IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Keene Wedded Fifty Years.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Spacious Residence in Shepherd's Road Scene of Brilliant Reception. M. and Mme. de Lima Will Leave This Week for Europe—Admiral Reuter Going to Ottawa.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Keene, in Shepherd's road, was the scene last evening of a large and brilliant reception from 7 to 10 o'clock, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. The spacious dwelling was most artistically decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns, and amilax, which formed a background for huge clusters of cut flowers. In the drawing-room, bride poses banked the mantels, and the receiving party stood, yellow streamers adding an appropriate touch of color to the decorations, while white daisies against a foliage background and gold and white table appointments carried out the color scheme in the dining-room, the hallway, and reception parlors. A string orchestra placed in a bower of palms in the piazza also enhanced the beauty of the entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Keene were assisted in receiving their guests by their daughter, Miss S. Louisa Keene, and Mrs. Keene's sister, and her daughter, Mrs. Louisa V. Robinson, of Baltimore. Mrs. C. B. Sullivan, Petworth, D. C.; Miss Molly C. Locker, Petworth, D. C.; Miss Ethel Smith, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Alice M. Blandford, Washington; Mrs. George Willson, Brightwood; Mrs. Florence Boteiler, Washington; Miss Bessie Clayton, Brightwood; Miss Louise Mitchell, Baltimore; Mrs. William B. McDonald, Baltimore; Miss Sadie White, Brightwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Keene were married at Friendship, D. C., July 14, 1857. Mrs. Keene was before her marriage, Miss Sarah Elizabeth Conrad. Her parents were among the oldest inhabitants of the District, but she came of an old Virginia family. She was born on the heights of Georgetown, and has lived here continuously. Her grandfather, on her mother's side (Capt. Joseph H. Timms) distinguished himself during the war of the Revolution, serving with Lafayette.

Mr. Keene is also of an old Virginia family, several of his relatives having served with distinction during the Revolution and war of 1812-14. His grandfather, Thomas Keene, was a ranking officer in the United States navy, serving during the entire revolution. His uncle, Willis F. and Roderick Triplett, saw service especially in the defense of Baltimore, and were about the last of the old defenders to die, their deaths occurring only a few years ago. Mr. Keene was born in Charles County, Va., and was educated in the common school and the University of Virginia. He came to the District in 1858, and for over forty years was a teacher and supervisor in the public schools.

His work has always been highly indorsed by every superintendent and school board under which he has served, culminating in a grand reception by his teachers on February 1, 1907. Mr. and Mrs. Keene have three children living—Dr. J. Everett Keene, John G. Keene, secretary of the Brightwood Citizens' Association, and Miss S. Louisa Keene, all of this city; and three grand-children, Joseph Arthur Keene, Gerald Everett Keene, and Dorothy Louise Keene, all children of Mr. John Keene. A number of presents in gold, silver, and cut and Bohemian glass were received, one of the most interesting being handsome silver cutlery, a gift from the teachers of the Seventh division and others who have been transferred to other districts, all of whom have taught under Mr. Keene.

M. Arenas de Lima, the Portuguese charge, and Mme. de Lima, who came to this country two months ago from Paris to take charge of the legation, will leave this week for New York. They will sail for Paris on Saturday, not waiting for the return of the Portuguese minister, Viscount de Alentejo, because of the delicate health of Mme. de Lima. After a sojourn in Paris, M. and Mme. de Lima will go to their palatial home in Lisbon for a vacation. Their departure will be a loss to Washington society.

During the absence of Viscount de Alentejo and M. de Lima the affairs of the embassy will be managed, for the second time, by Mr. Gurgel do Amaral, charge d'affaires of the Brazilian Embassy, who represented Portugal so creditably last summer, he having again been appointed charge this season.

Columbia Heights Citizens Raise $12,500 for Site.

MANY ADVANTAGES URGED

F. H. Warner Points Out Reasons Why Location on Sherman-Barber Tract Would Be Ideal for the Institution—Canvas for Money Will Be Continued by Committee.

