GOTHAM DANCES FOR CHARITY

About Fifteen Thousand Dollars Is Realized at Annual Affair.

Gen. and Mrs. Grant Lead Opening March—Many Prominent Box-holders.

New York, Feb. 4.—The fifty-first charity ball of 1908, given to-night at the Waldorf-Astoria, was one of the most successful of the long series.

Before 10 o'clock the big ball room, with "Charity" in electric lights blazing on the wall opposite the entrance, was filled. At that time, the opening march was led by Maj. Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, and Mrs. Grant, with his staff, all in dress uniforms. There were also officers from the navy yard in their uniforms.

The dancing, which began immediately after the grand march, was kept up until early morning, relays of dancers being added before midnight from the Junior Cotillon on at Sherry's, and other festivities. Cornelius Du Bois chaperoned one of the numerous parties of young people together at the dance, friends of his debutante daughter.

Mrs. Charles A. Doremus, Mrs. Ashton Clark, and Mrs. Charles de Kay were others who had parties with them. The charity of 1907 netted $15,000 for the managers, the receipts being $18,000, and the expenses $3,000. They felt certain to-night of an equally large amount this year for the Nursery and Child's Hospital.

Among those who had boxes were Gen. and Mrs. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. J. Woodford Schler, Mrs. William Mott, Mrs. Edwin H. Weatherbee, Mrs. Alfred Graham Miles, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Berwind, Mrs. Henry A. Alexander, Mrs. Frederick Gallatin, Jr., Mrs. Melbert L. Cary, Mrs. Otis Bulkeley, Mrs. Charles C. Spofford, Mrs. Charles Boughton Wood, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. Chester Beatty, M. C. D. Borden, and Mrs. Van Nest.

Mr. Stuck described his annual journeys through the interior of Alaska on a visit to missions established by him. Stereoscopic views from photographs taken by Mr. Stuck made the lecture complete.

MENU IS DECIPHERED

Dinner to Hawaiians by Members of Congress.

BILL OF FARE MOST UNIQUE

Names of Dishes Unintelligible to English Men of Letters, and Orders Are Given After They Are Properly Analyzed and Translated. Courtesy Shown Americans.

"Aloha." In electric letters a foot high this musical word of greeting from the Hawaiian Islands flashed from the wall of the banquet hall of the Raleigh last evening, where a gay company of men and women were gathered at a "Lulu," or feast, in honor of Prince and Princess Kalaniano'ole, Congressional delegate from Hawaii.

The hosts of the evening were the members of the Congressional party that visited those tropic islands last spring, and were entertained by the Prince and Princess. In memory of the royal time they had on that visit, for which they hold Prince and Princess Kalaniano'ole mainly responsible, these Congressmen and their wives determined to reciprocate, and the treaty of reciprocity surely should have been signed at the close of last night's function.

Members and Their Guests.

There were sixty diners, members of the party, and their guests of honor. There were no other guests, and the dinner soon took on the appearance of a family gathering, such had been the intimacy that had grown between the members of the party on their long voyage to the tropics and return.

Successful efforts had been made to lend a touch of tropical color to the affair. The diners were assembled in the anti-room, and marched into the banquet hall to the barbaric strains of a popular "Indian" song. The tables were laid in the form of an "E," surrounded by palms, and on each chair hung a garland of paper roses, in imitation of the "leis" always worn by the natives of Hawaii at feasts and other festive occasions. Originally in Hawaii the tables were adorned with garlands. Last evening there were smiles also, but the garlands were worn over the conventional black and white evening dress of the men and the delicately tinted gowns of the women.

Representative David, of Wisconsin, introduced Senator Piles, who spoke on behalf of the hosts. Prince Kalaniano'ole responded, and Mr. Cole then took charge of the speech-making, which was all impromptu and jocular in nature.

Analyzing the Menu.

The menu was decidedly unique. All the courses were set down in Polynesian. First, there came the "olepe," which proved to be Pearl Harbor oysters. Then the busy Ganymedes brought steaming plates of "Apu moana o Hialeale." The head waiter tipped off the American names of the dishes to The Washington Herald reporter.

On the tables, which were decorated with potted ferns and roses, were side dishes of the most delicious looking "Pakai o Haleloa, Honoa Ai o Waihiawa, and Kukui o Na Pali" you ever saw. In harsh, abrupt English, celery, pine-apples, and salted almonds would describe this portion of the menu.

Then came the prize wonder of the score card, "Humuhumunukunuuaka-kapua, Nalaka o Manoa," much harder to pronounce than to eat, it proving to be a delicately prepared little sea fish, about two inches long. With it was served some nice "Loloka," merely potatoes a la duchesse. Sweetbreads were served under the alias of "Wai Hui Haleakala," and the little French peas that trailed along with this course had to pass as "Mama Pupunu." The punch was called "Hulihulu, Hilo," the salad chiffonade, "Wain Paka Piau," the ice, "Kopa Kona, Louisloh," the chicken, "Paka ana o Kona," and the little demi tate masqueraded under the heavy handicap of "Konlaukonianika-waiokalamu."

The speeches were of informal character. Representative Davidson, of Wisconsin, introduced Senator Piles, who spoke on behalf of the hosts. Prince Kalaniano'ole responded, and Mr. Cole then took charge of the speech-making, which was all impromptu and jocular in nature.

List of the Guests.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. George B. McFadden, Hon. and Mrs. S. H. Piles, Hon. E. A. Achinstein, Mrs. Piles, Hon. D. B. Alexander, Hon. Arthur L. Bate, Mrs. Thomas Bate, Hon. and Mrs. P. P. Campbell, Hon. and Mrs. W. Wilson.
