Miss Barnes made her debut several years ago at the home of her step-father, Dr. Francis Gunnell, U. S. N., and at once became popular in resident and army circles. Through her mother, who was a Miss Chew, she is related to the oldest and most prominent families of the District; while her paternal grandfather was the late Surg. Gen. Barnes. She has been a frequent visitor to West Point.

It is announced from London that the marriage of Miss May Cavendish Bentinck and Mr. John Ford, formerly of the British Embassy in this city, and now first secretary of the British Legation, Copenhagen, is to take place next Saturday, November 3, in the Royal Chapel, King Edward, who has frequently been entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Cavendish-Bentinck, at Richmond Terrace and at Highcliffe Castle, Christchurch, having given permission for the wedding to be celebrated there. The King has furthermore promised to attend the marriage, and he and Queen Alexandra have sent the bride beautiful presents.

Mr. Ford is a son of the late Sir Francis Ford, who, at the time of his death, several years ago, was British minister at Rome.

The Washington friends of Mr. and Mrs. George Nox McCain, of Philadelphia, have received invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Edith Overholt, and Frederick Blair Jackson on Wednesday evening, November 7, at 7 o'clock. COMMITTEE NOT ORGANIZED.

Eugenics Society May Not Report to Stock Breeders.

Dr. Willet M. Hays, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, is authority for the statement that the committee from the association on eugenics, which it is expected will appear before the American Breeders' Association at Columbus next January, to tell something of the work which has been done by this association in its study of the laws of heredity, has not yet been formally organized, and that it does not expect to make a formal report at the Columbus meeting.

"The members of the so-called 'committee on eugenics' have been selected," said Dr. Hays last night, "but no meeting has been held and no organization effected. No chairman has been chosen, and in short, nothing has been done further than to propose that we give to the Breeders' Association some of the information our society has gained through years of quiet study.

"This is not a matter of sensationalism, and we hope that the newspapers will not treat it as such. It is not at all likely that our committee will make a report at the Columbus meeting."

It is hard to say just when the committee will get together and organize, its members are widely scattered just now, and I cannot predict when they are likely to meet."

The committee to which Dr. Hays refers will in all probability be composed of himself, Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, and the Rev. J. E. Gilbert, of this city; Maj. Charles Woodruff, M. D., of the United States army; President David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford University; Dr. Charles E. Henderson, of the University of Chicago, and Prof. C. W. Ward, of Peekskill, N. Y.

The Eugenic Association, as its name implies, is a society of scientists who have for some time quietly pursued the study of the improvement of human race culture.

ARMY MEN LEARN TO COOK

Three Schools in Operation Interest Officers as Well as Privates.

Gen. Sharpe Says Result is Already Apparent in Better Cooked Food and Less Waste—The Purpose.

Commissary General Sharpe and his assistants in the Subsistence Department are greatly pleased with the results of the experiment they have been making for over a year in conducting a school for bakers and cooks of the army.

The main school at Fort Riley and its branches at the Presidio and the Washington Barracks have proved to be of immense benefit in the work of feeding Uncle Sam's troops, and have grown steadily in favor, not only with the men assigned to that work, but also with the officers themselves.

When the project was first put under way, it was greeted with rather contemptuous tolerance, if not absolute derision. In the few months the work has been carried on, however, its utility has become so evident that now it is regarded as a necessity, and the officers are anxious to take the course along with the cooks and bakers.

The officers in the Commissary Department have been regularly detailed to take the course of instruction, and at the same time the officers at the posts having seen the advantages to be derived from a scientific knowledge of the work of preparing the food for the soldiers have become eager to take the lessons along with the others.

The Commissary Department has been greatly hampered in the work through lack of special funds for maintaining the schools. It has been necessary to confine the instruction to the preparation of the regular rations of the three posts where the schools are established and to do this without wasting the supplies. For this reason the lessons prepared while the daily meals are being prepared, and care has to be taken that none of the food is spoiled. In spite of this handicap, however, a great improvement has been made in the cooking, and this progress has become all the more marked as the graduate cooks are sent out to other posts.

