Entertainment at Rauscher's a Complete Success.

DRAW A LARGE AUDIENCE

Debutantes Distinguish Themselves by Their Work in the Tableau. Changes in Cast Made Necessary by Several Cases of Illness—Miss Converse Wins Applause for Dancing.

The fashionable audience which witnessed the attractions of the several notable plays of the evening to attend the entertainment at Rauscher's in aid of the House of Mercy was rewarded by a truly beautiful performance, in which professional and amateur talent combined. The evening was a complete success from the point of view of finance and fashion.

The singing of "In a Persian Garden" by the quartet from St. Margaret's Church was delightfully given and thoroughly appreciated by the large company, each of the participants being given generous and enthusiastic applause.

The singers were: Soprano, Miss Edna Burgess Deo; Contralto, Mrs. William T. Reed; Tenor, Mr. Joseph Lawrence Balle; Bass, Mr. William Hopkins. At the piano, Mr. A. G. Edridge.

The tableaux, in which many of the season's debutantes were to appear, were the cause of much anxiety to the managers of the entertainment, because of the many absentees whose places had to be filled at the last moment, the prevalence of grip taking from the cast Miss Cary Crawford, Miss Jennings, Miss Juliette Williams, and Miss Clatsight.

The programme, however, was carried out, with incidental music by a full orchestra. The cast was as follows:

Cupid's Dilemma, Miss Shouts; Cupid's Decision, Miss Shouts; Cupid and Psyche, Miss Erlicher; Pandora, Miss Trecoff.

THE MUSES. Clio, Miss Trecoff; Melpomene, Miss Jean Crosby; Thalia, Miss Mollie Dodge; Terpsichore, Miss Laura Wells; Polyhymnia, Miss Elmer Slater; Calliope, Miss Scott.

The costumes were particularly good, the Misses Shouts appearing in very becoming toilettes. The tableaux were set in a room with a white wall, a white curtain, and a white floor. The music was given by a full orchestra.

Except in the first picture, the costumes were in purely classical lines, which proved universally becoming, with perhaps the exception of Miss Mollie Dodge, who wore the greatest amount of admiration. The skit dancing of Miss Olga Converse was in itself worth a long journey to see, and the one-act play, "Place aux Dames," was delightfully given by the following cast:

Miss Baggie, Miss Trecoff; Portia, Miss Converse; Ophelia, Miss Watson; Juliette, Miss Chapman; Lady Macbeth, Miss Hoopes. In the audience, in addition to the parents and guardians of the youthful players, were Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Goldsborough, Dr. and Mrs. Loring, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Terry, Miss Terry, Mr. and Mrs. George Marz, Mrs. Lincoln and Miss Lincoln, Mrs. Robert Hineckley, Mrs. Edward Simpson, Mrs. Jackson and Miss Laura Jackson, Mrs. John Rodgers, Mrs. Barney, Mr. and Mrs. Gibson, Falmesock, Mr. and Mrs. Chatard, Mrs. Claget and Mrs. Henri de St. Louis, the Viscountess de Sibour, Mrs. F. A. M. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Le Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Eno, and Mrs. Goodwin. Mrs. Hoopes, Mr. and Mrs. Addison, Miss Boardman, Commander and Mrs. Clover, the Misses Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bidle, Miss Errol Brown, Miss Collier, Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbert Brown, Rear Admiral and Mrs. McGowan, Miss McGowan, Mrs. Bloomer, Miss Bloomer, Miss Frouke, Mrs. Nathaniel Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John Watts Kearney, Miss Gale, Miss McEney, Mrs. Henry Cleveland Perkins, and the Misses Perkins, the Misses Todd, and Miss Jean Loring.

Miss Arms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor Arms, entertained at dinner last evening at her parents' home, on Massachusetts avenue, complimentary to Miss Marion Dall, whose marriage to Mr. Charles Comer will take place at noon to-day at All Souls' Church. The additional guests were Mr. John P. Wilson, of Chicago; Mrs. William Curtis Hill, of this city; the bride's attendants, Miss Catherine Ridgely, of Washington; Miss Margaret Brown, Miss Mary Aldrich, and Miss Esther Whitney, all of New York, and Miss Jessie Ring, of Saginaw, Mich.

