

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SUNDAY MORNING, JANUARY 1, 1905.

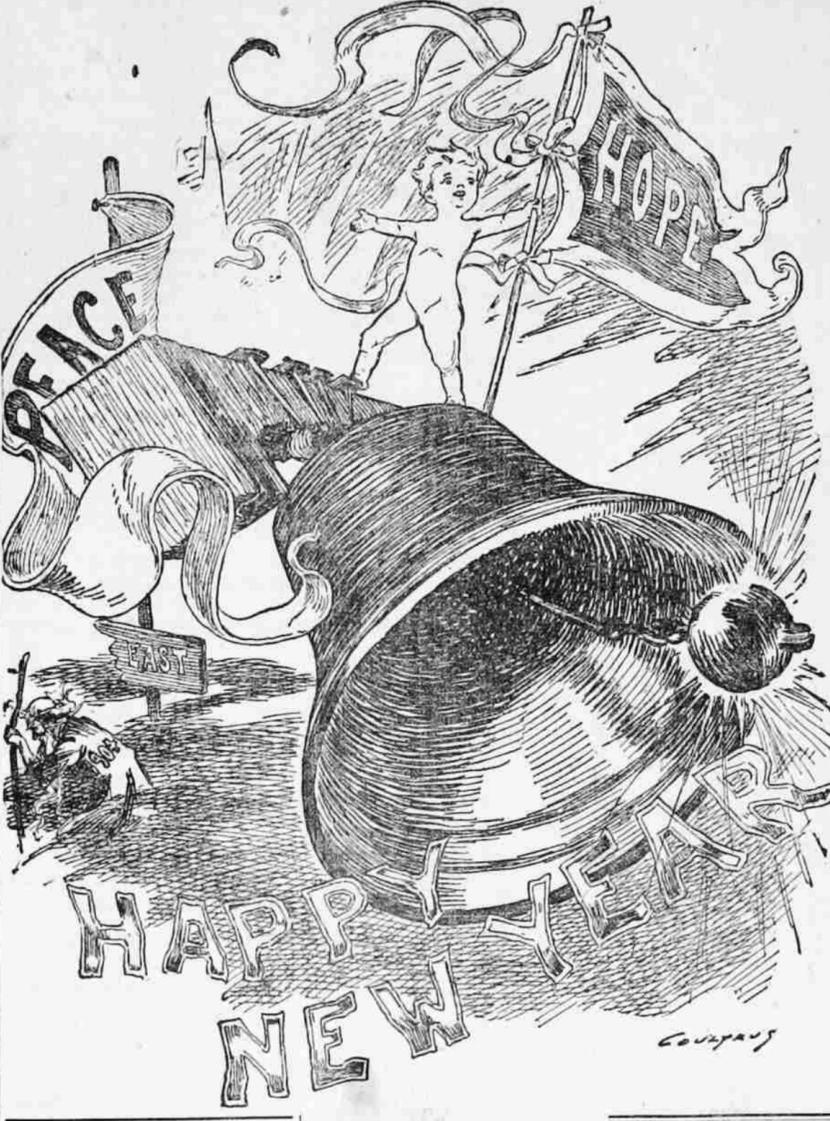

SOCIETY.

The year in society has been noted for many elaborate events, the growth of which flourished for a brief period and then died for lack of sustenance. The advent of the Twenty-ninth brought new life to Fort Douglas and the residents of the garrison have been most cordial hosts, the hope and the guests adding much to the gaiety of the present season. The opening of the University club with a mammoth reception was one of the events in club life and the Country club never passed a prosperous year. Large dinners and luncheons continued features at the club and the women's night at the club has steadily grown in popularity. The addition of wealth has had much to do with the increased number of elaborate social entertainments and from future plans this will be further noticed in the coming year. Country places are becoming the thing and in the city, too, a large has taken place in the mode of living and apartment houses, here and there, have become a thing of the past with people who entertain delightfully in their cosy quarters.

