SALT LAKE THEATRE—"Bought and Paid For." Tonight and Saturday night, with matinee Saturday.

ORPHEUM—Vaudeville performances every afternoon and evening. Headliner this week, the Offedo's Manon Grand Opera company.

COLONIAL—"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Tonight and tomorrow night, with matinee Saturday.

EMPIRE—Two performances every night, with matinee every afternoon.

SELDOM have Salt Lake theatergoers seen two such powerful plays as "The Woman" and "Bought and Paid For" in one week. Those who witnessed both plays at the Salt Lake theater found it difficult to award the palm of superior merit. Both are enthralling studies of current life; both are realistic, convincing and intense. "The Woman" is more realistic in scenic detail and in stage business. "Bought and Paid For" is more realistic in its portrayal of character. It is less melodramatic and less theatrical. Its fun, revolving mostly about the character of Jimmie, is more appealingly human. There is less din in the climaxes, but quite as much power and intensity.

Both are problem plays. "The Woman" analyzes the national problem of graft, while "Bought and Paid For" deals with the more intimate and, therefore, more gripping problem of domestic discord.

These two plays are the highest product of contemporary playwrighting. A generation ago either of them would have been considered a phenomenon. Today American dramatists are turning out half a dozen such plays in a season. All of them are admirably accurate pictures of American life of today.

Robert Stafford, captain of industry, who has striven to great riches by his own effort, decides to make Virginia Blaine, a telephone girl, his wife. She accepts him after battling with her ideas and carries him while admitting that she does not love him. After the marriage she learns to love him with all her soul.

At first she is happy in the thought that she has given an excellent home to her sister Fanny and to Fanny's husband and their baby. Fanny's husband is Jimmie, the shipping clerk of wonderful ideas. Robert Stafford gives him a position at $100 a week and one night when intoxicated makes it $100 a week with a laugh. "Jimmie, when you are really worth $20 a week I'll make it $200."

If the foregoing were the only elements of the plot the play might be classed with such mild and pleasing productions as "The House of Mirth" and "The Good Wife," but the author has added another element that supplies the motif and the problem—drunk. It is an old theme, and has furnished the stage with many melodramatic scenes that permitted the orchestra to play tremolo. But there is nothing of the "Demon Rum" sentiment of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," yet the lesson is taught with a power that surpasses the loftiest reaches of melodrama.

When intoxicated Robert Stafford is a beast. One of the most fascinating and at the same time repelling scenes of the play is in the second act, where the millionaire returns home intoxicated and displays the worst side of his nature to his wife and to his brother-in-law and sister-in-law. His wife has seen him in this state many times and she knows that the parting of the ways has come. The finale of the scene is quite as rugged as American standards will permit. It is employed to show to what depths a noble-minded man can sink under the influence of strong drink. On the following day Stafford is duly repentant and when chided by his wife makes sufficient amends as far as mere words will go, but the time has passed when the wife can accept the repentant spirit as compensation for dishonorable treatment.

"I have bought you and paid for you, and all the property that I buy and pay for is mine to do with as I will," he had said to her in his drunken fury. "I will have the right to do with you as I please." She feels the sting of these words in the depth of her soul, knowing that they have a basis of truth. If she gives Stafford his choice, he must promise never to drink again or she will leave him. Proud, stubborn, accustomed to rule, with a will that has never been broken, he never even hesitates to dictate, he accepts the alternative of separation. He tells her that she will come back to him; that she can't stand the loss of luxury and that she will ultimately send for him. She swears that she will never send for him and he vows he will never leave her. Jimmie and Fanny in a cheap flat. Jimmie has lost his job of $100 a week and all that is left is Virginia's $2 a week. Then Jimmie has the one brilliant idea of his life. He calls up Stafford by phone and tells him that Virginia has seen him in his drunken state, but Jimmie vows for his job and the luxuries of high life. How the brilliant idea works out forms the denouement of the play.

The leading role is conspicuously that of Robert Stafford. It is enacted by Charles Millward, who is possessed of a commanding and graceful stage presence. His style is somewhat after the manner of Faversham, and this is high praise. It would be difficult to imagine a finer interpretation of the part.

Virginia Blaine is played by Miss Dolly Hume. Fanny Blaine by Miss Dorothy Davies, and James Gilles, "Jimmie," by George Wright. All of them play very natural characters in a very natural way, holding the mirror up to nature at just the right angle, so that there is no distortion in manner or characterization.

At least a line should be devoted to the skillful work of the Crawford as Oku, the Japanese servant.

The management of the Orpheum expects to be in a position tonight to put on the missing act. "Andrew's Wonder Kettle," which has not been on this week's bill, owing to a delayed shipment from Buffalo, N. Y. According to telegrams received yesterday the missing effects will arrive by express this afternoon when patrons at the Orpheum will be given an opportunity to witness the mysterious act which has been creating so much comment wherever it has been shown. This fact coupled with another packed house.