Mr. Comer entertained the men of the bride party last evening at his apartment at Stonehill Court, where he and his bride will take up their residence after a short honeymoon trip.

Madame Cortes, wife of the Minister from Colombia, will hold her first formal reception this afternoon, for which a large number of cards has been issued. Mme. Cortes will be assisted by her daughter, Mme. Guzman, who is the wife of the first secretary of the legation, and a number of personal friends from official and resident society. Mme. Cortes and her daughter will continue to receive on Tuesdays throughout the season.

The Viscountess Aoki, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, will not be at home to-day, but will receive on the following Tuesdays in January. Her son-in-law and daughter, Count and Countess Hatzfeldt, are expected to arrive at the embassy this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Morton have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Pauline Morton, to Mr. J. Hopkins Smith, Jr., on Saturday, February 2, at 8 o'clock, St. Thomas Church, New York, with a reception to follow at their residence, 733 Park avenue.

Only the immediate families of the contracting parties witnessed the wedding of Miss Helen Eisenman and Mr. Abe Sigmond.

who were married by Rabbi Simons at 7 o'clock last evening, at the bride's home, 98 Massachusetts avenue. The bride wore a lingerie gown, with the conventional tulle veil and coronet of orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of Bride roses and lilies of the valley. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kahn, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. F. Rothschild, Mr. and Mrs. M. Kahn, Mr. Louis Kahn, Mr. Harry Kahn, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goldman, all of Baltimore. Mr. and Mrs. Sigmond left last evening for a short honeymoon trip, after which they will be at home at 1713 U street northwest.

The ladies of Rebecca Lodge, No. 1, Daughters of Israel, are invited to be present at 8 o'clock to-night, at the Temple, to witness the celebration of Mr. Blout's anniversary.

Miss Elkins went to New York yesterday for a short visit to Miss Pauline Morton.

Mrs. Rouzer and Miss Rouzer will be at home to-day and the remaining Tuesdays in January.

Lieut. and Mrs. Adolphus Eugene Watson, who were married last Thursday in Manila, are on their way to the home of the parents of the former, Rear Admiral Eugene W. Watson and Mrs. Watson, on Twenty-first street. The bride was Miss Genevieve Gallagher, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Hugh J. Gallagher, the former of whom was in Manila.

Miss Ida Thompson will entertain at luncheon to-day and on January 23.

Mrs. Eleanor G. Gridley, of Chicago, author of "The Life of Lincoln," and other works, is in the city for a day or two, the guest of Mrs. Christine W. Dunlap, of 1459 Connecticut avenue, who is returning to Chicago from New York.

Mrs. Eva Mills, the wife of Mr. T. A. Mills, the sculptor, of Pittsburg, was among those confirmed by Cardinal Gibbons at St. Patrick's Church, Sunday.

She has been for some time a most devoted Catholic, an example to many of her daily visits to the church and her unfailing attendance at every service.

Mrs. Mills has a fine, low contralto voice, and will be heard with pleasure in Catholic musical circles, where some of her compositions will be given, including "Love's Dream," a waltz, which has been much admired.

John Drew in Pinero's "His House in Order" at the New National.

The combination of John Drew and Arthur W. Pinero as associated at the National Theater last night proved a most happy one. Mr. Pinero represents in the field of playwrighting a distinct school, embodying the intimate portraiture of people who move and think with the higher order of humanity not only in a social and cultured sense, but generally in an intellectual.

Pinero, often unjustly accused of cynicism and the willful dragging of his characters through the mire of immorality, is, nevertheless, the complete master of the problem play, so-called. "His House in Order" is a problem play in the best sense of the term. It is a serious discussion of a domestic episode, in which some plain language is used and some unpleasant facts brought to light. While at times the shadow of Ibsenism is cast over the development, there is a gratifying and pleasant ending, which reminds one of a little of the old days of "Sweet Lavender," before Pinero became ashamed of bringing the curtain down between the first wife and one Maj. Maureward, and forestall a public exposure of so hideous a family skeleton, is the delicate duty of her brother-in-law, Hilary. In the end the obnoxious relatives are dismissed, and Nina, the wife, reigns in her husband's house, which is thus put in order.