One of the chief advantages resulting from the special training is that the men are taught how to make the most of the supplies issued to them. By careful management a certain per cent can be saved and exchanged for various delicacies to make the meals more attractive and training all the way through practical, not theoretical. That is, instead of showing the cooks merely how to make the dishes, they are shown just how much is needed in preparing the attractive five men, the present complement of a company. The methods by which the materials can be utilized in making different dishes are also demonstrated at the same time.

The practical effectiveness of the schools was shown to Gen. Sharpe's greatest satisfaction last summer, when during the encampment at Mount Gettina the bakers from the Washington Barracks provided the entire army with bread. Trained cooks were also detailed among the militia regiments and instructions given to the cooks of those organizations.

"One of the most pleasing results of the experiment," said Gen. Sharpe, "is the interest that has been aroused among the officers in the work. At the three posts where we have schools the officers stationed there from time to time have all taken the course. There was a good deal of joking when we first started, but the officers soon came to realize how much it would be to their advantage to know just how the food should be prepared and when the cooking was being done properly. They are in a better position to look after the needs of their men, and at the same time, it has a good effect upon the rank and file when they see their officers looking after their interests in the proper manner. We hope in time to be able to establish more schools, but in the meantime we are accomplishing even more than we hoped for with the three we have in operation now. It isn't hard to see where the benefits arise from having the cooks and bakers properly trained, for every one knows how important a outfit goes into the making of good soldiers. The food is better cooked, the meals show a greater variety, and there is less waste."

EULOGIZE MRS. DAVIS

Tributes Paid Widow of Confederate President.

HALL FILLED TO THE DOORS

Many Noted Speakers Contribute Kind Words to Woman Who is Termed a True Example of an American Wife and Mother—The Services Were Impressive.

High tribute was paid to the memory of the late Mrs. Jefferson Davis at the memorial services held in Confederate Veterans' Hall, 1419 H street northwest, at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The large hall was packed with veterans, daughters, and friends of Mrs. Davis and the order to such an extent that standing room was not available, and there was an overflow of fully 100 persons crowded in the corridor at the open doorway. It was unquestionably the largest and most successful meeting ever held in the hall.

Three speakers joined in eulogizing Mrs. Davis. Resolution of condolence was unanimously passed, and a number of singers heightened the occasion with beautiful renditions of Mrs. Davis' favorite hymns.

The exercises were under the auspices of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, District of Columbia division, and Mrs. John M. Hickey presided in the absence of Mrs. Thompson. In opening the ceremony Mrs. Hickey told briefly the purpose of the calling of the meeting.

"As each succeeding year concludes its labors, and we bring in the sheaves of the order of our loving work for the sacred cause so dear to us, too often we have to record the end of service of some beloved co-worker; and so it is to-day. Mrs. Jefferson Davis, the wife of the sole President of the Confederate States, has entered into her eternal rest, and we are here to commemorate this event."

Rev. Mr. Locke pronounced the invocation, and "Abide With Me" was beautifully rendered by a mixed quartet, composed of Mrs. Blanche M. Rodgers, William D. McFarland, Charles E. Goodchild, and Mrs. Arnold Gumprecht.

Mrs. Edwin W. Kerr, of North Carolina, who announced the program, then called Hon. John Goode, late a judge in Virginia, but at present resident of this city.

Judge Goode Talks.

Mr. Goode paid high tribute to Mrs. Davis for her high character and the devotion to her husband, and the esteem in which she is held by every one down to the humblest citizen of the Confederacy.

He said that his knowledge of Mrs. Davis was based on a personal acquaintance with her when she occupied the president's mansion in Richmond, and he related several stories of her devotion at that time to her husband and the cause which he led.

A solo, "Face to Face," was then given by Mrs. Rodgers, who was followed by Hon. John V. Wright, of Tennessee, in an address.

Mr. Wright spoke as a member of the Confederate Congress and from personal acquaintance with Mrs. Davis. He spoke of her in glowing terms as the key to her husband's career, saying that she was his inspiration and helped to make his name immortal by her loving ministrations and intellectual companionship. He told of Mrs. Davis' exemplary life, and said she was a model of the true Southern woman, and that throughout her life she represented the high character of American womanhood.

"Thou Divine Redeemer" was given by Mrs. Gumprecht in a voice of marvelous beauty and intensity.

