Senator Dolliver Speaks on "New Moral Outlook."

BROOKLYN Y. M. C. A. MEETING

Says School of Criticism Has Exaggerated Defects of Government, but that Brightest Time in History of Nation Will Soon Be at Hand.

New York, Jan. 5.—United States Senator J. P. Dolliver, of Iowa, delivered an address on "The new moral outlook" today before a large meeting in the Orpheum Theater, Brooklyn, held under the auspices of the Central Branch of the Y. M. C. A.

He deplored the fact that the people of the United States were losing confidence in our institutions and declared there was absolutely no need of lack of faith in the progress of the country in making. There was a ring of optimism in every utterance, and he concluded by saying that the brightest time in the history of the nation would soon be at hand.

School of Criticism.

"Within the last few years a criticism has grown up against the entire fabric of our government that the social and political order which we inherited from the founders of this nation is being undermined. This school of criticism has exaggerated the defects of the government until millions of people are downhearted because they believe our institutions are going to the bad. I don't think they are, but I have friends who do. One of my friends points to de Tocqueville, the French traveler, who, in his book, "Democracy in America," makes the assertion that there was no corruption in American politics. The Frenchman was here in 1826, and my friend makes that the landmark in tracing the moral decay of our country.

"Another friend gave me a list of eighteen persons who were sent to jail for violation of the land laws, and he believed the dishonesty of these scoundrels meant the collapse of the moral fabric of the country. On the contrary, it indicated the great awakening of the consciences of our people under the most superb leadership I have ever known. Many business men seem to think that the country has taken harm from what the President has done, but others believe that the market places should be purged of harmful influences.

"Some time ago I found in the Treasury Department a report of an alleged defalcation in the Land Office. While the official in the Land Office had taken over $250,000, the receiver's books showed a shortage also of $25,000. The receiver's report went on to say that the defaulter was wholly penitent, and had been led away by the examples of his predecessors; then the special commissioner, who made an investigation recommended that another receiver not be appointed. His report read in part:

Lobbying of To-day.

Senator Dolliver then went on to say that he resented the use of lobbying to-day by representatives as a peculiarly un-American evil. He went back to the days before the civil war and told of the outrageous conditions that prevailed in the legislature when corruption was supposed to have never been.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Washington, Sunday, Jan. 5, 1908—8 p. m. A wider distribution of atmospheric pressure has set in generally over the United States. Buried Treasure Ring Has Convivial Aims.

IT'S ALWAYS FAIR WEATHER

Or It Will Be, at Any Rate, When These Good Fellows of the Briny Deep Get Together and Swap Yarns of a Salt Sea Tang, of Pirates Bold, and of Treasures Great.

New York, Jan. 5.—A new society, the B. T. R.—it must not be confused with the B. T. T., which has entirely different aims—has been organized, with headquarters at a certain detectable hole in the wall in Front street, near Roosevelt, and with branches at the most picturesque water mills along Manhattan's eastern water front below the Swamp, B. T. R., it may be explained, is the abbreviation of the magic words Buried Treasure Ring.

The Buried Treasure Ring promises to be the most peculiar and fascinating society in all New York. The name of the new organization just hints at its purpose, without revealing its possibilities. It is not composed of people weighed down with the secret of some mysterious fortune hid by Kidd, Moran, Flint, or any other old time buccaner.

Tells of Its Aim.

A charter member of the new society was induced to-day to describe its purposes and scope to a reporter. Clearing his throat in a deep bass note, he rumbled forth:

"The Buried Treasure Ring has been founded by a few choice spirits to preserve the integrity and pristine romance of South street and the water front. With the disappearance of the old square riggers and the installment of a new horse car in South street some of us old-timers came to the conclusion that we were between the devil and the deep sea.

Bo's'n Pipes Them Up.

"Our gatherings are held at any time of the day or night. All hands piped to the bar by the bo's'n are expected to join in hearty singing of old chanteys. A quartet then renders 'Fifteen Men on a Dead Man's Chest,' and after the mate has read a selection from 'Treasure Island' conversational intercourse is permitted to the bo's'n's satisfaction.

LITTLE EGYPT DEAD

AT FIRST THOUGHT A MURDER

Investigation Shows She Was Asphyxiated and that Death Took Place Two Days Ago—Became Famous Ten Years Ago at Seelye Dinner—Managers Were Besieged.

New York, Jan. 5.—Little Egypt, the original Little Egypt, the dancer who was a guest of Herbert Barnum Seelye, grandson of the showman, when Capt. Chapman made his sensational raid at Sherry's, a little over ten years ago, was found dead to-day in her apartments on the top floor of 226 West Thirty-seventh street.

Black marks on her neck and breast and blood stains on her night gown led Coroner Harburger to believe that she had been murdered, and he ordered her body removed to the morgue, where an autopsy will be performed to-morrow by Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon.

Detectives of the West Thirty-seventh street station, under Capt. Stephen O'Brien, and Dr. M. M. Waxman, of 28 West Thirty-ninth street, who made an investigation, reported that death had been caused by coal gas asphyxiation, and that there was nothing suspicious.

With Burlesque Company.

Little Egypt, who, in private life, was Katherine Devine, had occupied a five-room apartment in the Thirty-seventh street house for two months past while she was appearing with a burlesque company in and around New York. She recently closed an engagement at the London Theater, on the Bowery, and was soon to have opened with "The Merry Widows" at New Orleans. The manager of the show was awaiting her to-day in Philadelphia, where she was to have rehearsed with the company before starting for the South.

Finds Her Dead in Bed.

Her sister, Frank Connell, of 241 West Thirty-sixth street, had called to see her several times within the last two days, and when she failed to get any response this afternoon the janitor went through the window from the fire escape and found Little Egypt lying dead in bed.

