Always Courteous.

Mr. Forester was of an amiable disposition, always courteous and friendly to all mankind. The proprietor could always obtain an opinion from him as readily as could from any other expert in the coal business.

He was married to the daughter of O. Forester, of Scofield, Utah. His father now resides in Salt Lake City. He had a brother, superintendent of a colliery at Belknap, Colorado, and another brother connected with the coal business in Salt Lake.

Mr. Forester was a most thorough and practical geologist. In addition to his work as a geologist, he was also consulting geologist for the Denver & Rio Grande and the Utah Pacific railways, and also in a consulting capacity with the metalliferous mines. The Annie mine in the Beaver district was his first and largest job, and through his diligent direction and skill was developed into one of the great gold mines of this state. He was also in charge of the coal deposits within the state of Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, and New Mexico, and his services were in demand by the companies operating within those states.
