attorney-General Daugherty said he had gained an impression that "preliminary and local conferences" were now going on between local unions of coal miners and operators in the bituminous fields. He intimated that this impression had been gained from contact which he had had with different parties on his recent trip to Indianapolis. The visit there was occasioned by his desire to get in touch with legal aspects on the government's prosecutions aimed at miners' union officials and coal operators, charged with violating the antitrust laws. White House officials later disclosed the coal situation and intimated that the government might in the future have proposals to submit to the conflicting parties. President Harding and his administration at this moment, it was added, had no serious apprehensions about the situation. It was pointed out that the price of coal had not advanced, and that the temper of all parties had not been irritated. The President still held the opinion, it was declared, that the administration would only intervene in case the situation developed into an emergency threatening the welfare of the people.

Court Restrains W. Va. U. M. W. CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 14.—Federal Judge George W. McShuttick granted an injunction to the operators of the New River fields, restraining activities of the United Mine Workers in that coal region. It was announced by Ira A. Motterhead, clerk of the District Court. The injunction will affect 119 operations, it was said.

Commissioner Estill Will Deliver Address Tomorrow Afternoon in High School Auditorium.

He is territorial commander of the Salvation Army forces for the Eastern and Southern States, and is accompanied by Colonel A. Damon, brigadier H. D. Bale and a divisional staff. Rev. William Cabell Brown, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia, will deliver the invocation. Brigadier H. D. Bale will present Judge Charles F. Peterson, editor of the Evening Dispatch, who will introduce Commissioner Estill. "My Observation of the Salvation Army Work on Five Continents" will be Commissioner Estill's subject. Appreciation will be delivered by J. D. Hank, Jr., Assistant Attorney-General, and Colonel A. Damon will announce the benediction. Instrumental music will be furnished by the Chesapeake Divisional Brass Band, while vocal music will be rendered by Staff Captain and Mrs. McMullan.

URGE CITY TO ACQUIRE PROPERTY FOR PARK

Property Owners Would Have Triangular Lot Converted Into Municipal Breathing Spot.

Property owners of the West End will appear before the Planning Committee of the Council on Tuesday to urge the purchase by the city of a triangular lot bounded by Monument and Belmont Avenues and Cleveland and Franklin Streets. It is the idea of the delegation to have the property converted into a city park. The lot is so situated that its use for commercial or residential purposes, it is claimed, would detract from the beauty of Monument Avenue, which was originally designed as a show place for the city. As the West End grows, the need of a park will become more and more necessary, it is pointed out, and the petitioners assert that the city should take care of the opportunity to acquire the property before its value becomes too greatly enhanced.

TWO HEAVILY FINED ON LIQUOR CHARGES

WILSON AND TUMULTY WILL PATCH UP "BREAK," IS BELIEF

Former President's Rebuke of Man Long Intimately Associated With Him Creates Greatest Furor in Political Circles Since Lansing Dismissal.

By Robert J. Bender, United News Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, April 14.—"Have Woodrow Wilson and Joseph P. Tumulty definitely 'broken' after twelve years of intimate association and personal friendship?" "Can the breach be healed, and, if so, how?" "Did Wilson utter the words which Tumulty thought he was authorized to deliver to the Jefferson Day banquet of Democrats in New York City April 8?" "Did Tumulty actually deliver the message with the aim of aiding or abetting a lorum for James M. Cox at the dinner—and perhaps the publication of the message was brought to Wilson's attention and the publication in a New York newspaper of Wilson's letter of repudiation?" "Who, if any one, was responsible for urging Wilson to repudiate the message delivered by Tumulty?" "What transpired from the time of publication of the message was brought to Wilson's attention and the publication in a New York newspaper of Wilson's letter of repudiation?" "Has Tumulty seen Wilson since the New York episode?" "What do the principals feel about it today?" "What will be the political effects?" These and scores of other questions are passing the lips of politicians, and apparently all Washington, following the sensational revelation that Wilson had publicly rebuked Tumulty, his secretary as Governor of New Jersey, for eight years his secretary in the White House, and throughout the period of his administration the most steadfastly loyal friend Wilson ever had. Not since the abrupt dismissal by Wilson of Robert Lansing, his Secretary of State, has there been such a political furor caused as by the publication of a letter, signed by Wilson, declaring a message which Tumulty had taken to the Jefferson Day banquet of Democrats had not been authorized.

