

For the Boys

BY ORVILLE G. VICTOR.

YOUNG America is as well provided for in the fall and winter styles as is his daddy or his older brother. Houses that make a specialty of catering to the sartorial cravings of the younger masculine members of the family will have all sorts of nice things to tempt the maternal pocketbook about the time that school reopens next month. I use the term "maternal" purposely, because it is usually Mamma who looks after the wardrobe of the little chap; even though, at the last analysis, it is Papa who takes out his Waterman and signs the checks.

Even as little girls of today are permitted in many cases to dress after the same fashions assumed by their mothers, so are many articles of Son's wardrobe fashioned after those of his father to a certain extent.

A comfortable, well-fitting and nice looking overcoat provided for boys from six to twelve years of age, for the coming season, is made of soft fabrics, with a shawl collar and a belt all the way around the waist. These come in plaids, browns and greys, the latter predominating, and here-and-there a dark blue.

I learn from one manufacturer of popular priced boys' wear that he has put out a great number of double-breasted overcoats, with convertible collars and all-around belts, for boys. The demand for belted coats of various models will be big this fall, and chinchillas seem to head the list for preference.

Many mackinaw coats will be offered for boys' wear this fall, ranging in sizes from ten years up. Most of these will be in color combinations, including red-and-black, green-and-black, shaded greys and browns. It looks as though these coats will, to a considerable extent, take the place of the sweater coats that were so popular during the last two seasons.

For the bigger boy, from 12 to 18 years of age, the "Guard" coat promises to be very popular during the coming fall and winter. This coat also has a belt, but only in the back, extending from each side seam to the center. The collar is a soft roll, or convertible collar—the latter is gaining fast in popularity. The coat has a pleat in the center of the back, extending to the bottom from a point an inch or two above the waist line. It is made from chinchillas and soft English cassimeres and wools. It is extremely attractive in appearance, has a semi-military effect, and usually pleases the wearer greatly. Another coat, somewhat like the Guard, is a little more elaborate as to trimming, and costs a little more than the first.

Fall school suits for boys of all ages will be found for the most part in grey and tan cassimeres. These are very "nifty," and are made up with double-breasted jackets and a plentitude of pockets. The more pockets to a boy's suit, the better he likes it. There is no doubt that these suits will meet with great favor from the average boy of 14 years or thereabouts.

The coat has three buttons and is finished with a six-inch vent in the rear and simulated cuffs on the sleeves. Some of the more high-priced garments carry real cuffs. The nicest of these are made from soft imported goods, in woolsens rather than worsteds.

The boys' Russian reefer seems to have dropped out of sight. Dealers assure me that it is a dead proposition, or will be by the time that snow arrives, except when made of a chinchilla. These will be shown in tans, greys and navy blue.

Boys' blouses and Russian suits, which have been so much in evidence throughout the summer, will likewise be out of favor when the frost arrives. Their places will be taken to a great extent by a garment known among the trade as the Norfolk Junior, made almost precisely like their fathers' Norfolk, with the exception of the size and a slight difference in the conformation.

For raincoats the boys will be provided with a garment very like the English "slip-on," which may be purchased at all sorts of prices, according to the make-up and material.

When it comes to headgear for the little chaps, there is considerable variety from which to make selection. For youngsters from three to twelve years of age the "rah-rah" hat will be very popular this fall. The "rah-rah" is made of soft felt, with a brightly colored band contrasting with the color of the hat. It sits on the head like an inverted bowl and is far from expensive.

Another hat which promises to meet the general approval of well-dressed boys is known as the Tyrolean. This is something like the "rah-rah," except that the brim is turned up on both sides, whereas the "rah-rah" has practically no brim.

Schoolboys, as a rule, will wear caps this fall, but of lesser dimensions than those of last season. The brims will not be so obtrusive, nor will the caps come so far down over the ears. These come in the same materials as men's motoring and golfing caps, in plaids and stripes. For winter wear they carry earflaps of the same material.

Another winter cap, designed for both boys and girls, is known to the trade as the snuggle cap. This is soft, made from Angora yarn, elastic and close-fitting, as the name applies. These are quite inexpensive, and will be found in white, cardinal, navy blue, greys and browns.

As to neckwear, the bigger boys can make selection from the same variety offered their fathers and grownup brothers, so far as four-in-hands and bat-wings are concerned. Of course, these are made a bit shorter and narrower for the lad than for the man.

Boys carry their watches in the recognized style, too; that is, in the outside breast pocket attached to a chain hanging from the lapel button-hole.

Black stockings prevail for those who wear knickerbockers, but when the boy becomes tall enough to "don" trousers, he will be provided with the same kind of hosiery as his elder brother—nice tans, blacks, and other solid colors in lisle, silk, silk-and-lisle and other less expensive makes.

To the Men and Young Men of Salt Lake City of Particular Tastes and Habits in Dress

For the fall and winter we are pleased to offer for your inspection the most beautiful and elegant display of suits and overcoats and nice things to wear from crown to sole ever before shown in our city.

- IN SUITS AND OVERCOATS—The height of fashion from the leading clothing houses of the world—Hart Schaffner & Marx, Blandegge-Kincaid, Rogers-Peet, Sampeck, L. System—clothes that cannot be beat in fabrics, styles, designs or tailoring; the kind that inspires confidence.
- IN HATS—Those most excellent "Knox" designs which set the styles in hatdom—the nobbiest shapes in stiff hats, velours, scratchups, brush finish.
- IN LADIES' KNOX HATS—Let us mention these, too, the elite in ladies' headdress, felts and velours, beautiful trims.
- IN SHIRTS—Manhattan shirts in their distinct designs and fabrics as usual take the lead.
- IN NECKWEAR—The "Kaiser" with all its surpassing qualities. Knitted ties are to be the most popular, with striking combinations of colors.
- IN SHOES—The "Hanan." The newest last for street wear is the English bal navy last; a dressy shoe, too. Then the Financier last with wide, high toes. Patent button shoes are proper for evening dress.
- IN HOSE—The "Phoenix," that guaranteed silk hose, which has grown so fast in favor as to take the lead. And the "Wunderhose," the guaranteed lisle and silk lisle—easy, comfortable, stylish colors, and will surely last.
- IN UNDERWEAR—All that any man can ask for—"Sterling," in silk mixtures, silk and wool, natural wool, etc.; "Wright Health Underwear," fleece lined, mercerized wool; "Kneipp's Linen Mesh;" "Globe"; two-piece suits or union suits, with the long-desired "closed crotch."
- IN FANCY VESTS—A dandy assortment, striking contrasts or quiet designs.
- IN DRESS SUITS, TUXEDOS, ETC.—The best to be found.

You will remember that it is our aim to select for you the very best in every respect of articles of dress that are made—the latest in styles, designs and fabrics, the best materials, the best of workmanship, the most possible for your money always. We recommend our selections to you over our reputation and guarantee.
