

LABOR DAY SUPREME

Union Men Thought Land Will Celebrate To-morrow.

C. L. U. PLANS BIG FESTIVITIES

Washington Members of Organizations Will Disperse with Street Parade, but Great Demonstration Will Be Made at Near-by Resort.

Working men of every craft are prepared to celebrate their annual holiday to-morrow.

Yesterday afternoon they laid down their tools with gladness and anticipation of the celebration to-morrow after an all day's rest to-day.

Hundreds of big celebrations and demonstrations will be held throughout the United States, and most of them will be characterized by a big street parade.

To-morrow will also be celebrated as the tenth anniversary of the Central Labor Union, which was formed at a celebration on Labor Day ten years ago.

In view of the present trouble in the building trades and the telegraphers' strike, to-morrow's turnout is regarded as momentous in the situation.

The arrangements for the celebration at Luna Park have been in the hands of a special committee appointed by the Central Labor Union, of which James L. Feeney is the chairman.

Following is the programme laid out by the committee, which, with the other amusements at the park, should amply satisfy everybody:

100-yard race—Open for members of organized labor affiliated with the Central Labor Union.

Children's Chorus to Sing. Exercises on the band stand, commencing at 5 p. m.; J. L. Feeney, chairman.

Albert J. Fenwick is dead. Washingtonian Passes Away in Western Maryland.

DENIES MAKING ADMISSION

Collins Says He Did Not Admit Negligence to Public Printer.

Superintendent of Building at G. P. O. Declines to Discuss Cause of Resignation.

Home K. Collins, former superintendent of building at the Government Printing Office, whose resignation was tendered to the Public Printer and accepted, denies that he admitted to the Public Printer, or to another official, that he had been negligent in his duties.

This statement was in answer to an allegation from an official of the printing office, who said that Mr. Collins had admitted negligence, and that he had only resigned to keep from being discharged from the civil service without dismissal.

CONTEST FOR BANNER

Final Tests in Playground Tournament.

THREE GROUNDS ARE TIED

Virginia Avenue, Rosedale, and Towers Have Almost Same Number of Points and Great Interest Is Being Manifested in the Outcome.

Contests to Be at Van Ness Park.

Some 235 children will take part in the final tournament of the white play grounds at Van Ness Park Wednesday, September 4, for a banner offered by The Washington Herald.

These 235 children represent more than 2,000 children who have taken part in the various contests, but have failed to win places.

Including the exhibition of games which will occupy the first ten minutes of the programme, more than 500 children will take part on Wednesday afternoon.

Excitement is running high in the different playgrounds, as Virginia Avenue, Rosedale, and Towers are almost an exact tie in their preliminary score.

The entries for the finals are as follows: The Entries. Sixty-year dash; boys under sixteen years—Herald Davis, Progress City; Lawrence Perry, Virginia Avenue; Robert Gray, Virginia Avenue; V. Girardi, Jefferson; J. Nain, North Capitol; Walter Linkinbach, Rosedale, and Earl Nicholas, Towers.

LEAPS TO HIS DEATH

Raymond Norris Loses Life in Potomac River.

LAD WANTS TO GO SWIMMING

Determination to Go Into Water Proves Fatal—Nephew Laughs at Struggles of Drowning Boy—Undertaken to Rescue the Lad.

Within sight of his two-year-old nephew, Russell Norris, who, seated in a small wagon but a few feet away, was enjoying the antics of several boys playing about the water, Raymond Norris, ten years of age, dived into the river from the sea wall at the foot of Fourth street southwest yesterday afternoon, and after floundering about in the water for a few minutes sank beneath the surface.

The several boy companions, seeing the lad's perilous position, screamed for help, and some unknown white man who responded to their calls for assistance sprang into the river with all his clothes on and tried to rescue the drowning boy. All efforts proved useless, however, and it was not until the police from the harbor precinct had dragged the river bottom that the body of the unfortunate lad was recovered.

Wants to Go Swimming. The Norris boy knew neither of the boys, having moved to that section of the city only a few days ago, but within a few minutes he made himself acquainted, and had joined them at their play. Leaving his little nephew spated in the toy wagon, the boy hurriedly removed his clothes, and, according to the stories told by his new acquaintances, said that he was going in swimming.

He had hardly hit the water when the boys on the bank saw that he knew nothing of swimming, and immediately they called to a negro, who was fishing from a rowboat in midstream, to go to his rescue. Either the man did not hear their calls or did not wish to bother himself with the undertaking, for he made no attempt to alter his position, and the unfortunate Raymond sank beneath the surface for the last time.
