Keith-O'Brien

Upon entering school life your boy lays the foundation for a future career. The unfolding of that career to a successful end depends upon the boy's studiousness and an innate regard for truth. In a measure this institution parallels with the advent of the boy into the schoolroom. The future of this store rests upon our aggressiveness and up-to-date methods, and in obtaining and holding the confidence of the public--possible only by the observance of truth--especially to be applied when speaking of values and lowered prices--from which, really, all bargains spring.

Cloaks, Suits and Furs

An elegant line of ladies' cloaks, suits and furs have just been opened for inspection. We are displaying all of the new and up-to-date designs, the assortments being of such breadth as to assure satisfaction to the most fastidious taste.

One of the jauntiest suits we are showing this season is made with a straight front coat, broadcloth yest, and the popular round length skirt.

As a leader attention is directed to a 22-inch coat suit made up in mannish suitings and Scotch mixtures. At $16.75 this is a decided bargain.

The Cloak Section is exhibiting a number of han dsome styles, the most popular of which is the Tourist coat made up in cravenette, covert and Scotch mixtures. The Fur Section is complete in every detail. The showing is splendid in scarfs in Sable, Fox, Isabella Fox, Blended Mink, Civit Cat and all the oth er furs in vogue.

Fall Ready-to-Wears

Our display of ready-to-wears elicits the admiration of ladies familiar with exclusive millinery. The other day a lady whose taste is faultless and who spends considerable money on dress, exclaimed: "How can you afford to sell these hats at such prices?" The question will apply with equal force to the less elaborate lines. We expect a fair margin of profit, but we do not propose to charge usual millinery prices. Larger stocks are carried in some stores in larger cities, but finer millinery is not. And from these higher grades the lines descend to popular priced hats-but all hats possess style. This we are particular about. A Keith-O'Brien hat must be fas hionable regardless of price.

The Things They Love

Women love laces and embroideries. These fil my accessories enter into their raiment in innumerable ways known only to femininity. The section for laces and embroideries possesses tremendous drawing power. In other stores there are similar departments, but ours seems to have forged ahead -for the ladies throng to that section in this store. There is scarcely a dull day. The lines carried are extensive and comprehensive, the selections being skilfully made by an exclusive buyer for the department, who makes at least two trips to New York annually. The best that can be bought is none too good for our trade. Coupled with the high character of the purchases are often special lots obtained advantageously below market prices. Very often, too, in cutting materials remnants accumulate. Through these mediums special sales occur.

Net top lace will predominate this season. The colors are cream, ecru, white and black, and there is a various range of widths as well as prices.

Irish crochet lace is being worn con-

Point de Gaze laces promise to be in much demand, chiefly for trimming

The leading effects in laces will be the raised, heavy patterns. Persian band and applique trimmings will be stylish for the finishing of shirt waist suits and dresses in the fancy and straight effects.

Venise lace will be stylish, as well as a new snowball lace. All over face for making lace waists Big special sale, 97 cents a yard. On exhibit in one of the windows. The colors are black, ecru and white.

We will inaugurate Monday an im-portant sale in a new lot of embroidery remnants, in lengths and widths. The remnants will average, a piece, from 30 cents to $3.00.

Children's school handkerchiefs in

All linen handkerchiefs will be sold at the special price of 10 cents each. Somehow it makes one feel good to be able to buy little house furnishings at prices littler than one is used to.

Sliks and dress goods have enjoyed a fine week of shopping. The new weaves are much admired. We anticipate a rousing fall and holiday business.

Inspection of the store affords visitors a pleasant hour. And it seems the invariable rule to speak of our prices being so reasonable

Our goods are new, trustworthy and attractive and are as low in price as is possible to sell them.

No larger or more choice stock of furs is to be found in the city. Leading styles are shown. Prices and qualities bear closest comparison. An exceptional fur business was done last fall. Every sale was satisfactory.

Our fall and winter stocks are reach-ing a degree of perfection in assort-ment and exclusiveness seldom attained in merchandising.

The reason we handle the McCall Pat-terns is because they are the best.