Leslie Carter, Blanche Bates, Kyrie Bellow, E. H. Sothern, Mrs. Langtry and Blauvelt.

The year opens with two very large events tomorrow. In the afternoon Mrs. John Marshall and Miss Mary Kirkpatrick will give a New Year reception in honor of their sisters, Mrs. Ackland-Hood and Mrs. Winston, who have been here for the holidays. Tomorrow night will take place the event of the season, a ball masque, to be followed by a collation to be given at Fort Douglas by Capt. and Mrs. Sturgis, Capt. and Mrs. Jamerson and Capt. and Mrs. Woodward. The matrons and maids have been busily engaged in arranging their fancy gowns for some days past, while the men have been spending some hours each day with the local customer in an effort to secure something effective for this, the first ball masque society has here for the holidays. Let to the bell as it joyously peals,
Chiming
And rhyming
The world's hopes and fears—
The laughter, the smiles,
The blooded tears,
Echoing far o'er the fair lands of Peace
The birth of new Hope, the Old Year's release;
Echoing far o'er the Seven Seas' surge,
Sounding to battle a funeral dirge.

CHRISTMAS, 1904!!!

(BY J. E. SCOTT.)

There's the breath of the rose in the summer,
And the world's hopes and fears—
The laughter, the smiles,
The blooded tears,
Echoing far o'er the fair lands of Peace
The birth of new Hope, the Old Year's release;
Echoing far o'er the Seven Seas' surge,
Sounding to battle a funeral dirge.

1904	664

There were thirty-three insane persons committed to the State Mental asylum in Provo. Three persons were examined and discharged and two cases continued.

TOOK REVENGE UPON A WOMAN

A Recent Comedy of the Rail.

Pretty Passenger Had Six Berths but Only Two Shoes.

Drummer Tells of an Adventure in Which Every One Claimed the Victory.

Probably no one will ever know just how it happened that a remarkably pretty woman engaged three whole sections of a sleeping car on a Rio Grande train recently. That she had engaged and paid for them there was not a doubt, as she had the tickets in her purse, but the efforts of those who were without berths to take the extra ones off her hands met with failure.

"She was pretty, was this woman," said a traveling man who sat up all night in the smoking car. "She was pretty and haughty and independent. At first we thought it possible that friends of hers were going to join her at some point along the road, but when 11 o'clock came and the woman with the tickets retired, we called an indignation meeting.

"There were five traveling men present and none of them had been able to secure a berth. They were tired, sleepy, and thoroughly disgusted. More than that, they were indignant to think that one woman should be the cause of all their trouble, and the thought of sitting in the smoking car all night while the train made its way through the mountains, did not have a tendency to cheer them up. Several cold bottles were ordered, and by 1 o'clock the spirits of the five men had risen 5 per cent. They had given up all hope of securing a berth, but, as the matter was talked over and first one thing and then another was suggested, it occurred to them that it was not impossible to have their revenge.

"Not a very gallant thing to do," said the man who sells shoes. "Getting revenge on a woman sounds pretty bad, but in all of my experience this is the first time I ever ran up against such a proposition as this. If one woman can find it in her heart to keep five men sitting up all night, and all because she is "master" of the situation, I guess a little harmless revenge will be about right, and you can count me in."

"And as the whiskey man said the same thing, and the cigar man and the hardware man said ditto, it came to pass that more drinks were ordered.

"One, two, three o'clock, and still no plan of action. It was a delicate proposition, this getting revenge upon a woman, and a pretty woman at that.

"Finally some one proposed that they go through the sleeping car and sing a song as they neared the six berths with but a single sleeper. The song was sung and every person in the car awoke and poked his head out to see what was wrong, just as they warbled, "Please Go Away and Let Me Sleep." In addition to singing the song, some one stole a shoe. It was a lady's shoe, and it was picked up in front of the berth occupied by the pretty woman. As if by magic, it might be added, the dainty little No. 3 disappeared. It was a case of "now you see it and now you don't."