Variety and a good show in the slogan for the Orpheum's new bill this week, as nearly every line of vaudeville entertainment is represented. The wonderful performance of Hunk Lloyd, who has twice encircled the globe, is already the talk of Salt Lake, who have witnessed the performance of this wonderful wire artist. ## CABLELESS ELEVATOR GIVEN A SEVERE TEST

Invention of Salt Lake Man Shown to Be What Is Claimed for It.

An elevator lifting 1800 pounds dead weight, suddenly cut loose from all counterweight and other sustaining cables, and yet continuing its flight upward through the elevator shaft, was the unusual sight witnessed at the Newson machine shops yesterday afternoon by a party of Salt Lake and Ogden engineers and machinists.

It was during a test of a specially designed three-phase alternating current motor, just mounted on the machine, that the exceptional demonstration was had. The elevator is the invention of Charles Newson, of this city, and is intended to operate without cables, except those required to sustain the counterbalance weights. In making his demonstration yesterday afternoon, however, Mr. Newson cut away even the counterweights, and the novel sight of 1800 pounds going up a shaft at the rate of ninety feet a minute, with apparently nothing to lift it, surprised the investigating committee of engineers and machinists present.

The device exhibited was a regular passenger elevator, minus the lifting and lowering cables. Progress of the car up and down the shaft was accomplished by means of worms revolved by an electric motor and interlocked in racks extending the entire length of the shaft. It was claimed by the inventor that adoption of his device would forever settle the matter of elevator accidents.

In fact, in yesterday's demonstration, without even counterweights, the lift maintained the same speed up as it did down the shaft and was safely suspended at any point when the power was turned off.—(Advertisement.)

AT THE LIBERTY

Lottie Briscoe and Arthur Johnson, two of the most popular and successful players of the Liberty company, are taking advantage of the excellent advantage in a delightful comedy-drama entitled "The Country School Teacher" at the Liberty theater. The story is natural and true to life, dealing with the difficulties encountered by a young school teacher in subduing the overgrown country boys and in maintaining a strict discipline. He handles the boys all right by means of physical strength, but is at a loss to know how to deal with one of his girl pupils, a wild, self-willed "tomboy," who laughs at his attempts to correct her. The manner in which the various situations are worked out makes the picture one of the best of its kind seen at the Liberty for some time. It will be shown today and tomorrow only.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

will find much to satisfy them in the complete performance of the old and prominent actor, Harry Brooks, who is appearing in a strong, elaborate production, "The Old Mustel Man." Mr. Brooks is supported by a capable company.

There are six emphatic song hits in the season's popular musical offering, "A Modern Eve," which Molt H. Singer and Martin Beck will present at the Salt Lake theater next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. "Goodbye, Goodbye," the alluring waltz song, "Hello, Sweetheart," and "Every Day Is Christmas When You're Married," follow closely in its wake in the popular fancy.

The announcement that for the coming week at the Colonial will offer "Breasted's Millions" will come as welcome news to hundreds of Salt Lake, who have never seen the delightful comedy when formerly presented locally. It has never been played in stock or at popular prices in town and Manager Ketchum has arranged to present the play with attention to the staging of the vaudeville scene in the third act. "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" closes at the Colonial Saturday night.

Among the many Ben pictures that the public has recently been privileged to see, none has more thrilling situations than are contained in "The Ship of Lions," which will be shown at the Rex theater today and tomorrow. The story is a most elaborate one of a burning ship, the crew in jeopardy, the ship sinking, the crew in jeopardy, the ship sinking, the crew in jeopardy.

by President Bush.

YORK, Nov. 14.—Official announcement was made this afternoon that the Missouri Pacific Railway company had agreed to acquire control of the Missouri Pacific Great Northern railroad, a move made by Senator Stephen D. Dill, of Missouri, and approved by the Missouri Pacific board of directors, and under the terms of the agreement, the Missouri Pacific board of directors is to be merged with the Great Northern board of directors in a new company, the Missouri Pacific Great Northern, which is to be organized on International Northern common and preferred stock of the Jay Gould estate.

The Missouri Pacific board has appointed a special committee consisting of Messrs. E. P. Adams and Ed. Brown, to make an investigation into the financial and physical condition of the Missouri Pacific Great Northern and Great Northern.

Railroad Notes.

Mr. Miller, who was formerly "conductor" of the Chesapeake & Ohio, and who passed through Salt Lake on his way to Los Angeles, will be commercial agent for the Union Pacific, with headquarters in Chicago. Mr. Miller has only a few months' experience in the position, but is well known in the city. He is many years of age, and is interested in the rapid promotion.
