Taft Asks Only for Right to Decide Questions of General Policy.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., July 11.—I am extremely willing to turn the campaign over to my managers, except on questions of general policy," said William H. Taft, the presidential candidate of the Republican party, today when questioned concerning the conduct of the coming campaign.

TROUBLED PERSIA STILL BARBARIC A RAILWAY JOURNEY WITH THE SHAH'S UNCLE

The easiest way to go to Persia is by train from Odessa to Baku. There is also a steamer of the Caucasus-Mercure line that goes to Anzali in Persia. Another way of Baku-Lenkoran and Astara to the province of Gililan. Thus writes G. Y. M. Simmons to the New York Evening Post.

Muzaffar-ed-din, the late Shah of Persia, never liked to go by steamer. It is said that an Arabian spy told him when young that he would perish at sea. He believed that it was on this account that he always preferred to make trips in carriages and on horseback along the beautiful shore of Caspasia. He visited Europe several times, being the second after the famous Nasru'd Din, whose statue stands in Teheran. The stories of the travels of these shahs in Europe and their visits to the various courts there are too well known to be here related.

Had occasion to travel with the late Governor of Isphahan, Zilli-za-Sultan, a paternal uncle of the present shah, Mohamed Ali Mirza. He traveled with his sons, Akbar and Bahram Mirza, to Vienna, Paris and Nizza, neither of them had ever seen a railway, except in a photograph in a magazine. They felt very curious and sometimes afraid, sitting in the safe Russian train that travels at no greater speed than twenty miles an hour. The younger son, who was about 15 years of age, asked if it was true that a man's head blew off when leaning out of a window.

Zilli-za-Sultan is a man of about 60 years of age, rather small, but broad-shouldered. He could not move his left eye. In a eulogy charge against the Kurds, he unfortunately got a saber cut that left a cross cicatrix in his face. The governor usually sat in the corner of his compartment with a compass on a little table before him, and a cane in his hand like a child, and crying, "Well, are we going to the North Pole?" He was very generous, and asked questions about Persia from the Russian travelers. As a result, they bowed and waited until it was their father's pleasure to speak to them. They always spoke of him as "son Altessse Imperiale." He invited me to travel with him during our ride from Baku to Moscow.

On the Caspian.

The trip on the Caspian Sea, within the mountains after the horrible Caucasasia, in clear weather, is delightful, especially at night by moonlight. The sea is quiet, ships anchor near the coast of Anzali. Russian engineers are at work on a pier near a station. Mr. Ab (dead) looks like a man who cannot be furnished on account of the financial difficulties of Persia. A steam barque takes passengers and luggage to the custom house during the inspection of trunks and passport you can hire a rowboat, and go to a small river, Saah-rud, with velvet-lined shallow water, running through the fields. About six miles back are the splendid Persian blue mountains, covered with forests.

An Uninventing Town.

MADE RIGHT.

exactions of distributing officers, from the "sahib" or lieutenant-colonel, down to the native officers, are a rule, incapable and ignorant military affairs, and the European drillmasters, whatever their local rank, have no actual command in the native army.

There was only one exception to this. I met the custom house officer, the son of an old Austrian colonel, who was in the army of the Shah for years. He had the alternative of killing himself or becoming a Moinammedan. He did the latter. He and his children remained thereafter in Teheran.

Public property is not thought much of in Persia. Rich merchants and even ministers have so little confidence in the honesty of the police and the courts, that they put their money into foreign banks or investments. EAST-BOUND DELEGATIONS ARE GREETED BY BRYAN AT FAIRVIEW

FAIRVIEW, Lincoln, July 11.—William J. Bryan opened the door to the east-bound delegations today with a brief speech touching on publicity of campaign contributions, the platform and the candidates.

The Nebraska delegation returning with triumphant banners after vociferations unseated in political or other history, having participated riotously in convention proceedings, did not deliver what might properly be called a cheer at all. Minnesota, however, having had less call for the exertion of their lungs at Denver, delivered the full three as a seal on Governor Johnson's promise to support the ticket in every way possible.

ations of the convention, were led to the hydrant at Mr. Bryan's request, and for a time the Fairview windmill was kept busy cooling parched throats. Thus relieved, the visitors delivered three fairly able cheers, and departed for their train, which left shortly afterward.

Greeted New Yorkers.

Returning New York convention workers had no time to make the four mile trip from Lincoln to Fairview, so Mr. Bryan, accompanied by Mrs. Bryan and his private secretary, Robert F. Rose, made the trip to town in a family carriage, Mr. Bryan holding the reins with perfect familiarity.

At the Rock Island depot there was a large crowd, including Charles F. Murphy, known as Tammany, Lewis Nixon, F. B. Harrison, Orlando Thayer, Robert E. Luce, Martin Littleton, D. H. Cohan and James Cassidy. They were put to put us on record, remarked Mr. Bryan, who photographer requested that Mr. Murphy and the presidential nominee be taken in the act of shaking hands.

The last delegation of the evening was one representing Ohio and Michigan, and nearly 200 strong. Seated in the center of a large circle on the lawn, Mr. Bryan gave them what one of them called "just a nice farmer talk."