Nevertheless it was so construed by some Democratic leaders. That one of these leaders personally or indirectly called attention of Wilson to the construction placed upon the banquet mislive and urged the action he took, could not be confirmed in any quarter Friday. Senator Glass and Thomas Love, two of the most ardent McAdoo leaders, insisted they knew nothing of the whole affair, except what they had read in the newspapers. McAdoo leaders generally, however, believe the Jefferson Day banquet to be a "poorly staged" boom for "Cox," whereas, Cox's friends here declared it to be "an unfortunate mountain out of a molehill, developed at the expense of Tumulty." Others professed to see in it the realization of criticism, brought to the attention of the Wilson household, at certain chapters in Tumulty's biography of Wilson, a book extremely flattering to the former executive. As a corollary to this there is the possible resentment of Wilson toward any one affecting to "speak for him" when he himself wishes to say nothing. Tumulty fails to see Wilson. However, the subject was brought to Wilson's attention, Tumulty, intending to remain over a few days in New York, hurried back to Washington on the strength of a message received from the Wilson household. It may be assumed, under the circumstances, that he sought an audience with his former chief, but he has not seen him. The question, therefore, is whether the "breach" will prove to be a definite and final "break" between the two men. Tumulty, naturally, is hurt and deeply hurt. Wilson, absent upon standing aloof from all political activity, obviously was, and possibly still, is highly irritated either at Tumulty's action or the construction placed upon it in some political quarters.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

From the most authoritative sources available by the writer today the full story of the dramatic incident may be told, and with it most of the questions flying about Washington may be answered.

At the outset, it may be said that those who have intimately known and observed both principals in the affair believe that it will be patched up and former friendly relations continued. On Friday, April 8, Tumulty called at the Wilson home and had a long talk with his former chief. It may be assumed that it was the sort of friendly talk on all manner of subjects that he generally enjoys on such occasions of contact. Tumulty, at the request of Thomas Rush, chairman of the Jefferson Day banquet, delivered a message from Wilson to the banquet. At this point it might be noted that Wilson did not deny he had uttered the words attributed to him in the message. Tumulty carried to New York, but merely that he authorized no message for delivery. Further, Tumulty would seem to have experienced, both in politics and in the evening of the banquet, the fact that he has consistently refused to make statements or give interviews since he left office. The message was read at the banquet, and it was pointed out, not created a stir in some political quarters, where it was regarded as abetting a boom for Cox, the main speaker of the evening. Tumulty has stoutly denied the charge. Newspaper men will recall his insistence, during campaigns, that to start any boom too early was to wreck it.

TUMULTY THOUGHT HE WAS JUSTIFIED

So the question seems to simmer down to whether Tumulty was justified in assuming the words were authorized. Tumulty thought he was. In fact, he was so confident that he showed the message to some of his friends, who traveled with him to New York on the train the next day. But Wilson has declared there was no such authorization, and his attitude might seem to be supported by the fact that he has consistently refused to make statements or give interviews since he left office. The message was read at the banquet, and it was pointed out, not created a stir in some political quarters, where it was regarded as abetting a boom for Cox, the main speaker of the evening. Tumulty has stoutly denied the charge. Newspaper men will recall his insistence, during campaigns, that to start any boom too early was to wreck it.

MAN SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN CAR HITS POLE

William Kresay, of Hopewell, Believed to Be Person in Hospital.

HOPEWELL, VA., April 14.—In trying to pass another automobile this morning between Hopewell and City Point, the car of a man thought to be William Kresay, of Highland Park, Hopewell, collided with a telegraph pole, probably fatally wounding Kresay, and slightly injuring Richard Tuggle, a Hopewell wrestler, who was riding in the car with Kresay. According to bystanders, both cars were going toward City Point, when the car containing Kresay and Tuggle attempted to pass the car in front of the concrete and it skidded into the telegraph pole, the rear wheel being carried away by the concrete. The car turned over about three times after striking the pole, finally coming to a stop about twenty-five feet from the collision in an upright position, headed toward Hopewell. Kresay was pinned beneath the car, but Tuggle was pitched clear into some grass and was only slightly injured. The driver of the other car, who did not see the car being him, came back and helped pick Kresay up. He was then taken in a passing car to a drugstore, where he received treatment, and from there was taken to the Hopewell Hospital in an ambulance. Kresay has not yet regained consciousness, and it is believed by attending physicians that his skull may be fractured, as he had a wound in the back of his neck that may have been caused by contact with the asphalt.

Identification Not Positive

Tuggle said the man was a stranger to him and had asked him to ride with him, and no one who has seen him so far has been able to identify him. A letter found in his pocket by Dr. Lane Elder, however, was addressed to William Kresay, of Highland Park, Hopewell, although no such name is entered on the records of the Bristol Camp Realty Company, who recently purchased this section of Hopewell. Until the man regains consciousness or some of his friends or relatives appear, there seems to be little hopes of proper identification.