All the windows and doors were closed, and there was a strong odor of coal gas in every room. While Coroner Harburger was inclined to the theory that the woman had been murdered, the janitor recalled that only the day before several tenants had complained to him that coal gas was coming through the heaters from the furnace in the cellar.

The woman's clothes were in the bedroom as she left them before retiring, and her jewelry and some money were on the bureau.

PRESIDENT ASSAILS ADMIRAL IN LETTER

perative to stamp with disapproval the behavior which, if followed throughout the navy generally, would literally ruin the navy's efficiency. The question as to which Admiral, Brownson took issue with the department, I will deal with in a separate letter. It is one as to which there can be entirely legitimate differences of opinion, although in my judgment the considerations in favor of the course decided upon are overwhelming.

No Room for Difference.

"But there is no room for difference of opinion as to the gross impropriety of the admiral's conduct in resigning sooner than carry out the orders of his superior officers in such a matter. The officers of the navy must remember that it is not merely childish, but in the highest degree reprehensible to permit either personal pique, wounded vanity, or factional feeling on behalf of some particular bureau or organization, to render them disloyal to the interests of the navy and therefore of the country as a whole.

The question whether one officer or another should command a ship is of little consequence compared with the weakness of the different branches of the service which would result if officers were to refuse to serve whenever their tempers are ruffled by adverse decisions on the part of their superiors. Their sole concern should be the good of the service, and save only lack of courage in actual warfare, obedience, and loyalty, are the most essential qualities in keeping the service up to the highest standard.

The different branches of the department, the different branches of the service, must act in co-ordination, and the questions that arise between them must be settled by the authority of the Secretary of the Navy and of the President under and in accordance with the law enacted by Congress, and the first duty of every officer, whether of the line, of the pay department, of the medical department, or of the construction department, whether in one bureau or in another, is to the immediate and loyal obedience to every lawful command of a superior, and, of course, above all, to the law itself.

This duty is incumbent upon all, but it is most incumbent upon those highest in rank, whose example may be of far-reaching effect.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The second letter was written on January 2, two days later. Its text follows:

Letter on Merits of Contest.

"The White House, Washington, Jan. 4, 1908.

To the Secretary of the Navy: "Your predecessor in the Navy Department on December 12, 1907, directed that hospital ships should be treated as floating hospitals, and that each such ship should, therefore, be placed under the command of a medical officer, the navigation being controlled by a competent sailing master. This order was issued after the most careful consideration by the Secretary of the Navy and by the President of all the reasons that could be adduced for and against it.

The case has now been reopened, and the Secretary of the Navy and the President have again listened to and considered all the reasons that could be adduced against putting the order into effect. After the fullest consideration, I have determined that the order is right, and it is hereby confirmed.

"The hospital ships of the navy will hereafter, unless otherwise directed by Congress, be placed under the control and command of medical officers of the navy, their navigation being exclusively controlled by a competent sailing master and civilian crew, the sailing master having the complete responsibility for everything connected with the navigation of the ship.

A Floating Hospital.

"Such a ship is merely a floating hospital. The hospital ship now in question, the Relief, has already been used by the United States army as such. It was then commanded by a medical officer, with a sailing master under him. This arrangement worked well, and it is preposterous to suppose that it will not work as well under a medical officer of the navy as under a medical officer of the army.

"Certain hospital ships in the British, German, Japanese, and Italian navies have already been commanded by medical officers—sometimes fleet surgeons, sometimes Red Cross surgeons. In those navies the only ships of which I have been able to get record were thus commanded; save that in the Japanese navy the hospital ships at the beginning of the late war were commanded by line officers, but were then put under the command of medical officers, to avoid all question of possible breach of neutrality.

"In our own service, at the close of the civil war, by general order of February 6, 1865, hospital transports and hospital boats were placed exclusively under the control of the medical department; the hospital ship on the Mississippi being under the command of a fleet surgeon, with an acting master under him as a navigating officer.

Under Surgeons' Command.

"In the Spanish-American war the hospital ships Vigilance, Relief, Missouri, Bay State, and Olivette were by various orders (Nos. 103, 122, 138, 212, 273, &c.)

Legislators at Albany Are Kept on the Anxious Seat.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 5.—With no plan of action outlined and everybody guessing as to what will be done, the legislature will reconvene to-morrow night. Aside from discussing one prospect of introducing into law any of the measures legislated in his annual message to the legislature, the principal interest centers in the committee chairmanships, which Speaker Wadsworth will announce to-morrow night.

Of the measures recommended by the governor in his message, several will be introduced to-morrow night. Senator George B. Agnew, who introduced similar measures last year for District Attorney Jerome, was on hand with anti-race track gambling legislation. Senator Travis and Assemblyman Green, of Brooklyn, will put in the permissive direct nominations bills.

HARVESTING PECAN CROP.

San Antonio the Center of Important Industry in Nuts.

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 2.—Harvesting of the greatest pecan crop in the history of Texas is rapidly nearing completion, and the returns to the grower are showing up splendid results. P. B. McClurg, of San Saba County, Southwest Texas, showed up one tree that produced 1014 worth of pecans.

This is the record for a single tree, but a yield of $1.00 a tree is profitable, since by planting the trees thirty feet apart, forty-nine trees will grow upon a single acre.

At seven years of age, a grove of pecans will average $1.00 a tree, and during that time the land can be cultivated for other crops. For the next twenty years the crop increases in value at the rate of $1.00 a tree for each year. There are many pecan groves in this section yielding from $300 to $400 an acre.

San Antonio has the largest pecan shipping and shelling firm in the United States and the industry is a thriving one.