A solo, "Face to Face," was then given by J. T. Callaghan, president of Camp 111, U. V. C., and was introduced, and made an excellent address. He told of Mrs. Davis' distinguished ancestry and of her forebears who won fame in the Revolution and later in the war of 1812. He spoke of the great love borne to her by her innumerable friends and admirers. Her unflinching devotion in the dark days, he said, was typical of her great devotion to her husband, that she was his confident throughout his memorable life, and that his death ended one of the most remarkable chapters of love and undying devotion ever recorded in material history. He remarked that Mrs. General Stonewall Jackson was the only connecting link left "to bind us to those, our memorable days," and closed with a quotation from the chapter of the "Life and Fall of the Confederacy," by Jefferson, dedicated to the "Women of the Confederacy."

Mrs. McDuffie then gave a fine rendition of "I Am a Pilgrim."

Resolution Adopted.

Mrs. Lillian Pike Roome presented the resolution prepared by her committee, and it was unanimously adopted. It is, in part, as follows:

"Endowed with many talents, capable and energetic; possessed of all the attributes of true womanhood; an affectionate daughter, a devoted wife, a tender mother, and a warm-hearted friend; her many gifts of mind and character challenged the admiration and won the respect of all worthy hearts.

"In all the vicissitudes of an eventful life, she bore herself with exemplary dignity, and endured with Christian resignation the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, the bitterness of adversity, the loss of loved ones, the intimacies of invulnerability, and of old age. While to her death may have come as a true deliverer, to the survivors he has brought a great sense of loss and bereavement."

The services closed with benediction by Rev. Mr. Thompson.

The hall was beautifully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers, contributions of Messrs. Blackstone and Schaefer.

Great credit is due the officers of the Washington division who were in charge and brought their work to so successful a conclusion. Mrs. Hickey, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Bocoek, Mrs. Callaghan, Mrs. Fred. Johnson, Mrs. Covington, and all the other committee chairmen received hearty congratulations.

DODGER FOILED AGAIN

From the Boston Post.

"Oh, you're awake, are you?" remarked the man behind the mask as Mr. Dodge sat up in bed and blinked sleepily into the bull's-eye.

"He!—!" Mr. Dodge was just beginning to raise his voice.

"Don't do that," said the other quietly, at the same time thrusting the muzzle of a revolver into Mr. Dodge's mouth. "Don't call for help this time of night—you have no right to overwork your help. Now please calm yourself and tell me truthfully what valuables there are in the house."

Mr. Dodge enumerated in a faltering voice. He told of family plate and family diamonds, of paintings, sculptures, tapestries, and costly rugs, of rare volumes in the library and securities in the safe, of coal in the cellar and chests full of wearing apparel in the attic. The other made notes on a piece of paper and then asked:

"What money have you in the bank?"

Mr. Dodge looked surprised, but told him the amount. Mr. Dodge, upon being questioned, also told of all the real estate he owned, stocks, etc. After he had finished the other thanked him courteously and turned to go.

"I suppose you are going to loot the place before you leave," ventured Mr. Dodge.

"No," replied the man behind the mask in evident surprise. "No, I have all the information I can get."

"Then you are not a burglar?"

"No."

"Would you mind telling me what you are?"

"I am a tax assessor."

The next day Dodge sailed for Europe.

DAILY FASHION HINT.

Some Dainty Accessories.

There is evident a very strong liking for chiffon velveteen on the part of the younger section of society, especially those who have to accomplish their sartorial aims and ambitions upon a stated dress allowance. To such a pitch of perfection have the manufacturers brought this same once-deprecated velveteen that it often takes more than a passing glance to distinguish it from its much more expensive cousin, the chiffon silk velvet. All the bloom and softness of coloring are there, and when contrasted with a fine broadcloth, a soft silk, or a flimsy lace, all of the pretty effect of the more expensive fabric is gained, and without undue cost either.

One of the new blues, a bleu d'acier, or steel blue, is shown contrasted with a blue d'argent, or silver blue estin merveilleux. The little blouse of an all-over Valenciennes is strapped with tiny folds of the velveteen used upon slightly wider ones of the satin to delightful effect. The short and loose Eton shows a puff of satin showing out from a scant scape effect of the velveteen; while the skirt is one of those extremely full circular affairs that demand deep and godly pleats at the waist line, continued down to the hem, to adjust the fullness.