Mr. Drew, in the part of Hilary Jesson, the peace-making brother-in-law, has what might be summarized as a typical Drew part, but whether Mr. Drew realizes that at last he has a play and a part worthy of his mettle, or whether most of his recent roles have been mere puppets, which he has bantered epigrammatic speeches and gentlemanly poses, the truth is that at no time in his starring career has he appeared to better advantage or done better acting. All times he rises to the exacting dramatic requirements of the play, and in the scene in which he persuades the rebellious wife to relinquish the incriminating letters, with Mr. Hillington, six certain calls for a purely forceful handling of a moving climax.

Miss Illington hadly proved herself worthy of the honor of creating so important a role as Nina. She possesses not only natural beauty and grace of carriage, but assumes the wistful, pleading, and womanly part with appreciation and conviction. She displayed an emotional fire in several of her scenes which marks her as a genius.

Mr. Drew's company, which is always selected with a nice discretion as to the requirements of the cast, is, for the most part, excellent. The character of Hilary Jesson, the type of self-centered British husband, so complete a foil to the open-hearted brother Hilary, was played by C. M. Hallard with great reserve and dignity. His surrender in the last act was a remarkably finished bit of work.

Lumsden played as a capable Maj. Maureward, in a repressed key a part easily overdone.

Oliver, as Geraldine, the dominating sister-in-law, labored under the misfortune of being miscast. She is far more at home in a cheerful part than one so lugubrious as this. She is a tall, fine-looking woman, and Geraldine a disagreeable old maid. The Miss Thome of Hope Latham was cleverly done, and the Derek of Edith Mendoza acceptable, although the passion of von Barwig would have done better. Sir Daniel and Lady Ridgely, the pompous and narrow middle-class parents of the defunct Annabel, were well done by Arthur Elliot and Lena Halley.

A large and fashionable audience was present at the performance, several large theater parties being among the number, including one accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

Marie Cahill Very Entertaining in "Marrying Mary" at the Columbia.

Marie Cahill, supported by a strong company, opened her engagement at the Columbia Theater last night in her new musical play, "Marrying Mary," by Edwin Milton Royle, with music by Silvio Hein and lyrics by Benjamin Haggood Burt. Both star and comedy received flattering attention from the large audience present.

The play is really a satire on the laxity of the laws governing divorce, in some places descending almost to broad farce. Ormsby Kullepper, the leader in an anti-divorce crusade, whose feelings in the matter have been heightened by his father's matrimonial diversions, meets Mary Montgomery at a Florida resort and falls instantly in love with her. She has already been married to and parted from three husbands, her string embracing a Mormon bishop, a United States Senator, and a man about town, each of whom arrives successively on the scene. Her efforts at first to conceal from and afterward to explain her past matrimonial experiences to her lover cause many amusing complications, some other complications being added by the appearance of the hero's gay old sire, who also makes overtures to the charming divorcee. In the end, however, all is arranged with satisfaction, the discarded husbands joining in the wedding merry-making.

The action of the comedy is studded with a number of bright and light musical hits, the strongest being rendered by Eugene Cowles, one of the great physique and lusty voices, earning several hearty recalls with "The Last One Is the Best of All," despite the rather flippant sentiment expressed by the verses.

Miss Cahill, as Mary Montgomery, in conjunction with William Courtleigh as Ormsby, carried the comedy to a high degree of merriment. She has an entertaining manner of working up the humorous situations and achieves telling results with her side speeches. Last night she was in particularly good voice, and rendered "He's a Cousin of Mine," "Coo, Coo," and "A Hottentot Love Song." The "Coo, Coo" song was very catchy, and made a decided hit. Her best comedy work is in the last act, when on her wedding day she is compelled to confront and paralyze those who had previously been joined to her in marriage and parted from her by legal decree.

Mr. William Courtleigh essays the role of the ardent lover and would-be reformer, ending unaccountably from Miss Cahill to extract humorous humor from the successive episodes. He was pleasing in the duet with Miss Cahill called "Mr. Cupid."

Senator Bunchgrass, No. 1, Bishop Brigham Knudsen, and Willie Drinkwater, No. 2, are impersonated respectively by Guy Woodward, Mark Smith, and Roy Atwell, each giving exaggerated character portraits and introducing plenty of broad comedy, filling out with a list of lively topical songs, notably "Nobody Knows the Answer" and "Three Men in a Boat."