The movement in the interests of the selection of the Columbia Heights site for the George Washington University received a further impetus at a meeting of the citizens' committee of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association, which has the project under consideration, at the Savoy Hotel last night. Addresses detailing the advantages to be obtained by the erection of the university on the Sherman-Barber tract were made by B. H. Warner, W. E. Andrews, and Louis Shoemaker, at the conclusion of which it was announced that approximately $12,500 has been subscribed to the university by the residents and property owners of that locality, provided the site on Columbia Heights is selected. B. H. Warner, the first speaker, congratulated the association upon its endeavors to have the university restored to its former locality.

"The biggest mistake George Washington University, then Columbian University, ever made, and one by which, in my opinion, it lost $1,000,000 in abandoning its site on Columbia Heights," said Mr. Warner.

Necessary Adjuncts Possible.

"A campus and athletic fields are necessary adjuncts to a university; and where in the District of Columbia can a better location be provided than the one favored by the members of this association and the citizens of Columbia Heights? It is the very best in that it is healthful, well drained, prominent so as to be observed by tourists, and easily accessible. Here its students are within easy distance of the departments, libraries, and courts, and the reasons for such a location are more potent than ever before. A university should be a city, set upon a hill and commanding in situation."

"George Washington University is among the leading educational institutions of the District, and it is fitting that it should occupy a site in keeping with its reputation. Within the next one or two decades, the spirit of George Washington, when in his day he spoke of his desire to see established here a great university, will be recognized, and the George Washington University will receive legacies and gifts from many benefactors."

Other Reasons Advanced.

Mr. Andrews followed in advocacy of the site upon Columbia Heights. Washington, he said, is every day becoming more of an educational center, and its universities should occupy commanding positions. He urged that the citizens of the District interest members of Congress in various projects of local interest, not only with regard to the establishment of universities, but other undertakings looking toward the betterment of Washington.

The co-operation of the citizens of the District was asked by Louis Shoemaker, who said that upon them rested the greater part of the burden in making Washington not only the educational center of this country, but of the world. Mr. Shoemaker congratulated the association upon the progress made thus far.

Judge C. S. Bundy, president of the association and chairman of the committee, announced that he will appoint additional members to canvass that portion of Columbia Heights which has not yet been covered in the endeavor to raise subscriptions for the university in the event that the site desired by the association is chosen.

Last Night at the Local Playhouses

"The Beggar Student" at the New National.

Karl Millocker's tenebrous and dramatic opera bouffe, "The Beggar Student," is so seldom sung nowadays that its production by the Aborn Company served to attract an unusually large midsummer audience to the National Theater last night. "The Beggar Student," while termed a comic opera, is a sort of lyric version of "The Lady of Lyons," with a plot quite as intense and sympathetic in its nature as that of Bulwer-Lytton's immortal tragedy, rounding, of course, to the now out of fashion, but none the less gratifying happy ending.

With one or two exceptions, the company fairly outdid itself in the adequate assumption of characters. Robert Lett, as Gen. Ollendorf, gave the most legitimate portrait he has yet attempted, though his interpolated topical song, while funny enough of itself, violated the atmosphere of the opera most ruthlessly. His acting, however, was above reproach and won much deserved applause. Harry Luckstone, as Symon, the beggar student, was excellent, and Harold Blake's really sweet tenor was heard most advantageously in the role of Jantziky.

Edith Bradford was an effervescent Bronislava, and seemed in most excellent spirits, as well as in superb voice. Heinrich Goldie was the greatest Laura, but her voice is unsuited to the difficult arias allotted to the role. In her duet with Mr. Luckstone, however, she proved more at ease, and voiced several high notes with confidence. Tillie Sallinger was an acceptable Countess Palmadina, and Phil Branson a comical Jaller. Frixie Cadia, as Lieut. Poppenberg, came to the front in a speaking part, as a military dandy, and Jack O'Neill, Walter Halbach, William Loughran, and C. W. Phillips completed a most capable cast.

The opera is pleasing, both on account of its excellent presentation and on account of the fact that it is the novelty of the Aborn season.

"A Doll's House" at the Belasco Playhouse.

An ovation-like reception was tendered by the audience present at the Belasco Theater last night to Miss Charlotte Walker, when she appeared as Nora Helmer in Ibsen's celebrated drama, "A Doll's House." It was her initial appearance at the theater as the head of a mid-season stock company, and her popularity was vouchsafed for by the record-breaking turnout which greeted her premier.