The train rolled on, the traveling men returned to the smoking car, and the owner of the shoe again went to sleep, little dreaming that she was the victim of a terrible plot.

"At 7 o'clock there was trouble enough. The porter has been accused of stealing a lady's shoe, and the story soon traveled throughout the car that one had been taken from in front of No. 12. The lady who owned it had neglected to bring another pair along, it was also learned, and it was time to go to breakfast. What was to be done? Right here the traveling men got busy. They would search every person in the car but what they would find that shoe, they said. It was their duty as gentlemen. How they kept their faces straight is hard to understand, but they did, and the search went on. The shoe was not to be found. Then a mock trial was held. Three of the traveling men took the lady's part and two of their number said it served her right. A woman who could afford six berths should have more than one pair of shoes, was another argument put forth, but during all this time the lady in the case was shoeless, and when she silently made her way into the dining car and took her place at the first table she reached, there was something awfully like a giggle from the other end of the car where the knights of the grip sat.

"In due course of time the conductor, the porter and the brakeman had been informed that Miss Importance would sue the company unless the shoe was found or another pair provided before Salt Lake was reached. That she meant business there was not a doubt. And thus it happened that the proprietor of a small shoe store in one of the mountain towns received the following message:

"Send pair of lady's best No. 3, B last, shoes to train No. 5. Collect from conductor of sleeping car."

"The shoes were there on time, and what seemed most remarkable, they were a perfect fit. The missing shoe was found later in the day, safely hidden in an old bachelor's overcoat pocket, where it had been placed by one of the drummers. It might also be added that the man who found it had seen the shoe before, but no one could prove it, and the pretty woman and the five traveling men were all claiming a victory when Ogden was reached."

Miscellaneous Events.

The ball of the United Commercial Travelers was one of the bright events of the week.

Miss Jean Odell gave a dancing party last evening for a number of her young friends.

The regular meeting of the tourist section will be held Tuesday, January 3, at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Fenton will give a paper on "The Manners and Customs of the Japanese People."

On Friday next at 2 o'clock the regular meeting of the current events and current literature section of the Ladies' Literary club will be held at the clubhouse. Mrs. Kinney will give a talk on "Forestry," which will be followed by a general discussion of the subject from the members of the forestry committee of the General Federation. Mrs. S. W. Morrison will also read a paper on "Immigration." Members of the club, especially those interested in the preserving of trees in Utah, are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Yesterday Mrs. Winnifred Woodman-see entertained a dozen friends at a Kensington and last evening she gave a delightful watch party to a number of her friends.

The Strollers gave a New Year party Friday evening at Unity hall and about 25 were present. The club colors and holiday greens were used in decorating the hall.

Mrs. J. A. Maynes and Miss Edith Maynes will receive tomorrow from 2 to 5 at 175 G street.

There will be a directors' meeting of the Ladies' Literary club Thursday morning at 10:30.

The last meeting of the Monday Night Literary club was held at the home of Mrs. Bledsoe on North State street. J. C. Aller of the weather bureau gave a most instructive and entertaining paper on "Agriculture in the Great Basin." This paper received much attention and favorable comment.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug, but simply absorbs the gases and poisons always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after eating greasy or after eating onions or other odorous vegetables. It cleans the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and perfectly safe cathartic.

It breaks the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels, it relieves the mouth and throat from the odors of catarrh.

Charcoal is sold in many forms, but probably the best charcoal for medicinal purposes is in the form of the finest powdered Willow and other harmless antiseptic tablet form or rather in the form of pleasant tasting lozenges, the medicinal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will result in a much improved condition of general health, better complexion, purer blood, and the result of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the value of charcoal, says: "I advise Charcoal Lozenges to all persons suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion, purify the breath, and to believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they are sold at five cents a box at drug stores, and in some sense a better preparation, yet I believe I get a better charcoal in Studer's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the other charcoal tablets."