The dainty charm of the costume is well set off in the stole and muff of natural marabout, in which tufts of the black tipped variety are inserted at intervals, while the sapphire blue felt chapeau, faced underneath with a pale blue, is adorned with three long ostrich plumes at the side that fall well on the hair in the back.

Among the many testimonials received was a set of resolutions, bound in gold and leather, which was presented by W. B. Hackenberg, of Philadelphia, on behalf of the American Hebrew congregations. A similar set of resolutions was presented by the board of delegates of Civil and Religious Liberty, of which Mr. Wolf is chairman.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation presented Mr. Wolf a solid silver punch bowl, the presentation address being made by Mr. Isaac L. Blout. In response Mr. Wolf said that, though during his long life of seventy years his name had become known perhaps in other parts of the country, it was with deep appreciation he received the testimonials of those with whom he had been associated daily during a greater part of that time, who knew every act of his every day life.

The Grand Lodge of the I. O. O. F. B. gave a solid silver pitcher and tray, which was presented by a committee from Atlanta, Ga.; Charleston, S. C.; Mobile, Ala.; Wilmington, N. C., and Savannah, Ga.

Delegation from Boston.

Delegates from Boston, Mass., of which Isaac Rosnosky was chairman, presented a silver cup and a resolution from 1,000 Jewish women to Mr. Wolf, whom they laud as the "Greatest Jew of all time." A set of resolutions was also presented by Dr. Solun, of Atlanta, Ga., an official of the Atlanta Hebrew Orphan's Home, a gift from the orphan children, who, at the same time, informed Mr. Wolf that the Alumni Association of the home, in honor of the day, had appropriated $1,000, the interest of which was to be expended annually in a gift to him.

Resolutions and gifts were also presented by delegations from New York, Richmond, Baltimore, and other cities of Orphan's Hebrew Home, of Atlanta, Ga.; the order of B'nai B'rith, and the Shamrock Club, Oldest Inhabitants' Association, and Masonic Veterans' Association of Washington.

Approximately 2,000 telegrams and envelopes were received by Mr. Wolf during the day from every part of this country and Europe.

A banquet will be given at the Arlington Hotel to-night in honor of Mr. Wolf. Invitations have been extended by A. D. Prince to the members of the Cabinet, the Commissioners of the District, and many other men prominent in the affairs of the nation. President Roosevelt was invited to be one of the guests of honor, but owing to a press of public business was compelled to decline.

Born in Bavaria.

Simon Wolf was born in Rheimish, Bavaria, October 28, 1836. He came to America when twelve years of age, and settled for a short time in Cleveland, Ohio. Later he removed to Urichville, Ohio, and secured employment in the store of his uncle, Abraham and Elias Wolf. His uncle moving to New Philadelphia, Ohio, in 1856, Mr. Wolf became associated with Mark S. Mayer and Adam Baum. Three years later he left commercial life to take up the study of law, a profession he had long wished to follow. He began his studies in the office of Judge Joseph C. Hance, of New Philadelphia, Ohio, later attending the Cleveland Law School, from which he graduated with honors. He was admitted to the Ohio bar in 1862.

Mr. Wolf came to Washington in 1862, and has since been known as a leading citizen of the National Capital in the office of the United States consul general at Cairo, Egypt, by President Garfield shortly before the President's assassination. He resigned in May, 1882, after having rendered his adopted country signal service, and returned to Washington because of illness in his family. He was one of the old trustees of the District schools, and it was his suggestion that the Teachers' Association was formed. Mr. Wolf is prominent in fraternal circles. He is an honorar, thirty-third degree Scottish Rite Mason, having belonged to the Masonic order since October 26, 1857. As the author of "The American Jew, as Patriot, Soldier, and Citizen," he is widely known, in addition to which he has written a number of biographies of the leading men of his race.

Mr. Wolf married Miss Caroline Haan, of Ohio, in 1857. He has had six children, four of whom are living. One of his sons is an associate justice of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.
