IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Baron Hengelmueller Sails for Austrian Capital.

DEBUTANTE IS ENTERTAINED

Tea Given for Miss Caryl Crawford
by Mrs. Loring—Madam Kajl Yajima Guest of Honor at Reception Given by Mrs. Barrett at Mission House—Other Society Events.

The Ambassador of Austria-Hungary sailed yesterday from New York on the Caronia of the Cunard line for Liverpool enroute for Vienna where he goes on important private business. The Ambassador expects to return to America by the middle of December. The Baroness Hengelmueller and her little daughter returned from New York yesterday afternoon from their home on Connecticut avenue.

If the tea given yesterday by Mrs. Francis B. Loring in compliment to Miss Caryl Crawford may be taken as an example of what the season holds in debutante attractions, the buds of 1906 are already assured a cordial welcome to society, with society to be congratulated on the very important and interesting acquisitions. Miss Crawford is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crawford who are located at Stoneleigh Court and have only recently made Washington their home, but an old friend of the Loring family and companion of the young daughters of the house. Mrs. Loring and Miss Crawford, received together in the first drawing room, the hostess wearing a beautiful toilet of lavender taffeta, and the debutante a princess gown of straw colored taffeta with the front from the lace finished stock to the hem heavily embroidered in self colored silk. She carried the conventional white bouquet, and united with her youth and extremely charming personality a grace of manner seldom acquired in a first season.

The Misses Loring, with Mrs. Crawford assisted in the entertainment of the guests who were limited strictly to the younger portion of the hostesses' visiting list. In the dining room a bevy of this season's buds including Miss Esther Donny, Miss Frederica Morgan, Miss Frances Goldsborough, Miss Marion Leutze and Miss Evelyn Chew related from a table bountifully provided with tea dainties and lighted by red capped tapers.

Mrs. Crawford wore a very handsome street costume of pastel blue cloth with large black and white patterned stole and muff. Miss Lydia Loring who is noted as one of the most effectively gowned girls of smart society, a trained gown of black with bodice and sleeves composed largely of white lace, and Miss Jean Loring an equally chic costume of dull blue silk and lace.

Lieut. Eduardo Maria Saez, the newly appointed naval attaché of the Legation of Uruguay, has arrived at his post.

Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett, superintendent of the Florence Crittenton Mission, gave a notable entertainment yesterday afternoon at that institution on Third street, where fully 200 visitors, including the Ambassador from Japan, and members of his staff, paid their respects to Madam Kajl Yajima, one of the foremost women of the far East, who journeyed to America to participate in the councils of the International Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Madam Kajl Yajima's interests are not limited to the temperance work, but extend to every movement for the betterment of the race and her sex, nearly her entire life, now approaching the four-score mark, being devoted to educational and philanthropic work. Receiving with Mrs. Barrett and her guests, and never has that much abused word been more aptly applied, were the niece and companion of the latter, and Mrs. J. K. McCauley, an American educator, long a resident of Tokyo, who is visiting her native land.

This evening Mrs. John B. Henderson will entertain at a reception in honor of the distinguished visitor, who leaves for San Francisco and home on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Farbour entertained another smart dinner company last evening, complimentary to Capt. Cloman and Mrs. Clement.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Shallenberger entertained at supper last evening complimentary to their daughter, Miss Josephine Shallenberger, and Mr. Paul Sperry, of Bath, Me., whose marriage will take place at noon to-day at Calvary Baptist Church. The guests were some of the members of the bridal party, and a few special friends of the bride.

At the ceremony to-day Miss Mary B. Shallenberger will be her sister's maid of honor, with the following bridesmaids: Miss Lola M. Evans, Miss Elsie Turner, Miss Catherine M. Whitney, and Miss Helen Beale, all former pupils with the bride at the George Washington University, from which institution both bride and groom were graduated in the class of '02.

DR. KARL MUCK'S DEBUT.

The New Boston Symphony Conductor Makes Agreeable Impression.

Before an audience which thronged the National Theater, and which accorded the Boston Symphony Orchestra a cordial greeting, Dr. Karl Muck, the new conductor of that organization, made his debut in Washington yesterday afternoon. The advent of a new maestro is a matter of no small importance, and it is pleasant to record the fact that Dr. Muck is a worthy successor to the distinguished and capable men under whose batons the orchestra has speedily progressed toward perfection.

He made a most pleasing impression, being dignified without being distrustful, unobtrusive yet confident in his conducting, and without evidencing a catholicity of spirit that augurs well for future concerts. The latter characteristic was especially noticeable, it being difficult to determine whether the joyous and light-hearted Haydn appealed to him more than the serious and sedate Brahms. It is true that the programme did not offer any novelties.

Haydn's Symphony in G minor, Brahms' Symphony No. 1, in C minor, and Weber's Overture "Der Freischutz," are all well-known to concert-goers. Their very familiarity, however, afforded an opportunity to judge of Dr. Muck as an interpreter. His reading, while conservative, is not hackneyed, and he is a past-master in the art of accentuation.

The Boston Symphony was interpreted con amore, each number being marked by crispness, delicacy, and spirit. The Brahms work was given in masterly fashion. This is especially true of the second movement, which was marked by reverential solemnity, and the last movement, the breadth and nobility of which received adequate treatment. Brahms does not belong to the group of musicians who are universally beloved. His writing is like blank verse, sonorous and rhythmic, but lacking the fascination of well-balanced rhyme. The last movement of the symphony yesterday afternoon, however, appeared with tremendous force, by reason of its inherent strength and beauty. "The Freischutz" overture was presented with an abundance of tone-color, but if Dr. Muck had been seeking dramatic effect he would not have overlooked the two-act work which precedes the forte chords which mark the stirring finale.

As to the orchestra itself, it may be said that, like wine, it improves with age. Each member is an artist, and its ensemble work is characterized by wonderful precision and accuracy. It is responsive to the temperament of the conductor, and intelligently appreciative of the nuances which give life and individuality to the score.

SAID THE AUTOMOBILE.

"I think," said the automobile, "the country's not treatin' me fair—Scrambles at a pitch. Don't I run down the rich. An' kill of a poor millionaire!"

"It's true that I'm climbin' the trees, An' playin' leap-frog with the wall 'Round a church, holdin' meetin' 'Round an' 'round an' 'round!"

Oh, I take in the stables and all!

"It's sad," said the automobile, "The way they beatin' me around! They curse me to kill— But I'm fillin' the bill." An' I certainly cover the ground!