Mr. Eugene Cowles is undoubtedly the strong musical feature of the piece, his fine voice being heard to great advantage in the selection above mentioned and in "Do-Re-Me," a duet with Miss Cahill, involving several good topical hits, particularly one pertaining to grand opera performers. Miss Annie Buckley appeared as Fleurite, a maid, who was allotted a few Irish witticisms and one song, "Gwendolyn," which she rendered with the assistance of the other performers. The production is prettily staged. An attractive looking chorus serves to give color and action by a display of brilliant ballet and graceful dancing.

A Variety of Exceptionally Good Things on the Bill at Chase's.

A bill of unusual merit holds the boards this week at Chase's, and the inevitable Monday crowd was on hand afternoon and evening to show its appreciation. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane headed the bill in a sketch called "Everybody's Up." The sketch is good, and particularly well suited to the Cranes, who give a most entertaining performance. Mr. and Mrs. Crane impersonate six different characters in the course of half an hour, and do it wonderfully well. The characters range from a scrubwoman to a French maid, and from an engineer to a German count. The changes are made so quickly, and are so great in number, that it is easy to get lost in the maze and wonder who's who.

Miss Toby Claude, diminutive comedienne, and late co-star of "Fantana," sang some good songs in her characteristic style. Attractive in appearance, undeniably clever, and artistically endowed, Miss Claude will undoubtedly prove one of the theatrical attractions of the week.

Master Willie Eckstein, "The Boy Padewski," gave an astonishing exhibition of technique in a varied program of five numbers, ranging from Mendelssohn's concerto in D minor to "The Kandy Kid." The effect of his playing was somewhat marred by excessive pedaling.

"Chick" Saunders was interesting in his caricature specialty called "Faces," and Frank V. Seymour, in "The Mystery Bill," crowded a lot of nonsense into twenty minutes.

George W. Bandy and Lottie Wilson, comedy dancers, and the American Vitagraph, presenting "The Adventures of a Detective," completed a good bill.

Al Wilson, at Majestic, Pleases Big Audience.

Al H. Wilson, the singing comedian, in a new play of picturesque Switzerland, entitled "Metz in the Alps," is this week's attraction at the Majestic.

That Mr. Wilson has lost none of his popularity as a singing comedian was fully attested by the applause that was frequently bestowed upon him and his supporting company by one of the largest audiences the Majestic has ever known. Standing room was at a premium long before the curtain was rung up.

The play abounds in romantic episodes, and during the course of the play Mr. Wilson rendered several of his new compositions in particularly pleasing manner. One is "Your Eyes," deserves special mention, as it is undoubtedly the best song he has written since "The Winding of the Yarn." After the third act, Mr. Wilson was called before the curtain, and in his humorous way thanked the audience for its appreciation.

The company is one of the strongest and largest that ever supported Mr. Wilson, and was adequate in every respect. Little Reenie Farrington as Deutcher, Meta Muller's daughter, won the hearts of the audience by her charming simplicity and clever acting. The locale of the play being in Switzerland, it affords a lavish display of scenic investment. The scene of the Alpine Pass was excellent, and the appearance of the Monks from the Hospice of St. Bernard and their faithful dogs lent realism to the scene.

Julia Rowland Pleases at Academy.

Melodrama with music prevailed at the Academy last night, when "The Cowboy Girl" was seen in this city for the first time. It was another Western play, the central theme being a valuable mine, as usual. These plots are gradually becoming as monotonous as the Wall street incidents.

Miss Julia Rowland, in the title role, was quite pleasing, especially in the rendition of the song hit "Whitting." In which she was ably assisted by Ray Raymond. Mr. Raymond's acting was also adequate, as was the work of Miss Florence O'Neil, Billy Devere, Sam Cottrell, and Miss Lillian Allen in their respective roles.

"High School Girls" at Lyceum.

"The High School Girls," a clever burlesque organization, headed by Kennedy and Evans, and featuring the "Red Raven Cadets," are the week's attraction at the New Lyceum. The burlesques are funny and possess more than the ordinary investment of beauty and grace in the chorus line. Several ballets were given with novel electrical effects. While the bulk of the comedy is in the hands of Messrs. Kennedy and Evans, there is plenty left over to introduce a few other male members of the company to advantage.

The olio is above par, and serves to introduce several well-known specialists in suitable vehicles.
