First Book of Reed

CHAPTER I.

1. Now it came to pass in the days of the good King Theodore that there rose up a wise man of the East, out of the land of Esopus which is up against the heights of Hoboken, send mail to Hyde Park, surnamed Alton the Silent, which was of the tribe of Grover the

2. And behold Alton the Groverite, being led by August the Bonmot and Morgan the Plerpont, waxed exceeding strong in spirit and said unto himself, "Verily, I will sell my law books and my friends and all my goods and chattels, save only my steel stock, and resign my office and go forth and smite the King office and so forth and smite the King with my telegram of gold;

3. "And when the winds of November shall blow and the storms of ballots shall descend, behold it shall come to pass that I. Alton, shall be the ruler of all the land from Maine to Beersheba and from Alpha to Omaha."

4. And when they which came up from the South together with Davis the Gassaway and Henry the Perl and Simon the Bamberger and the ten lost tribes of Eryan assembled on the banks of the mighty Missouri which runneth down to the sea, behold they cried, "Alton, my bucko though absent and silent, thou are not forgotten.

5. "And inasmuch as thou hast been

5. "And masmuch as thou hast been faithful in small things such as thy Democracy, we will make thee ruler

Democracy, we will make thes ruler over many and thy name shall be called Grover the Second and thou shalt wear fine linen and live in a large White house for the space of four years and then some more, if theu art careful."

6. And it came to pass after the space of a time that all the people of the nation went forth to ballot with large Australian ballots in their hands and hany there were which, remembering Grover the First and August the Bonnot and the army of Coxyltes terrible with hanners, shouled as they went, with banners, shouted as they went Behold when the wicked rule the people go broke"

7. And when the sun went down on the eighth day of the eleventh month the land clide and gross darkness covered the face, of the earth and no man kneweth what the morrow might bring forth.

8. And when the ballots and the slain were counted, behold the morning stars rang together and all the Republican sons of God shouted for Teddy and many there were which were wiped off the map and Davis the Gassaway and Simon the Bamberger went crashing through the zodiac and Orlando the Suave went down like grass before the mower and Alton the Silent was stiller than death. And when the ballots and the slain than death.

9. And there was lamentation and profanity in Tammany hall and all around the tenderloin and loud walling and gnashing of teeth at Princeton extending as far north as the Hill of Albany and no fireworks believed forth aerial gladness at Esopus that night and the band played a song without

10. Now in the land of Provo, which is in the Western wilderness by the River Jordan, which floweth down into the Dead sea, there dwelt a certain warrior noted for the length of his in-warrior noted for the length of his influence, surnamed Reed, the tall sycamore of the Timpanogos.

11. And when Reed heard these things he was lifted up and chesty and he girded up his loins and Journeyed to the king, crying in a loud voice, "See what hath me and God wrought."

12. And the good King Theodore said unto the tall sycamore, "Behold it is even so that my party hath wrought my election by a large majority but as for thee and thine it were perhaps prudent to restrain thy wild-Western stream of Jordan joy until thou shall have discovered what the wise men of the Senate shall have wrought unto the Senate shall have wrought unto thee, my lad."

13. And the tall sycamore of the Timpanogos, being cast down, biked him from the presence of the King and un-girded his loine, saying, "Verily the King is disturbed."

14. And he played his lute far into the night, moaning in spirit and refusing to be comforted, singing the songs of Goshen and Pondtown likeunto Why Did I Turn Loose Into Politics, and Where Is My Wandering Willie the

15. And the cock wept thrice and Reed went out and crew bitterly. ZACHARIAH THE SCRIBE.