Those who came perhaps with the sole idea of seeing Miss Walker, however, were offered extra inducements for entertainment. They witnessed the production of a remarkable play, written by one who is probably the greatest of modern playwrights, with one of his strangely attractive leading characters played by an actress who is just crossing the threshold of emotional possibilities. Ibsen's problem plays, usually worked out within a constricted atmosphere and with commonplace characters, are powerfully interesting, and in this instance that power is accentuated by the presence of three such capable portrayers as Miss Charlotte Walker, Mr. Sydney Mather, and Mr. Edward Ellis.

The story is of a woman who makes every sacrifice for love and duty, and receives adequate returns. Nora Helmer puts herself in jeopardy of a felon's fate by forgery, committing the act for the purpose of obtaining money for the preservation of her husband's health, and when she is exposed is consoling to her by whom she was justified in expecting comfort, offers anger and bitter taunts. In the hands of Miss Walker, this pathetic figure is made strongly impressive, and she displayed powers of emotional feeling which would be considered to have been those who have only viewed her in the light of a personally attractive actress with an inclination toward lighter roles. She is entirely successful in exhibiting the complexity of the character and strikingly deeper feelings according to it, without recourse to high pitch or undue theatrical device. The whole performance presages a rich and accumulative feature, the only fault being shared by Miss Walker with other leading members of the company in failing properly to measure the acoustic properties of the house, which fault will, no doubt, be readily overcome as the week progresses.

The character of Torvald Helmer was portrayed in a completely convincing manner by Mr. Sydney C. Mather, and Mr. Edward Ellis again demonstrated his scholarly versatility by his work as Nils Krogstad, while competent support was accorded by Mr. Guy Coombs, as Dr. Rank, and Miss Alice Butler, as Miss Helmer. The audience was extremely demonstrative, and when Miss Walker was recalled after the second act she was the recipient of a number of floral testimonials.

DO YOU WEIGH YOUR ICE?

Wagon Drivers Charged with Not Delivering All Paid For.

The drivers of ice wagons are giving short weight without the knowledge of the companies by which they are employed, that they refuse to deliver ice to those customers who insist upon weighing the commodity, and that these conditions obtain generally, are charged made to the Commissioners by E. C. R. Humphries, of 1217 O street northwest, who asks that steps be taken to protect the public from "this systematic robbery."

Mr. Humphries calls attention to a recent purchase of ice which, upon weighing, he found to be 7 1/2 pounds less than the amount paid for. The driver of another company, he states, has declined to serve him further, notwithstanding he delivered ice to the surrounding neighborhood. "The reason," says Mr. Humphries, "is that the driver became offended when told that the ice served to me was from two to four pounds short in weight. I have changed my patronage to three companies, including a private concern, and I find them all alike. It is short weight with all of them."

"It looks as if word has been passed around among the dispensers of ice that I will insist upon weighing my ice and demanding what is due me, and, as a result, I find trouble in getting any of these wagon men to deliver me the ice I want, notwithstanding the fact that I stand ready with the cash."

Col. W. C. Haskell, dealer of weights and measures, said yesterday that the energy of his department in prosecutions has resulted in noticeably better conditions as to the sale of ice, and that complaints and information concerning the ice business will be welcomed and given prompt attention.

Watchmen's Outing August 5.

At a meeting of the Night Watchmen's Association recently, it was decided to give an excursion to Marshall Hall on August 5. A game of baseball will be played between teams representing the watchmen and the Track and Roadway team of the Washington Railway and Electric Company. Six prizes will be awarded for winning contests, and twenty-five other prizes are to be given for various contests. The excursion will be on the order of an old-time family picnic. The committee in charge includes A. J. Rompney, chairman; E. Lehman, secretary; B. F. Klopfer, treasurer; J. W. Dickerson and W. H. Groves.

Death of Boyd B. Andrews.

Boyd B. Andrews, a clerk in the medical division of the Penobscot Bureau, died yesterday, following a short illness from appendicitis. Mr. Boyd was appointed to the bureau from Illinois February 3, 1902. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.
